Ship Strikers, Chiefs Urged By Roosevelt To Arbitrate

But President Refuses Flatly to Intervene, Mayors Informed.

Cities' Executives Wire Peace Plea

LaGuardia Leads Move; Says Walkouts Differ on Coast, in East.

By Robert C. Albright.

An appeal by the President to shippers and striking maritime unions to "come together" and settle their differences coincided yesterday with proposals for immediate arbitration by mayors of eight East and West Coast cities.

But the President flatly told a delegation from the United Conference of Mayors that "as between this particular strike and whatever effect my visit to South America may have on the peace of the world, the peace of the world is the more important of the two."

Telegram Drafted.

Leaving the White House, eight mayors from seaport cities, led by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, sat down in a hotel conference room here and drafted a telegram to "all sides concerned" in the strike "to submit all their differences to arbitration."

"Upon receipt by us of assurances from all sides to abide by such arbitration, we will immediately request the President of the United States to appoint boards of arbitration, one for the Pacific Coast and one for the Atlantic and Gulf coasts," the telegram read.

LaGuardia explained to reporters that the mayors regard the strike situation on the East and Gulf coasts as "different" from that arising in the West. He said the East Coast mayors will confer again today.

Peace Most Important.

Previously, the President had received a delegation of the mayors at the White House, disclosing in an informal greeting to them that he has virtually decided to attend the Inter-American Peace Conference in Buenos Aires December 1.

"I will know in an hour whether I push off to Buenos Aires tomorrow night or not," the President told them. "I think I am going.

"I see the Mayor of San Francisco looking at me, but this ship strike on the West Coast could go on for a week. It might go on for two weeks, or longer."

It was here the President said that as between the maritime strike and whatever effect his South American visit might have on the peace of the world, he regarded the peace of the world as the more important.

"I hope the ship owners and the men out on strike will recognize that fact and come together," the President added.

Arbitration Urged.

Returning to their hotel headquarters the mayor retired to an upstairs room, and agreed on the arbitration proposal.

"We * * * feel that the seamen's strike has reached such a point that the public interest is not only concerned but materially and substantially damaged," their wire to all factions in the controversy stated.

"To continue the present deadlock will result in irreparable loss to the men, the shippers, merchant marine and to each of our cities.

"We therefore now publicly request all sides in this controversy to submit all their differences to arbitration."

The mayors wired that "during the period of abitration, it is highly desirable that operation of ships be resumed without prejudice to either side."

Speaking for the three Eastern mayors signing the telegram, LaGuardia told reporters they recognized a distinction between the East and West Coast situations.

"We are sending the appeal along with our colleagues of the Western Coast, but we understand fully that before any direct action or arbitration on the Eastern and Gulf coasts is possible that satisfactory arrangements will have to be made for the selection or election of legal representatives of the men on strike. To that end the East Coast mayors will confer again tomorrow."

Denies U. S. Source.

LaGuardia denied to reporters the arbitration proposal was suggested by Administration officials.

Earlier Mayor Angelo J. Rossi urged Secretary of Labor Perkins to use all means at her command for settlement of the Pacific Coast dispute.

Miss Perkins said Rossi asked her if compulsory arbitration is possible, and she replied: "No arbitration can be compulsory." She said Rossi in-

New China General To Battle Invaders

Peiping (Tuesday), Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Gen. Fu-Tso-Yi, commanding the Central Government's forces defending Suiyan Province, has arrived at Hun-Ku-Erh-Tu to assume personal command of the advanced armies attempting to stem an invasion of pro-Japanese Mongol and Manchurian irregulars, according to dispatches today.

The general is fresh from a conference with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, chief power in the Central Government at Nanking, and was said to have instructions to defend Suiyuan "at all costs."

Miners Buy University Club For $275,000 to House Union

Lewis Hints Building May Be Enlarged and Space Rented, but Is Silent on Plans as to C. I. O.

The five-story building at Fifteenth and I streets northwest has passed from the University Club to the United Mine Workers of America.

Now a cloistered retreat where men read, relax or converse in lowered tones, it soon will echo to the booming voices of John L. Lewis, burly and bellicose president of the miners' organization, and his lusty followers from coal fields.

Lewis announced that his national executive committee had purchased the building yesterday. The price, he said, was $275,000.

The University Club, which recently was merged with the Racquet Club, was founded in 1904 by men whose common bond was a college education. Its first president was William Howard Taft, a Yale alumnus, who four years later was to enter the White House.

About that time John Lewellyn Lewis, who had quit school in the seventh grade, was wielding a pick in the mines, but at the same time preparing himself to rise to the top in the United Mine Workers of America.

Some saw in this announcement an indication that Lewis, who has split with the American Federation of Labor, was also preparing a headquarters for the Committee for Industrial Organization. Lewis, however, declined to say whether the purchase of the building was tied up with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The University Club still occupies the building, but is expected to move in the next two weeks to the Sixteenth street home of the Racquet Club, with which it was recently merged.

The headquarters of the United Mine Workers, moved here shortly after the advent of the New Deal, is now in the Tower Building, Fourteenth and K street northwest.

When the miners move into the cloistered atmosphere of the University Club Building, they will be across the street from a structure that has been the scene of some of the most glittering parties in the social history of Washington—the red brick E. B. McLean mansion, now being leased by the Resettlement Administration.

President Lewis, in announcing purchase of the University Club building, conceded that the building would give the miners more space than they needed. But even so, he said, his executive committee later would consider the question of remodeling and enlarging the building.

He pointed out that five more stories could be added to the building without violating the building regulations here. That would make it one of the largest office buildings in the city.

International Finance Data To Be Bared

Morgenthau Plans Complete Report on Exchanges, Investments.

Urges Time Extension of Roosevelt's Power to Devalue Dollar.

The Treasury will focus the limelight of publicity on a hitherto-dark corner of finance within a week, Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, jr., announced yesterday, when a 150-page report, covering the movements of international capital in and out of this country, will be released.

Secretary Morgenthau said "this will be the first time in history that the people whose business is affected by these movements of capital will know what's going on."

Figures to be released will cover daily movements since January 1, 1935, and will be divided into two sections, one for the entire year of 1935 and one disclosing operations for the first nine months of 1936.

The announcement closely followed the President's press-conference discussion Friday of the dangers inherent in possible sudden withdrawals of foreign holdings of American securities, now constituting a factor making for uncertainty in domestic stock and foreign exchange markets.

Collaboration Planned.

The Secretary said he expects to meet with repesentatives of the Securities and Exchange Commission and of the Federal Reserve Board in a few days to collaborate on the studies of the foreign holdings suggested Friday by the President.

He said the study was made because he had "considered it part of my job," to watch daily the movements of foreign holdings. The document will be large in size, and quite a complex, he indicated, saying 35 girls have been working steadily on big counting machines to compile the data.

Sources close to the Secretary said he feared people would attach too much importance to the document, although its release was in the public interest.

Can Keep Exchanges Steady.

Asked if he were not empowered sufficiently at the present time to avert any sudden bounds or declines in the market, the Secretary answered:

"I now have all the tools necessary to keep the exchanges steady."

The totals, while including all sorts of information such as long and short-term holdings, will not be broken down by countries, he added.

The Secretary stated his belief that the President's power to devalue the dollar and the stabilization fund should be re-enacted by the next Congress precisely in their present form, to extend the powers "as long as they see fit." He added:

"With the world situation as it is now it is of tremendous importance to extend these powers."

The powers are slated to expire January 30.

U. S. Is Upheld In Liberty Bond Interest Fight

Taft Loses Claim on Gold Certificate; Rule Affects $8,849,540,000.

By the Associated Press.

A unanimous verdict for the Government was recorded at the Court of Claims yesterday in the suit of Robert A. Taft to compel the United States to pay him $1.07 interest on a gold Liberty bond called in advance of its maturity date.

Potentially affected by the litigation was approximately $8,849,540,000 of gold clause bonds called about the same time by the Government.

A Government spokesman said he expected Taft, son of the former President and Chief Justice, would appeal to the Supreme Court. Taft's home is at Cincinnati.

The litigation grew out of the act nullifying the gold payment promise in contracts.

"This decision goes right down the line for us," the Government spokesman said of the Claims Court's ruling.

Earlier in the day, the Government was granted permission to file a brief with the Supreme Court and participate in arguments in a dispute between the Holyoke, Mass., Water Power Co. and the American Writing Paper Co. of Massachusetts concerning whether the "gold clause" resolution applied to rental contracts.

This case arose from a lease of water rights by the power company to the paper company. The power company now is attempting to collect $28,874 in gold, or its equivalent in devalued currency. It lost in the first Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Government contends the gold resolution was sweeping in its effect.

The Court of Claims ruling, delivered by Judge Littleton, said in part:

"Under the terms of the contract involved in this case and upon the facts of record, we are of opinion that plaintiff is dismissed."

"The United States," the Court of Claims said, "is not liable for interest, except by its expressed consent by statute or contract, and its obligation to pay interest in any case is limited strictly to the terms of the statute or contract providing therefore."

After quoting from the bond, a Treasury Department circular advertising the securities for sale, and a provision of the interest coupon that interest would be paid "unless called for previous redemption," the opinion added, "it seems clear from what has been said that in order for plaintiff to recover it would be necessary for the court to ignore the specific and positive provisions of the contract relating to the matter of interest."

Renewal of U.S. Surety for FHA Bonds Is Urged

Extension of Repair Loans Also May Be Asked in Reassurance Move.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Extension for several years of the Treasury guarantee of principal and interest of Federal Housing Administration debentures beyond next July 1 will be asked by that agency when Congress convenes early next year, it was learned yesterday.

The possibility also exists that extension for another year may be sought for FHA authority to insure modernization and renovation loans. This authority expires April 1, having been twice previously extended. The agency also is preparing several clarifying amendments to its present act.

Consideration of these proposals will form only a part of the program which is expected to be laid before Congress next winter to stimulate housing construction. Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, is engaged in a study of that subject and is expected to have a plan formulated by the first of the year for Government assistance in low-cost housing projects.

Despite the widespread and general recovery, the country is experiencing construction activities still lag behind. Residential building in the last year and a half has increased considerably from earlier extremely low levels, but it remains much farther from the line of normalcy than other activities. Other types of private construction have not gone forward as fast as residential building. Thus some of the durable goods industries continue to lag behind the general forward movement, with unemployment still large in those enterprises.

Skilled Labor Scarce.

High costs remain a deterrent and a new retarding factor reported from some sections of the country is a scarcity of skilled labor in the building trades. This scarcity adds to the cost. As far as index figures are concerned, employment in the building trade unions has returned to the level of 1929.

Of interest in the cost angle was a charge made before the governing board of the Associated General Contractors of America, in session here yesterday and today. The board yesterday heard charges that widespread collusive bidding among groups of specialized sub-contractors in the building trades is making it difficult for general contractors to submit total bids within engineers' estimates in cases where subbids must be taken from those specialized groups in the mechanical trades. The board directed W. A.

Food! Food! Food!
We want food—!

Screaming and howling, at times delighted, at times indignant, an excited mob of Howard University students yesterday tore to shreds the usual peaceful campus atmosphere of the Georgia avenue institute of higher culture as they cried for succor for their reputedly half-starved, hot-dog-fed football team. The team had refused to play Saturday for want of vitamins.

As students struck and picketed classrooms, waving placards such as "We want ham and cabbage for the team!" "Are we mice or men!" and "United we stand!" the day of the great traditional game against Lincoln drew close and the Howard warriors were still undecided whether to go to war.

Howard men who do not, it seems, prefer the frankfurter, were represented by a formal committee, backed up by the alumni, which marched upon the athletic board early last night. An improved diet for the players was demanded, with any diet at all being an acceptable alternative.

Declaring Howard authorities had had the football team's woes laid at its feet many times during recent years and had done nothing about it except raise room rent from $7.50 a month to $10 and boost food costs from $20 to $22.50, the 500 students in the crowd demanded:

Better equipment which would include "jerseys that won't shrink up to the elbows."

A press agent who would see that the team got more favorable press notices. (They've lost every game this year, scores ranging as high as 75 to 0.)

Campus jobs payable in board, the food to be prepared by a dietitian apart from the student board, which was described as "sad."

Last night's news from the strike front was:

Hospital Bandits Get $4,000; Escape In Hail of Bullets

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—Three bandits who dodged a fusillade of bullets from the pistol of the woman superintendent, held up 14 visitors and employes at the Methodist Episcopal Hospital late today and fled with a pay roll estimated between $3,000 and $4,000.

Half a dozen hospital employes, mostly women, were behind the office counter when the gunmen walked in. Eight visitors were seated in the room.

Miss May A. Middleton, 54, superintendent, said each of the bandits was masked by a handkerchief and carried a pistol.

While one guarded the exit, another threatened the employes, and the third scooped up the cash.

Miss Middleton seized her pistol as the bandits fled and fired at them from an open window. The sedan roared away in the dusk as a patrolman dispatched to guard the pay roll arrived at the hospital.

Motorist, Stricken Fatally, Stops Car At Light and Dies

Mrs. Helen E. Willard, 56, of 4211 Seventh street northwest, observed the rules of traffic safety, even to her last breath.

The woman, driving her automobile toward her home, was seized with a heart attack as the light flashed red at Eleventh and Q streets.

Before she lapsed into the coma that preceded death, she pulled her car to the curb.

Physicians at Garfield Hospital pronounced her dead. She was the wife of Clayton Willard, a printer in the Government Printing Office.

Rebels' Shells, Bombs Kill 60, Set 50 Homes Afire in Madrid; Fight Rages in Section of City

Peak Buying At Christmas Forecast Here

Stores Set for Wave of Spending; Big Stocks Purchased.

19 Banks in District to Pay Out $6,258,440 in Savings.

The greatest Christmas shopping season in the history of the city is in store for Washington this year, local department store executives predicted yesterday as 19 District banks announced they will distribute $6,258,440 in Christmas savings checks early next month.

Every department store has completed plans to cope with the greatest wave of spending the city has ever experienced and warehouses are literally bulging with merchandise.

Throughout the Nation merchant chiefs forecast one of the greatest shopping seasons in history—exceeding the boom days of 1928 and 1929—and manufacturers reported they are swamped with orders which they cannot hope to fill by Christmas.

The Christmas shopping season already is under way in Washington. Most of the large stores have stocked their enlarged toy departments with gleaming new novelties. Santa Claus will take charge the day after Thanksgiving.

Prices are hovering around 1935 levels and in some instances are even lower.

Million Dollars Richer.

The local Christmas Savings Club melon—a million dollars richer than last year—will be distributed to 76,307 depositors. The average check will total $82.10.

Throughout the Nation Christmas Saving Club checks totaling $355,000,000 will be distributed.

C. B. Dulcan, general manager of the Hecht Co., said business has been booming here all year. "Our reports for the year up to today," he said, "show the greatest volume in our entire history. The demand has been store-wide, too. Our customers are buying everything from home furnishings to accessories.

"Already the holiday spirit is noticeable in the store. I have never seen anything like it. Everyone seems happy and optimistic.

"Two months ago we laid plans for the biggest Christmas in our history and we are sure our expectations will be more than fulfilled.

Fortunate in Early Orders.

"We are fortunate that we made our preparations in advance. Our buyers are reporting that manufacturers are refusing orders now because they cannot hope to fill those they have on hand before Christmas."

The pre-holiday shopping rush has been felt already at Lansburgh & Bros., James Rotto said. "We have started increasing our sales force," he explained. "This Christmas we will have a larger force than ever before and there is every indication that the coming shopping season will far surpass that of last year, which set a record for Washington.

"Prices have been held down this year and in some instances are lower than they were last year.

"People are buying more freely because those working for the Government seem to have a greater feeling of security in their jobs now that President Roosevelt has been re-elected."

An official of Kann & Sons Co. echoed the optimistic views of the other merchant chiefs and said his store, too, was prepared for the biggest Christmas shopping season in its history.

B. J. Rosenburg, general merchandising manager of Goldenberg's department store, predicted an increase of from 40 to 50 per cent in toy sales.

Series of Terrific Explosions at Plant in St. Chamas Wrecks Group of Buildings, Trapping Workers; Villagers Rush to Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Saint Chamas, France, Nov. 16.—One of France's biggest powder factories blew up today, killing an estimated 35 persons and injuring more than 200.

Local gendarmes, who made the estimate of the casualties, described a series of terrific explosions which shook the entire town and could be heard for 10 miles throughout the countryside.

The first thunderous blast in one of the storehouses sent a column of smoke and flames roaring into the sky.

Before trapped workers in the factory had time to run for their lives, the gendarmes said, a shower of flaming timbers struck the roofs of other storehouses and the factory itself, causing quick successive explosions.

Within a few minutes the buildings were a pile of flaming ruins.

A few of those injured who were not knocked senseless staggered from the burning buildings and collapsd in th arms of villagrs.

Chimneys were knocked down and windows shattered all over the town. The terrified inhabitants rushed to the scene.

Rescuers dug into the wreckage dragging out body after body as the little town was in a few hours turned into one large hospital.

Thousands of volunteers thronged into the town with gendarmes, firemen and detachments of soldiers from nearby bases.

Hundreds of weeping women and children milled about the gates of the factory, where workers dug in the mud and wreckage for bodies. Origin of the blast was unknown.

Roosevelt Talk At Buenos Aires Dec. 1 Arranged

The President Will Address Peace Parley, Pay Visit to Rio de Janeiro.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt last night announced definitely he will go to Buenos Aires for a one-day appearance at the opening session of the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace.

The President's day in brief:

Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, told him but 4,000,000 employable persons aside from professional workers are now unemployed in the country.

Mayors of seaport cities told him the maritime strike has become a national problem.

He held a final meeting of the Cabinet before his departure tonight for Charleston, S. C., where he will embark on the cruiser Indianapolis.

He prevailed on John G. Winant to resume his post as chairman of the Social Security Board at least until the first of the year.

He discussed farm problems with Chester Davis, former AAA administrator and now farm member of the Federal Reserve Board.

He outlined to Waddy Wood, local architect, his ideas for a presidential reviewing stand for the inaugural parade, to be built in early American style.

He rounded off preliminary budget work, which will be resumed immediately on his return.

On the way to Buenos Aires he will stop off at Rio de Janeiro, November 27, spending the day on shore as guest of President Gemlio Vargas, of Brazil.

Makes Speech December 1.

Arriving at Buenos Aires on November 30, he will address the conference of 21 Pan-American countries on December 1 and depart the next day, heading south for Montevideo, Uruguay, for a stay of several hours. He will then return to this country, arriving in Warm Springs, Ga., for a stay of several days, beginning about December 16 or 17.

Earlier in the day the President had told a committee of mayors of seaport cities the maritime strike situation was not a national, but a local problem, while maintenance of peace in this hemisphere was definitely a problem of national importance. He was basing his de-

Chest Reports Week-End Gifts Of $197,744.77

Chairman Jennings Warns of Overconfidence as Goal Is 40% Attained.

Boosted a step nearer their goal by intensive week-end campaign efforts, Washington Community Chest workers, meeting again over luncheon tables at the Willard Hotel, yesterday hailed additional pledges totaling $197,744.77.

This, according to Chairman Coleman Jennings, brings the grand total to $796,904.89, or approximately 40 per cent of the ultimate quota of $1,969,000.

As he announced latest returns to nearly 1,000 campaign workers Chairman Jennings warned of "overconfidence" and urged still greater efforts.

Strenuous Work Ahead.

"Although I am enthusiastic over the work of all campaigners," he said, "I hope none of you will indulge in overconfidence.

"We must realize that the bulk of the larger gifts are already in. We don't want people to be misled by the percentage of our goal attained thus far. We are going to reach our goal only by continued strenuous work and increased gifts."

Citing an example set by locker boys at the Washington Boys Club—who voluntarily increased their donations in spite of low salaries—Herbert L. Willett, jr., campaign director, appealed to other donors to do likewise.

"Remember," he told Washingtonians over a radio hook-up of the National Broadcasting Co., "you are

Police Hunt Thug, 'Lean and Hungry,' After Shop Hold-up

After a nine-hour vigil outside the branch office of a dry-cleaning firm at 814 Fourteenth street northwest, an armed bandit, satisfied that the cash register was well filled, held up three girl clerks at the height of the rush hour yesterday and escaped with approximately $60.

As the robber slipped into the throngs outside the store, the girl clerks followed, shouting "Stop him! Stop him! He's a robber!"

Two companions joined the bandit and the trio fled through an alley, pursued by several men. But at Fifteenth street the fugitives were absorbed in the crowd of home-going workers and disappeared.

"I saw that man outside the store when I opened it at 7 o'clock this morning," said Miss Lillian Jenkins, manager. "I thought he looked suspicious then, and I didn't put my small change in the register until the other girls came to work.

"Every once in awhile throughout the day I would see the man peeking in the window. We were kept pretty busy, but every time I had a chance to look outside I would see him somewhere nearby."

"He was a tall, lean, hungry looking man and I knew he was up to no good when I first saw him," added Miss Jenkins.

Just before 5 o'clock the bandit entered the store, waited until the customers departed and then drew a gun.

"Give me all the money in that cash register, quick," said the bandit, to Miss Ruth Hale.

Miss Jenkins and Miss Kitty Edwards, another clerk, were in the back of the store.

"Don't move," said the bandit, covering them with his gun.

U. S. Will Resettle 20,000 Fish In Big Greenbelt Anglers' Hole

Glen C. Leach, Uncle Sam's chief fish culturist, yesterday outlined plans for a model housing development for bluegills, bass and their brethren at Greenbelt, the Resettlement Administration's project near Berwyn, Md.

While Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell's RA is building accommodations for a mere 1,000 families on the New Deal experimental reservation in nearby Prince Georges County, Chief Culturist Leach of the Bureau of Fisheries, is making residential provisions for 20,000 fishes in Greenbelt's man-made lake.

Already 3,000 have been set out, he said, including the 60 large-mouth black bass, which President Roosevelt admired last Friday when he visited Greenbelt. When the stocking program is completed, the 22-acre lake will abound with crappie, yellow perch, bluegills and catfish.

The large-mouth bass, all adults, will spawn next spring, Leach asserted. The others are expected to lay their eggs in a year or so.

Though the Bureau of Fisheries is installing the lake's first tenants, it will be up to Resettlement to keep them supplied with forage fish. These, in turn, subsist upon minute forms of animal life that populate certain aquatic plants. This means such plants as spiked water milfoil, fanwort and hornwort will have to be introduced.

Such sacrificial fish as milfroach, golden shivers and common minnows will be served up to the bigger fellows.

Hook-and-line fishing will be permitted when a sizable quantity of the like's inhabitants have reached maturity. The Resettlement Administration will lay down the regulations and the angler will have to comply with the Maryland game laws as well.

"It's going to be a dandy fishing hole," said Leach. "The water is ideal and in some places it is 17 feet deep."

Insurgents Mass Tanks to Clear Infantry's Path to Central Area.

150 Hurt as Planes Stage Three Raids

Norwegian Vessel With Food for Loyalists Is Captured by Foe.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid (Tuesday), Nov. 17.—Madrid was aglare early today with bright flames and smoke after a Fascist artillery and air bombardment killed at least 60 persons and set fire to about 50 houses.

Incessant rifle and machinegun fire was heard from University City, in the northwestern corner of Madrid, as defending militiamen tried to fight back insurgents attempting to push into that section from the Cuatro Caminos district.

The Fascists, in a surprise attack, occupied the former British and American Hospital in the Cuatro Caminos district, and government forces opened an intensive attack in an effort to dislodge them.

Many houses in Madrid caught fire from artillery shells, while incendiary bombs set others ablaze.

150 Are Injured.

More than 150 persons were wounded or injured in the shelling and the three air raids of yesterday at 2:30 p. m., 7 p. m. and 8 p. m.

During the third air attack—after nightfall—the insurgent planes loosed bombs on the Atocha Station, near the Parliament Building.

The Fascist attempt to push into University City last night came after the government had declared a small body of insurgents, after penetrating that district within the confines of Madrid proper, had been driven out in a bloody 12-hour battle.

The defense junta declared five insurgent planes had been brought down during the air attacks. Twenty-three government machines flew over Madrid pursuing the 15 raiders.

One bomb fell on a house at No. 7 Villalar street, close to the French Embassy and behind the Associated Press office.

All the houses in the vicinity of those which caught fire were evacuated.

The Trinitarians Church, where the ashes of Miguel Cervantes, famous Spanish writer, lie, was set afire, as was the Jeronimos Church.

Arsenal Is Bombed.

The air ministry reported government planes bombed the railroad station at Fascist-held Salamanca, burning war materials stored there, and an arsenal at Cadiz.

When the Fascist planes bombed the Atocha station, homegoing crowds on the Gran Via, an important business street, scattered for safety into subway entrances as anti aircraft guns spat at the planes. The defenders' tracer bullets slashed the dark sky.

It was the first night raid in several weeks. One insurgent plane crashed in flames when a government gunner scored a direct hit earlier today.

The Defense Junta, admitting that the situation was growing "increasingly difficult in the capital," said there were "sufficient resources to defeat attempts to capture it."

All Madrid's newspapers except those operated by the government will suspend publication because of a newsprint shortage, the Defense Junta said, but some will move to Valencia.

Tanks Massed.

The insurgents massed tanks and infantry troops on the capital's outskirts ready to surge forward as soon as the front line leaders flashed word the way into the city proper had been blasted open.

Explosive shells weighing 200 pounds shrieked into the University City area, under heavy fire all day yesterday from the insurgent field batteries.

(In London, Lloyds announced that the Norwegian steamer Lisken, carrying food to the Spanish government-held city of Valencia, was seized by insurgents warships and escorted to Vigo. The announcement said the vessel had been chartered by the commercial attache of Spanish London Embassy to carry 1,005 tons of potatoes from Dundee to Spain. The cargo, Lloyds said, will be unloaded in the insurgent port tomorrow.)

How far the insurgents had penetrated into Madrid could not be learned, as correspondents were

U. S. Insurance Renewal Urged For FHA Bonds

Extension of Repair Loans Also May Be Asked in Reassurance Move.

Klinger, of Sioux City, Iowa, president of the contractors, to bring about a committee study of the charges.

In October, 78 per cent of the members of the building trades unions had employment, according to the research department of the American Federation of Labor. This is an increase from 53 per cent in October, 1935, and from 35 per cent in October, 1932. In October, 1929, 78 per cent of the members of building trade unions were employed.

These percentage figures, however, are subject to the explanation that many union members in the building trades abandon their union affiliation when they are out of work for a long period, chiefly because of inability to pay dues. Membership figures were not available yesterday, but it is probable that there is more unemployment in the ranks of building trade workers than in 1929—although building slacked off for some months before the depression started.

A recent computation of employment figures made by the National Industrial Conference Board placed the number of those employed in construction activities at 2,841,000 in 1929 and at 2,347,000 last September, thus indicating a substantial employment lag between the two years.

The Associated Contractors' board yesterday reiterated its contention that there is a shortage of skilled labor in construction despite recent denials by Government officials, and ordered a questionnaire survey of the association membership to determine extent of the reported shortage. It took issue with what it said was a ruling by Secretary of Labor Perkins that any workman who uses a hammer, saw or other carpenter tools is to be classified as a skilled carpenter.

Designed as Reassurance.

The decision of the FHA authorities to seek an extension of the Treasury guarantee of their debentures was designed to have a psychologically reassuring effect. Those authorities are convinced that the Treasury guarantee is unnecessary but already some nervousness has developed among financial institutions over the expiration of that safeguard on July 1.

The law now provides that when a default occurs on a mortgage insured by FHA, the latter shall issue to the mortgagee a three-year 3 per cent debenture covering the value of the mortgage, in exchange for the property. The law further provides that "debentures issued in exchange for mortgages insured under this section prior to July 1, 1937, shall be fully guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States," and it further provides that if the amount in the FHA insurance fund is insufficient to pay, when due, the principal or interest of such debentures the "Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the holders the amount thereof, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated." This guarantee applies to all mortgages insured prior to next July 1.

This provision has given to the debentures of the FHA—none of which, incidentally, have been issued—the strength of a Government bond. The FHA insurance fund now totals approximately $15,000,000 and by July 1 it is expected to approximate $20,000,000, out of which any losses that occur will be paid. So far no losses have been recorded.

Speedy Action Sought.

Despite this increasing strength of the FHA, some banks and financial institutions have had their eye on the expiration date of the Treasury guarantee. Since it takes from three to six months to complete the arrangements for the insurance of dwelling projects it is feared that the expiration may have the effect of slowing down new construction under the Federal insurance plan. Consequently an effort will be made to get Congressional consent to the extension as quickly as possible.

Up to November 7, the FHA had insured loans totaling $468,000,000 under Title I of the FHA act, which deals with renovation and modernization loans and $538,000,000 under Title II, the mortgage insurance section of the law. In addition, the agency has insured or is committed to insure loans totaling $43,576,000 for large construction projects.

Of the loans made under Title II, approximately 37 per cent were for new construction. This proportion is rapidly increasing, loans for new construction during the last four months running at the rate of 53 per cent of all loans made. In the District of Columbia, incidentally, 91 per cent of the recent FHA business has been in new construction.

Handling about $75,000,000 of new loans monthly, the FHA at present, it is estimated, is insuring about 25 per cent of the current annual mortgage financing or about one-third of such business handled by financial institutions.

France Soon to Build 51 Small Battleships

Paris, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—The French government plans soon to begin a tremendous naval building program of 51 ships, it was learned tonight.

All will be small vessels, of 40,000 tonnage, designed to balance the fleet. In recent years the French have devoted most of their building to larger craft.

Anxiety Over Foreign Investments Here Recalls Difficulties U. S. Experienced in 1931.

By Franklyn Waltman.

AS A PEOPLE we are reluctant to make the same mistake twice. Thus having suffered the effects of a stock market boom built up in large part on credit, we subjected the use of credit for stock market purposes to rigid control and contentedly sat back believing a safeguard had been established against another disastrous security market boom.

WALTMAN.

In recent months our eyes have been glued to the credit statistics in order to be on guard against a recurrence of what happened in 1928-29. But with virtually no increase in credit extended for the purpose of purchasing securities, the stock market has gone humming along, climbing almost weekly to new price levels for the depression era. Thus it is clear that the market can move forward under an impetus other than that of credit.

In 1931 and 1932 this country went through a terrifying period due to the withdrawal of foreign funds which had accumulated here. That experience put us on guard against the blessings of a shower of foreign gold on us and it is chiefly the memory of that experience which has actuated the current feeling of anxiety over the presence in the American money market of some $7,000,000,000 of foreign funds.

But the present foreign holdings in this country are entirely different from those which were permitted to accumulate here in the 1920s. The latter balances were very largely in the nature of funds kept in this country by foreign central banks and foreign governments. By 1929 these funds totaled in excess of $3,000,000,000. Part of this sum was in the form of deposits in Federal Reserve Banks, in national banks and trust companies and in the hands of private bankers—for the most part in New York, but scattered throughout the country from coast to coast. Part was in the form of acceptances guaranteed by the New York Federal Reserve Bank, or in short-time Government paper, which at that time returned remunerative rates of interest.

Balances kept in these various forms were extremely liquid and available to be cashed practically overnight. They constituted a demand payable in gold at an instant's notice in proportions which were excessive, even when compared with our then large supply of gold in coin and bars.

The potential embarrassment became a real one when England abandoned redemption in gold in September, 1931. Governments and foreign central banks, not only in European countries but elsewhere, had kept a large amount of their reserves divided between New York and London. When London ceased to become available for gold on immediate demand, it suddenly dawned on the Bank of France, the Bank of Belgium and other central banks, along with their governments, having such balances, that gold reserves were only really gold reserves when held in their own vaults in their own country.

The drain on the American market was prompt and of large proportions. During 1931 withdrawals totaled $1,272,000,000, or 40 per cent of the amount on balance here at the end of 1929. In early 1932 another $595,000,000 was withdrawn. Some countries took all their holdings within a week; others graduated their withdrawals over a period of months. The last of the large amounts—that owing to France—was liquidated about the middle of June, 1932. After that gold commenced returning to this country.

These withdrawals between September, 1931, and June, 1932, placed a terrific strain on this country's gold position. But every demand was met. The so-called Glass-Steagall act, making Government bonds eligible as collateral for note issue, was adopted early in 1932 to ease the strain.

Since this country weathered that storm, instrumentalities have been placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury that would enable him to meet such a situation with comparative ease. No longer is it possible to hoard gold—a material factor in the seriousness of that previous situation. Moreover, all gold shipments are now subject to license by the Treasury and may be embargoed overnight.

Furthermore, as has been said, the nature of the present foreign holdings are entirely different. The Commerce Department's studies in the balance of international payments and capital movements show that on June 30 foreign-owned bank balances and other short-term funds totaled but $1,399,000,000, while investments by residents of foreign countries in American securities and other long-term holdings totaled approximately $5,299,000,000.

Holdings of foreigners invested in securities cannot be compared with such concentrated holdings in a few hands of large amounts of cash or securities immediately convertible into cash by guarantee of the Federal Reserve system or by ability to sell short-time Governments in the market, as was the situation prior to 1932.

'Ousted Once,' Lewis Rejects A. F. of L. Truce

Spurning invitations to return to the American Federation of Labor fold and take seats at the Tampa convention except on a basis of "equal rights," President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers said yesterday the Committee for Industrial Organization considers it already has been "expelled" from the federation.

Lewis said President William Green of the A. F. of L. must have spoken "humorously" in Tampa yesterday when he invited "rebel" unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization to "come back and take their seats" in the federation's annual convention.

"We think we are expelled from the federation now," the shaggy-browed Lewis told newspapermen. "The executive council's suspension order was tantamount to expulsion, so I don't understand all of this backing and filling at Tampa."

Giving reporters the impression he is courting formal expulsion, Lewis said that "if they were right in the first place in suspending us, then they should expel us."

Something Stimulating.

"Mr. Green should eat and drink something stimulating at Tampa, so he can follow through logically on his original action," he added.

Green, at the Tampa convention yesterday, had called on the C. I. O. members to attend the A. F. of L. annual meeting "and take their seats with us and fight out our differences in manly fashion at conventions of American Federation of Labor."

Earlier Green had insisted that the ten C. I. O. member unions, suspended last August on a charge of "insurrection," must abandon their Committee for Industrial Organization before peace could be made.

Informed here of the Green statement, Lewis replied heatedly:

"If they want us at Tampa and want to lift the suspension order so we can go down to Tampa as peers of the gentlemen, that will be another matter."

Cites Lack of Credentials.

If the suspension order is lifted, Lewis told reporters, "you can come back and see me again."

"If Mr. Green was not being humorous," the leader of the mass industrial unionization forces said, "why didn't he give us credentials."

Meantime, Green, who is a member of the federation by virtue of his membership in the United Mine Workers, is facing a review and possible expulsion by the Mine Workers' executive committee tomorrow on charges his actions have been "injurious and detrimental" to the union.

Lewis said he preferred to call it a "review" of the actions of Green, rather than a "trial" of the federation president. He said the committee "may or may not issue a cease and desist order" against Green.

Has Jurisdiction.

Asked if the committee had authority to expel Green from membership, Lewis said the committee has "original jurisdiction" in such cases, and can assess penalties.

He said he anticipated no penalizing action prior to possible issuance of a cease and desist order.

A reporter asked if there would be "one less member of the United Mine Workers" after tomorrow.

"I wouldn't say so," replied Lewis.

Lewis introduced P. H. Van Gelder, of the Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, now affiliated with the C. I. O., who outlined plans for a drive to recruit 60,000 additional members in private shipyards, naval shipyards and repair docks.

Van Gelder said the union, which now boasts only 15,000 members, and never received a charter from the A. F. of L., is demanding a minimum rate of $1 an hour for mechanics and a 36-hour week. He said the organization would not conflict with existing maritime unions except possibly in the repair docks.

Green yesterday laid the quarrel with Lewis' insurgent unions before the Tampa convention, but urged the 485 delegates to consider other issues of greater importance, according to Associated Press.

"If you don't want me to obey convention instructions, then don't elect me as your president," he shouted.

Gun in Russell Case 'Not Fired,' Officer States

Hunt for Fatal Weapon in Morris Estate Shooting to Be Pressed.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 16.—Capt. Clyde Plummer of the District Attorney's office said tonight the pistol discovered in the lap of Reid Russell, when his body was found in the yard of Gouverneur Morris' Manhattan beach home, September 25 appeared not to have been fired recently.

Plummer said he might ask that Russell's body be exhumed to determine if the bullet that killed him was of the same caliber as the pistol.

He announced he had learned that guests at the Morris home had engaged in target practice with .22 caliber rifles recently.

Morrises Leave for Visit.

At the conclusion of several days' inquiry into the death of their guest, Mr. and Mrs. Morris prepared to leave by plane this evening for the ranch of friends near Fresno, Calif., where they said they planned a visit.

Standing on the spot where Russell's body was found, Capt. Plummer today twice fired a pistol into a dirt-filled bushel basket.

Assistants combed the long grass for the ejected shells. They found both.

Russell's body was discovered in a lawn swing, since removed. In his lap lay a .32-caliber pistol. There was a bullet hole in his head.

Same Type of Gun.

The gun used by Plummer was similar to that found in Russell's lap.

In the basket were found the bullets Plummer fired. Plummer said, however, that although the basket and contents represented the approximate solidity of a human head, he attached no great significance to the fact that the projectiles did not pass through the basket.

The chief result of the tableau, he said, was the finding of the empty cartridges.

Plummer quizzed John Tony Mumolo, gardener at the home of Morris, the novelist, at length. Mumolo discovered Russell's body about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. He apparently had died early that morning or the night before.

"It is very strange," said Plummer, "that no one found the body until the following day."

Rite Tomorrow For M. W. Hayes, U. S. Flood Aide

Chief Meteorologist of Weather Bureau Noted for Work in Field.

Dr. Montrose W. Hayes, chief meteorologist and head of the river and flood division of the central office of the United State Weather Bureau here since 1929, died of pneumonia yesterday afternoon in his residence, 2205 California street northwest. He was 62 years old and had been ill but a short time.

A native of Charlotte, N. C., Dr. Hayes entered the Weather Bureau as an observer in 1892. Shortly after the end of the War with Spain he aided in organization of the hurricane service in the West Indies, where he served at Havana, Cuba, from January, 1899, until July, 1902.

Dr. Hayes was engaged in organizing the National Weather Forecasting Service in Argentina from 1904 until 1906. Later he was in charge of various Weather Bureau offices. His longest service was in St. Louis from 1910 until 1929.

He became nationally known in the field of the river and flood forecasting for the Mississippi and other rivers in that area while stationed in the Missouri metropolis.

As head of the river and flood division here, he had played a leading role in increasing efficiency of that bureaus' work.

A thorough theoretical knowledge of both meteorology and hydrology were combined by Dr. Hayes with the practical application of that knowledge in flood forecasting.

Dr. Hayes was a member of the Anchor Lodge of Masons, in St. Louis. Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Marie L. Hayes, and a son, Montrose Hayes; a daughter, Miss Idelia A. Hayes; a sister, Miss Lilly Hayes, and a brother, Dr. William Hayes, all of High Point, N. C.

Masonic funeral services will be held tomororw at 4 p. m. at Lee's chapel, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Missionary Denies Japanese Outrage

Kalgan, Hopeh Province, China, Nov. 15 (A.P.).—Mrs. Karl Bernhardt Olsen, American missionary, whose husband died yesterday of smallpox, today denied reports that Japanese troops took over the mission and left her husband ill and without shelter.

They were forced to leave their home, she stated, because of conditions "for which the Japanese were partly responsible. But they had not occupied our property up to the time we departed."

The United States Embassy yesterday sent a delegation to investigate conditions in North China after reports of the death of Olsen, once resident of Gully, Minn.

Advices from Shotzeshan stated the Rev. and Mrs. A. Braham Wiens, of Dinuba, Calif., were safe and unmolested. They had been reported as kidnaped.

Third Victim Dies In Crash as Wife Rushes to Bedside

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Death of three persons wrote "finis" today to a skyways drama that saw an airplane crash in a snowstorm at night and a wife defeated in her air race against time to reach the bedside of her dying husband.

The victims were:

Miss Priscilla Murphy, 16-year-old Brookline, Mass., school girl and amateur pilot who burned to death when an airplane crashed on a highway last night 15 miles southwest of Syracuse a few minutes after taking off from Amboy Airport after a refueling stop.

Henry Nadeau, 45, of Nashua, N. H., who chartered the plane in an effort to reach International Falls, Minn., to visit his father.

John H. Shobe, veteran Boston pilot, who guided his plane through a night snowstorm from Boston to Syracuse, but crashed after stopping to refuel and check weather reports.

Both Nadeau and Shobe died today, Shobe succumbing a few minutes less han an hour before his wife arrived by regular transport plane in a futile effort to reach her husband before he died.

Greyhound Moves For Consolidation

By the Associated Press.

Applications proposing to consolidate 19 subsidiary Greyhound bus lines into six operating systems were filed yesterday with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The mergers, advanced for widespread economies of operation, include Atlantic Greyhound Corporation, Atlantic Greyhound Lines of Virginia, East Coast Stages, Inc., and Safeway Transit Co., Inc., to be merged into the Atlantic Greyhound Corporation of Charleston, W. Va.

Elevator Shaft Plunge Fractures Man's Ankle

Thomas Fealy, 22, of 1618 B street northeast, elevator operator in the Standard Oil Building, Second street and Constitution avenue northwest, escaped with a fractured ankle yesterday, when he fell down a shaft.

Building attendants said the youth slipped and fell through an open door from the first floor to the basement—a distance of about 10 feet. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Roosevelt Plans To End PWA, Farley Avers

Liquidation to Be Made as Soon as Business Conditions Admit, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 16.—United States Postmaster General James A. Farley said it was his "personal opinion" that the Roosevelt Administration would liquidate the Works Progress Administration as soon as business improvement reduced unemployment.

"As industry improves, providing additional employment," he said, "my personal opinion is that the Administration, as quickly as it can, will turn the unemployed back to the States, towns and counties.

"There probably will be Federal help, but I am satisfied they'll clear up the WPA as soon as they can."

Farley delivered his opinion at a press conference after he disembarked at Southampton to start his planned vacation in Ireland. His future plans, Farley said, included a call on President Eamon de Valera of the Irish Free State in Dublin, and in general "doing everything I'm supposed to do."

The Postmaster General said he was tired after the rigors of the recent Presidential campaign and felt he needed a rest.

Asked whether he would "go off the Federal pay roll" after the first of the year, Farley replied:

"It's hard to differentiate between political and official work."

Southampton, Nov. 16 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley reached here today and predicted a prosperity for the United States "greater than anything we ever have known." He said the boom even would surpass that of 1929 "because the country will be built on a sound foundation."

Farley is en route to Ireland for a holiday.

'Reno-vized' Law Brings 2,391 Suits In Past 14 Months

The District's newly "Reno-vized" divorce law is proving a welcome innovation to harassed husbands and wives, according to a survey of court records just completed by Jean M. Boardman, member of the District bar and a specialist in matrimonial troubles.

In a study of the official minutes of the court dating back to the first day of operation of the new law, Mr. Boardman found that there had been a total of 2,391 "matrimonial suits" filed. These were divided into absolute divorces, 1,667; limited divorces, 450; annulments, 105; maintenance, 162, and custody of minor children, 7.

In another classification Mr. Boardman found 906 absolute divorces were granted from August 8, 1935 (date of approval of the new law), to October 31, 1936; that there were 78 limited divorces (which can be enlarged into absolute divorces in two years); 37 annulments, and 39 maintenance suits.

The attorney found 541 decrees were granted for desertion of over two years' duration; 168 were granted for separation of more than five years; 164 for adultery; 11 for conviction of felonies, and 22 limited decrees were enlarged into full divorces.

Foreign Nations Invited To Expositions in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday issued two proclamations inviting the participation of foreign nations in the World's Fair at New York City and the Golden Gate International Exposition at San Francisco, both to be held in 1939.

The New York fair will celebrate the 150th anniversary of the inauguration of the First President of the United States and of the establishment of the National Government in the City of New York.

The San Francisco exposition will commemorate the completion of the San Francisco-Oakland Bridge and the Golden Gate Bridge and will depict the progress and accomplishments of the Pacific Coast area in science, industry, business, transportation and culture.

Howell Son to Control Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta, Nov. 16 (AP).—The will of Clark Howell, sr., offered for probate today, disclosed that his son, Maj. Clark Howell, jr., will have control of the Atlanta Constitution.

The document showed that Maj. Howell bought his father's stock in the newspaper prior to the latter's death, making the son the majority stockholder.

Streamline Turkeys 'Bred Down' to Oven Size Will Please Cook, but How About the Family?

Streamlined turkeys, developed by diligent poultrymen, will be on the market for Thanksgiving this year, it was learned yesterday at a preliminary meeting of the Seventh World Poultry Congress at the Raleigh.

The streamlined turkey is a bird designed to slide easily into the small modern ovens found in microscopic city kitchenettes. The turkey industry, ably abetted by the Government, has been working on the problem for several years and the new models are now ready.

Tom turkeys that used to average 20 pounds can now be had weighing down to 15 pounds, and hens that once averaged 14 have been reduced (not through diet, ladies) to 10 pounds.

It was purely a breeding problem, explained O. A. Hanke, of the Poultry Tribune.

A Matter of Breeding.

"It involved the selection of lighter-weight stock and gradually producing a strain by close breeding that brought the weight down. Light birds which matured early were mated with others with similar characteristics until we got the turkeys down to a size modern housewives could get into their small ovens," says the Tribune.

Much of the experimentation was carried on at Beltsville, in nearby Maryland, a Government farm devoted to improving all kinds of domestic stock. Private breeders were also hard at work on the problem.

Turkeys will be low in price this year because there are 5,000,000 more on the market than a year ago, a poultry congressman declared. There are no grounds for the Attorney General's investigation of monopolistic practices on the buying end of the business just because prices are down, he said.

"There will be 20,000,000 turkeys on sale this season," he said. "Last year there were only 15,000,000. Right there lies the whole explanation of low prices.

"There is no conspiracy against turkey raisers to beat down prices."

Reasons Cited.

Asked how he accounted for the terrific increase in the turkey population, he replied:

"The industry now can hatch turkeys with incubators. Formerly they were a very difficult fowl to rear, susceptible to early death from many causes. But artificial raising, with all hazards scientifically reduced to a minimum, has increased the stock tremendously.

"Another factor was the great profit formerly made by turkey men. When one farmer noticed that another was getting big money for turkeys, he started raising them, too. The peak of this expansion movement was reached this year.

"Virginia is the biggest turkey State in the East. The largest of all is Texas, with Minnesota, North Dakota, California and Kentucky also producing great numbers."

Talking turkey was incidental to the main business of the gathering, which is laying plans for the 1939 Poultry Congress, to be held in the United States at the request of Congress through the President.

Exhibits Huge Size.

Last year in Leipzig, Germany, exhibits covered 20 acres. The delegates here were doubtful that any city in the United States could house the show. Representatives from New York, Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Syracuse, and other cities were frantically bidding yesterday to get it.

Paul Mandeville, chairman of the meeting, said that in 1935 poultry ranked third in agricultural income for the United States, with a gross income of $900,000,000. Only dairy products and cattle outrank chickens in agricultural importance in this country.

W. D. Termohlen, chief of the Agriculture Department poultry section, was designated as contact-man between the Government and the industry for the huge show. The last one on this continent was at Ottawa, Canada, and was attended by the Prince of Wales, now King Edward VIII.

Flynn, Lili Damita Will Be Divorced

Hollywood, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Clash of "artistic temperaments" tonight apparently had wrecked the romance of adventure-hunting Erroll Flynn, Irish actor, and society-bound Lili Damita, after a year and a half of married life.

A spokesman for the actor at Warner Brothers, where the pair worked in films, said Miss Damita and her lanky, handsome husband had separated and "a divorce action will be filed."

Independent Office Fund Is Facing Reductions

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—A reduction by the Seventy-fifth Congress in appropriations for independent Federal offices was forecast here today by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), chairman of the subcommittee on appropriations for independent offices, which usually recommends a $1,000,000,000 administrative expenditure.

He said the subcommittee's hearings will begin in Washington December 2, and that "we're going to use the pruning knife."

It is Woodrum's hope the bill will be ready to present when Congress convenes January 4.

3 Killed, 18 Injured In Syrian Street Riots

Beirut, Syria, Nov. 16 (AP).—Three persons were killed and 18 injured in street fighting, it was announced today after an all-night riot allegedly provoked by opponents of the new treaty between France and Lebanon. Street cars were overturned and automobiles destroyed.

Officials accounts said Moslems celebrating the Ramadan, Moslem holy day, were aroused by agitators against the new treaty. Troops were called to stop the fighting.

Lady Barber Busy At $5 Per Shave

Bethel, Alaska, Nov. 16 (AP).—The "sourdoughs" of this Alaskan village of 20 whites and 200 natives can get "store" shaves now—if they have $5 and can overlook the crowds of curious natives who invariably cluster about the chair to watch the performance.

Alice Foresgren, 22-year-old Bismarck, N. Dak., operator, opened a combined barber and beauty shop.

The white settlers keep her busy administering the first professional shaves and haircuts many have had in years. Most of her business, however, is in permanent waves for native belles.

Dog and Cat Foods Lose Federal Label

By the Associated Press.

The Agriculture Department yesterday removed the Federal meat inspection label from prepared dog and cat foods, reserving that stamp for foods "intended for human consumption."

The action recalled that Senator Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, charged in the Senate last spring that "the scarcity" farm program of the administration had forced poor people to a diet of dog food "unfit for even dogs to eat."

Edward C. Joss, chief of the Federal meat inspection service said he did not know of "a single instance" in which humans used canned dog food but said all the meat by-products and other ingredients were pure and clean.

The change was said to be intended to inform the public that inspection had not included various ingredients with which the meat has been combined in the animal food.

Law Drafted to Oust Needy Aliens in U.S.

By the Associated Press.

Legislation to clip immigration quotas by 90 per cent and deport all aliens on relief was being drafted yesterday by Representative Starnes (Democrat), Alabama, of the House Immigration Committee.

Deportation of "foreign gangsters and spies now sheltered by flaws in the immigration statutes" also would be provided in his bill, Starnes said.

His proposal would reduce the annual number of immigrants from 153,000 to 15,000, and would set aside 75 per cent of the remaining entry permits for foreigners seeking to join their families already established here.

Quotas would be established for Mexico and Canada, to check "almost unrestricted movements" across the Nation's land borders."

Farmer Killed in Tunnel By Train at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 16 (AP).—Edward C. Shoemaker, 68, of Paw Paw, W. Va., farmer, was found dead in the Indigo Tunnel of the Western Maryland Railroad.

County officials said he apparently had been struck by a train and they would hold no inquest.

Ham for Team, Student Strike Cry at Howard

by Football Coach Harry Payne and Basketball Coach John Burr, and then debated whether the Lincoln game on Thanksgiving Day shall be played.

(The regular meeting of the board of athletic control tonight must be advised if the game is to be played so that preparations and promotional work may be started. Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, who is returning from Indianapolis, must have a report from the board on the strike tonight.)

The team and the student organization also are debating whether they shall deliver an "ultimatum" or "petition" or seek a conference with the university trustees and administrators. This must be decided by noon today.

The executive committee of the board of trustees is meeting Friday and probably will study the question of an increased budget for the remainder of the football season.

At the demonstration yesterday the men students howled that they were getting a raw deal from the school administration. Camels - hair coats, high-crowned and curly brimmed hats, brogue shoes and briar pipes were everywhere. The co-eds were just as vociferous.

"Theoretically we are here to learn how to think," one bespectacled young academician explained, "but the philosophy of the consideration is somewhat ambiguous. We require that the administrative authorities forsake thier—shall we say—ultra-conservative accounting methods, and appropriate more larger sums to the sustenance of the players and less to the permanent sinking fund, which has expanded beyond all reasonable necessities."

That, in a nutshell, is the complaint of the students, although the majority expressed it in the more succinct "We want food!"

The players themselves dined as usual on hot dogs, cherry sodas, or perhaps a juicy hunk of sweet-potato pie decorated with chocolate blanc mange, at the corner grocery store at 5 cents a hunk. The star tackle enjoyed a repast of toast and coffee for his noonday meal, on a borrowed dime.

Anxious to Play Lincoln.

Unapologetic for having deserted the playing field Saturday just before the game with Virginia Union University, because they were "too hungry to get in there and battle those big country boys full of ham and kale," the Howard team to a man is anxious to square off against ancient enemy Lincoln, but they feel they cannot properly do so until they are fed.

Seeking to observe a typical Howard team diet, a reporter asked one player "Where does the team usually eat?"

"We don't," was the terse answer.

However, the strikers broke up at noon for lunch and went to the University Grill, which is like any small collegiate public rendezvous, only more so.

Inside were co-eds flashing smiles, players munching candy and hot dogs, and undergraduates, freed from school, pounding their heels on a shaking floor as they hoofed to the latest chansonnette from the great god Calloway.

At the gymnasium a long lean player whose clothes hung loosely on his spare frame was asked what kind of a diet would be satisfactory. He replied:

"Well, if we just had a training table like Hampton, for instance. We played them this year and ate at their table, and they had nice juicy pot roast, milk, potatoes, kale, and peaches for lunch. For breakfast they gave us cornflakes, bananas, eggs boiled or scrambled, toast, ham and milk.

"Now that's something like. Lots of us don't have hardly anything to eat, and the boys that don't have enough can't even get jobs waiting on table because the dining hall people say they don't want waiters that're always running off somewhere to play football.

"The team is mostly made up of freshmen. That's 'cause everybody quits after the first year. They have to get work to eat and got no time for football.

"Now this Lincoln team we play Thanksgiving Day, they got a training table and eat good. We were up against them last year at Atlantic City and saw what they had to eat. All the fellows want to play in this game. It's a big traditional game, but dawgone, we can't play if we don't get something to eat."

Engagement Announced

BUDDY ROGERS.

Buddy Rogers, Mary Pickford Wed in Spring

Former's Father Announces Engagement in Kansas After Phone Call.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Nov. 16.—The persistently rumored and frequently denied romance between Mary Pickford and Charles "Buddy" Rogers crystallized tonight in informal announcement of plans for a wedding in the spring.

Available records give 43 years as the age of Miss Pickford, "America's sweetheart" of the silent screen. Rogers, orchestra leader and screen player, is 32.

An early morning telephone call halfway across the continent brought the first confirmation of reports that have bobbed up almost constantly since Miss Pickford's marriage to Douglas Fairbanks ended in divorce.

The call was from Pickfair, the rambling, hilltop home of Miss Pickford, to Olathe, Kans., Rogers' hometown.

Judge Bert Rogers, father of the actor, said "Buddy" telephoned, talked at random for a moment, then asked for his mother.

"He asked her if we could take the plane to Hollywood Tuesday," the judge said. "She wanted to know if anyone was ill. He said, 'No, wait. I'll have someone else tell you.'"

Then Miss Pickford's voice rippled across 1,500 miles of wire and broke the news.

Later in the morning, in Hollywood, Rogers gave the same noncommittal answers to newspapermen he has been giving in the year or more since his name first was linked with Miss Pickford's.

But the actress ended all doubt. "The announcement will be made at a small reception to be held on the arrival of Mrs. Rogers next Friday," she said.

Miss Pickford has been married twice; Rogers not at all.

Her first husband was Owen Moore, motion-picture actor. She divorced him at Minden, Nev., March 2, 1920. Three weeks later, she married Fairbanks.

12 Women Plan Flight To Argentine for Peace

A delegation of 12 prominent women will fly November 28 to the Buenos Aires Peace Conference as representatives of the committee for the people's mandates to governments to end wars, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the committee, will lead the delegation. In the party will be Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York; Countess Alain de Pierrefeu; Mrs. E. W. Frost; Mrs. Lionel Sutro; Mrs. Albert Lytle Deane, Mrs. C. L. Reynolds, of this city; Miss Margaret Forsyth and Miss Eve Garrette.

Judge Orders 'Moses' Sent Back to Mother

Covington, La., Nov. 16 (AP).—Judge Robert D. Jones ordered welfare workers today to return Moses, the mysterious baby of the Pearl River backwoods, to his mother despite the "misguided and errant" circumstances of the child's birth.

The baby at present is in New Orleans Charity Hospital suffering from a cold. Judge Jones said his decree should be carried out "as soon as physical conditions will permit."

2 Bodies Found In Va. Believed D. C. Man, Wife

Murder, Suicide Is Theory Advanced by Attorney at Charles City.

By the Associated Press.

Charles City Courthouse, Va., Nov. 16.—The bodies of a man and woman, believed to be those of Marion Scott Carr, of Washington, and his estranged wife, were found on an old sawmill trail 10 miles from here late today.

Two colored men reported the discovery, and Richmond police began an investigation.

The man was in the driver's seat of an automobile bearing Richmond and Virginia license tags. Six feet from the right side of the car was the body of the woman. A few feet from her body was a .32-caliber pistol from which three bullets had been fired.

Shirt Bloodstained.

The man's body was upright in the car, his head thrown back against the seat. There were blood-stains on the left front of his shirt. The woman's body bore cuts on the wrists, arms and neck.

Authorities found a letter addressed to M. S. Carr in a pocket of the car. They believed the bodies were those of Mr. and Mrs. Carr, who disappeared November 8, en route to church in Richmond.

Carr, who moved to Washington several weeks ago from Richmond, had returned to the Virginia city in an effort to effect a reconciliation with his wife.

Mrs. Catherine Wehler, mother of the missing woman, told Richmond police young Carr, 28, and his wife, 24, left for church together from her home in Carr's father's automobile Sunday a week ago. They have not been seen since. The license numbers on the machine in which the bodies were found were the same as those of the car in which the couple disappeared.

J. Alfred Tyler, Charles City County Commonwealth's attorney, said after a preliminary examination that he felt certain "it is a case of murder and suicide, although I don't know which person did the killing. It appears that the man choked the woman to death and then shot himself."

Customs Sharpshooters From Texas Win Morgenthau's First Marksmanship Test

For two years now, Treasury Department law enforcement officers have been learning how to shoot from the hips, straight and true.

It was a little idea of Secretary Morgenthau's—he thought his agents should know their bull's eyes.

Came yesterday—the final tests on how well the embryo marksmen had learned their lessons.

It was cold and blustery out at Camp Simms. The methodical crack of pistol shots echoed across the barren target range—or maybe it was chattering teeth.

Anyway, Uncle Sam's agents—customs, alcohol, secret service—went at their targets with a vengeance. Those Coast Guard fellows (considered as the better type of marksmen), who acted as instructors, weren't going to get away with all the glory.

When the smoke cleared away, scores were counted. To come out with perfect records, the agents had to score 900.

Customs Men Win.

Next came the Seattle Customs Patrol team with 756.

And last, but not least, Washington's own White House police force (cheers and applause) with 723. They represented the secret service—other teams in this Treasury unit having been eliminated in the semifinals.

There was but one surprising upset in the whole affair. The customs patrol team from Puerto Rico came in fourth. Down where they come from, the marksmen explained, the weather is now nice and mild—nothing like it was out there on that target range.

And when they did their shooting to qualify for yesterday's finals, the weather was on their side and they scored the highest of any contesting team.

Narcotics Men Absent.

The only unit not represented at yesterday's shoot was narcotics—they couldn't qualify.

As a reward for diligent efforts to improve their marksmanship, Secretary Morgenthau invited members of the highest scoring teams to come to Washington and shoot it out—he thought two years of practice was enough to bring results.

So today at 11 a. m., the Secretary will present awards.

The local boys who made good in third place for the White House police were J. J. Cash, R. G. Ford and R. F. Hallion. The teams represented 16 enforcement districts under the Treasury Department.

Morality Angle Of Stork Derby Argued in Court

Counsel for Millar's Kin Charges Illegitimacy Was Encouraged.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Nov. 16.—Counsel for relatives seeking to break the will of Charles Vance Millar charged today the clause providing for the $500,000 "stork derby" in reality encouraged the birth of illegitimate children, and asserted that therefore the will should be ruled against the public order and invalid.

In a hearing before Justice W. E. Middleton, Attorneys I. F. Hellmuth, Gordon Lawr and Peter White, representing different groups of Millar relatives who seek to upset the will, said there could be no doubt Millar deliberately worded his last testament so that the mothers of illegitimate children would be eligible.

One claimant to the stork derby prize has admitted five of her children were born after she separated from her husband.

Half a dozen of stork derby mothers stared fixedly at the three lawyers today as they in turn called the contest vicious, degrading and revolting.

The hearing was a continuation of one begun ten days ago to determine to whom the money should be paid.

W. E. N. Tilley, counsel for the executors, read affidavits made by the Rev. Charles Sileox, secretary of the Social Service Counsel of Canada, and Dr. W. B. Hendry, Toronto obstetrical specialist, which declared their belief the contest was not in the public good.

"I cannot permit a wide open general inquiry," Justice Middleton remarked. "It would be scandalous." However, he did not make a decision about admission of the affidavits.

Tilley contended at one point today that the clause did not admit illegitimate children. Counsel for the Millar relatives, however, contended the opposite was the case.

They admitted that usually in the interpretation of wills a gift to children is taken to mean to legitimate children. Gordon Lawr, representing Millar relatives, said Millar, a lawyer, had realized this and deliberately sought to get around it by making the bequest to mothers, not to children.

Collusive Bids Charges Made By Contractors

Special Committee Ordered to Investigate Alleged Agreements.

Charges of widespread collusive bidding among groups of "specialized subcontractors" in the building trades were made yesterday at the opening session of the two-day meeting of the governing board of the Associated General Contractors of America, at the Willard Hotel.

Various speakers told the board the practice was making it difficult for general contractors to submit bids within engineers' estimates of costs in cases where sub-bids are taken from these specialized groups in the mechanical trade.

W. A. Klinger, of Sioux City, Iowa, president of the association, was directed by the board to appoint a special committee to study the question of subcontractors' relationships, with special attention to the charges of collusive bidding, and to report its findings at the eighteenth annual convention of the association, early next year.

The board instructed the association's national office here to offer its service, advice and information in labor agreement negotiations to any chapters and branches so desiring.

This was a distinct departure from the organization's traditional policy of isolation in the negotiation of its members' wage and working agreements.

New Farm Program Mapped by Tugwell

By the Associated Press.

Associates of Rexford G. Tugwell, Resettlement administrator, said yesterday he had shaped a proposed long-time Federal farm tenant program calling for a $50,000,000 annual expenditure.

They also said the New Deal agency had made a start on a "demonstration tenant-security project" in ten Southern States, under which 1,000 tenant families will be given a chance to acquire their own homes from the Federal Government.

Tugwell's spokesmen suggested this program, which they said would be in full swing by spring, could serve as a pattern for the largest Nation-wide plan. The latter is expected to come up for attention at the coming session of Congress.

Jury Quizzes O'Brien Again About Shooting

Gang Victim and Companion Ordered to Tell 'Who, When and Why.'

Joseph E. O'Brien, who refused last week to testify before the grand jury, was taken into the District grand jury room again yesterday afternoon. Specific orders had been issued him by Justice Peyton Gordon to tell who shot him July 21, when, police say, he was "put on the spot" in the 200 block of Second street southeast.

Justice Gordon ordered O'Brien and Harry (Spike) Behrle, his companion at the time of the shooting, to say who did the shooting and to tell the time and place.

O'Brien was wounded so severely that his life was despaired of for a time. He will be crippled for life. Members of the notorious "Rags" Waring gang were sought in connection with the shooting, and six men, suspected of complicity, have been arrested and are awaiting the outcome of the inquiry.

Use of Diet to Prolong 'Prime Of Life' Is Studied by Scientist

A Columbia University professor's nutritional experiments on rats have produced results which indicate proper diet may prolong "the period of the prime" in human beings and postpone their so-called "second childhood," according to the Carnegie Institution.

The experimenter is Dr. Henry C. Sherman, Mitchell professor of chemistry at Columbia and research associate of the Carnegie Institution. He is conducting the study in his campus laboratory.

He used two diets in feeding families of rats in large numbers through successive generations. Diet A, consisting of whole wheat, dried whole milk, salt and water, was adequate to support normal growth. Diet B, however, gave better results. It contained an increased proportion of milk, thus adding to the calcium, protein and vitamins A and G content.

The superior formula, Dr. Sherman found, "expedited growth and development, resulted in a higher level of adult vitality, as shown by several criteria, and extended the average length of adult life, or improved the life-expectation of the adult."

Rats fed this diet reached an age corresponding to 70 to 77 years in human beings.

"In these experiments," the scientist reported, "development is expedited and senility deferred in the same individuals, so that what, for lack of a better term, we may call 'the period of the prime,' is extended in greater ratio than the life-cycle itself.

"Thus in typical cases the same degree of incipient senility which is reached by normal individuals on Diet A at an age corresponding to about 65 years in the human life is deferred on Diet B to an age corresponding to 75-80 years."

First Lady Gives Theory of Living

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP).—The daily philosophies of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt were given tonight by the latter in a forum lecture at the Sinai Temple.

That is the President is, she said:

"Each day must be lived. You must accept what comes. Do what you think is right or best. Decide what must or should be done—and cease worrying."

As to her own philosophy, she said slowly in answer to a question from the audience:

"Don't know that I have a philosophy—but if I have, it would resolve itself into an effort not to make anybody suffer unnecessarily."

Aim of NRA Vital To U. S., Say Roper

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Roper said last night in a radio talk that the objectives of the national industrial recovery act should be pursued anew with the Government taking a hand if voluntary co-operation failed to attain the goal.

Declaring business was at the threshold of its greatest opportunity, he said 'the security of our Nation and the welfare and happiness of our people demand that we continually strive for better working conditions and better living conditions for all.

"To these ends consideration must be given to the objectives sought through the national industrial recovery act. It would be ideal if these results could be brought about by business, industry, labor and the consumer working co-operatively among themselves. However, if this approach is not successful, the ineral Government and the Congress should take steps, in co-operation with all interested, to work out a proper procedure to attain these objectives."

Exciting New 1937 STUDEBAKER challenges all cars in gas economy!

ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPH

STUDEBAKER DEFLATES GAS MILEAGE CLAIMS!

STUDEBAKER cars have made magnificent records in gasoline economy—24.27 miles to the gallon in the 1936 Gilmore Economy Run; 27.46 miles to the gallon under supervision of the American Automobile Association on Bonneville Salt Flats.

But you don't care about records achieved under special circumstances. You want to know what good, bad and indifferent drivers get under average conditions!

O. K. We will tell you!

Studebaker hired Facts, Incorporated, of New York, a business research organization, to question 500 owners of each of the ten most popular makes of automobiles (1936 models). Each driver was asked: 'What gasoline mileage do you get?"

The best showing was made by Studebaker. Owners of the Dictator, with overdrive, testified to an average of 18.166 miles per gallon. Even the most popular lightest weight, lowest priced cars used more gas per mile.

Without overdrive, the Studebaker Dictator showed 17.199 miles per gallon—which is better than one of the two most popular, lowest priced cars.

STUDEBAKER'S CHALLENGE!

No other standard make of car can beat the gas mileage of the Dictator equipped with automatic overdrive in the hands of the average driver under ordinary conditions. And only three of the smaller, cheaper cars average better than the Dictator without overdrive.

Senate Group To Ask Shakeup Of Air Bureau

Copeland Says Report Will Charge Inefficiency; Sea Safety Rules Drafted.

By the Associated Press

The Senate committee investigating air safety was said yesterday by its chairman, Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, to be drafting a report recommending a "thorough shakeup" of the Air Commerce Bureau—which guards the Nation's sky lanes.

Charges of "inefficiency" and "faulty organization" will be made by the committee in its report to the next Congress, Copeland said. He added that another committee he heads is drafting proposals for making American sea liners "the safest on the ocean."

An inquiry into operation of the bureau, headed by Eugene L. Vidal, was ordered by the Senate after the death of Senator Cutting, of New Mexico, in a plane crash May 6, 1935.

The preliminary report said there was a "grievous lack of co-operation" among its high officials, and added that "good men were dismissed from the bureau for political reasons."

The other inquiry, into safety at sea—which was evoked by a series of American maritime disasters, has resulted in "definite proposals" for improving the construction of commercial vessels, Copeland said.

"Some of the ablest naval architects in the country have been engaged to frame regulations for strengthening and fireproofing American ships," he asserted.

Administration of the new rules would be placed in the hands of the Maritime Commission and the Steamship Inspection Bureau.

A technical committee, headed by Admiral George H. Rock, studied the Queen Mary, Normandie and other modern vessels before drafting its conclusions.

Copeland expressed hope that President Roosevelt soon would name the remaining two members of the five-man Maritime Commission, "so it can get some action" on subsidies to shipbuilders.

Several New York lines are ready to ask Government aid for construction, he said, adding that speedy development of the merchant marine is "essential to the national defense."

Students to Hear Muir on Leprosy

Dr. Ernest Muir, secretary-general of the International Leprosy Association of London, England, will address the School of Medicine of George Washington University this afternoon at 4 o'clock, taking as his topic "Reaction of the Tissues to the Leprosy Organism."

Before the lecture, Dean Earl B. McKinley, of the school of medicine, will give a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock at the Cosmos Club in honor of Dr. Muir.

The celebrated British physcian is in the United States as the guest of the Leonard Wood Memorial Foundation to deliver the Charles Franklin Craig lecture before the American Society of Tropical Medicine in Baltimore this week.

This evening the annual banquet of the Smith-Reed-Russell Society will be held at the Kennedy-Warren, when 14 honor students of the school of medicine will be received into membership and 3 faculty members will become honorary members of the group.

Fills Unexpired Term

Underwood & Underwood.

PRENTISS M. BROWN, Democratic Senator-elect from Michigan, who was appointed by Gov. Fitzgerald to fill the unexpired term of late Senator James Couzens.

Brown Is Named For Couzen's Seat

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 16 (AP).—Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of Michigan today appointed Prentiss M. Brown, Democratic Senator-elect, to fill the unexpired term of the late Republican Senator, James Couzens.

Brown, now Representative from Michigan's Eleventh Congressional District, was named to the Senate in the recent general election, defeating former Gov. Wilber M. Brucker, Republican.

Gov. Fitzgerald announced he made the appointment to obtain for Brown seniority rights in Senate committee assignments, saying "the advantage thus gained will be of distinct benefit to the people of Michigan."

Senator Couzens died October 22. After announcing he would support President Roosevelt, he was defeated for renomination in the Republican primary election by Brucker.

Death Gives '30' To 'Muskogee Red'

Colorado Springs, Colo., Nov. 16 (AP).—Friends of his quiet retirement made funeral plans tonight for "Muskogee Red," colorful "tramp printer" who roamed the print shops of the Middle West at the turn of the century.

"Red"—his real name was Andrew Redmond, 79—died yesterday in the comparative luxury of the Printers Home here. It was a far different death than the one he predicted in his own obituary.

Years ago he wrote:

"Muskogee Red has passed on. They found him one morning cold in death. The coroner's jury gathered quickly, rendered a verdict of death from chronic alcoholism and the undertaker hauled the body to a convenient Potter's Field."

Redmond picked up his nickname in the Muskogee, Okla., police court, a friend recalled today, when he drank a bottle of red ink to convince the judge he had a "cast iron stomach."

Dog Is Hit-Run Victim.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Convicted of driving away after his car had killed a dog, Solomon Hoffman was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 or serve 10 days in jail and his driving license was revoked in Bronx magistrates' court today.

Service on Doherty At Dinner Void

Henry L. Doherty, utilities tycoon, was not legally served with process in 14 suits when Gerald W. Sickler, George Washington University student, crashed the exclusive Gridiron dinner last December and handed him the papers, the United States Court of Appeals held yesterday, in sustaining a plea that the service was not valid.

Sickler, attired in a "Tux" and all the trimmings, wormed his way past eagle-eyed guardians of the gate, had Doherty pointed out, and chatted amiably with his "prey" before handing him the papers.

Thereafter Doherty's attorneys claimed the appointment of Sickler as an "elisor" was not made in strict accordance with the law, but the District Court held otherwise. On special appeal, the higher court held that the "elisor" appointment must have shown, that all proper authorities, including the coroner, were incapable of getting the papers in Doherty's hands. There was no such allegation in the petition for Sickler's appointment.

"The Beauty Which Old Greece or Rome Sung, Painted, Wrought, Lies Close at Home"

Women today have a fuller conception of beauty—not merely perfection of face and figure, but the perfection of good grooming—making the most of potential qualities. Science, through the beautician, places loveliness at every woman's fingertips and the Beauty Salon, fittingly lovely in its own appointments, aids science by making a "cult of beauty."

No item in the beauty routine has to be done with more skill than the Permanent Wave. The modern methods and machines employed in the Beauty Salon, plus skilled operators, make it possible for us to offer — satisfactorily — these fine permanents—

Mayors Given Pledge of Help At White House

LaGuardia Opens Meeting With Request for U. S. to Manage Pensions.

Administration of the entire social security program by the Federal Government, reversing the present procedure of Federal contributions to the States for old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, was recommended here yesterday by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York.

Meeting with mayors of 62 of the Nation's largest cities, LaGuardia, president of the group, urged that the Federal Government again take over the transient unemployment problem, a Federal agency through which municipalities could do their financing, and amendment of the Constitution, if necessary, in "the American way" to meet national problems.

LaGuardia Is Keynoter.

Opening the annual conference, LaGuardia set in motion a series of addresses on national and local problems by Administration and city officials that will extend over the next two days.

Briefly the group was received at the White House and assured informally by the President "that the Federal Government will take its full share of the burden of relief after you and the Governors of the States have done everything you fully and reasonably can be expected to do in this convention."

Other highlights of yesterday's session:

Forecasting "some very great, though gradual, change in the structure of government, Chairman Arthur E. Morgan, of the Tennessee Valley Authority, predicted that "sharp lines between city, county and State will disappear, and government will become more regional in character."

Hoover Talks of Traitors.

Praising local police co-operation with "G-men" generally, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said nevertheless "there remains renegades within the departments who are not only traitors to law enforcement, but who are Benedict Arnolds to their own brother officials in that they deliberately send warnings to criminal elements that they may be prepared for the arrival of raiding squads, that they may either flee or give battle and in resisting arrest, fire from ambush upon honest men betrayed by traitors in uniform."

Urging freedom from politics in police administration, Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine of New York said that "unless that bigamous marriage of unscrupulous political connivery and skullduggery and the police department is definitely, and without compromise, divorced, you cannot even hope to have the nearest semblance of an efficient, loyal or honest police administration."

Demand Is Insistent.

LaGuardia, recommending that the social security law be administered entirely by the Federal Government, said he knew there is constant demand by States and localities for more power in carrying out the law, but declared only uniform administration of the social security law could prevent the entire program from coming to "grief."

The fiery little New York Mayor said "we are living in a changed time," and if national problems cannot be solved by legislation standing the tests of the court, "then the only thing to do is to proceed in the American way and to recommend a constitutional amendment which will give Congress the power to legislate and appropriate in order to meet the situation."

Morgan, in his speech on "TVA and Cities," said the time is coming when "in addition to geographical units of government, such as cities and counties, we shall have numerous kinds of functional distribution districts, recreation and park districts and consolidated school districts."

Parole Evils Recited.

Hoover in his address again struck at what he called "the evil workings of malformed pardon and parole administration."

"My complaint," he said, "and the complaint of every honest law enforcement officer in America is that the theory of parole in many States has been twisted and aborted into what pretends to be a humane system, but which, in fact, caters to the desire of the recidivist, the confirmed and habitual offender, the dangerous outlaw and the professional recalcitrant for cheap and easy freedom."

Cantilever Anatomy Produced Man, Horse, Foremost U.S. Expert Tells Sciences Academy

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Dr. William K. Gregory, America's foremost expert on the story of bones in evolution, today gave the National Academy of Sciences a new study showing man and the horse have descended from the same evolutionary model.

Dr. Gregory did not hold the belief of Chinese evolution that man "descended" from a horse, but that both were descendants of a "self-moving grappling bridge type of animal."

This "bridge" he described as the main mechanical principal of evolution. A cantilever and arch structure, in which four legs represent the bridge piers, the bridge is the stomach and in front is the "grappling" apparatus, a month for snatching food.

This principle is not new in evolution, but tonight is the first time it has been applied to all forms of life known in the last 500,000,000 million years.

The hundreds of thousands of fossil bones he said all prove that the higher animals, including man, developed to their present condition through the "grappling bridge."

"Whether or not," he said, "self-named homo sapiens will listen to the small voice of comparative anatomy and paleontology, the facts plainly indicate that the skeletons of both the horse and his rider, however much they differ in details, are but divergent modifications of the old grappling bridge type.

"And all the manifold transformations of this central organic design have risen as the cumulative results of divergent lines of repetition, combination and selective emphasis of its parts."

Dr. Gregory said the mechanism of evolution was extraordinarily simple.

He called the chimpanzee and gorilla "living fossils" which had tried to turn their "self-moving bridges" upright but had failed. Man's ancestors, he added, succeeded. He described the changes in bones by which man straightened up and said:

"The entire human anatomy bears the plainest traces of derivation from the primitive self-moving grappling bridge type. Man in brief is a quadruped turned up on end."

Citizens Oppose Change in Gas Tax

Opposition to any change in the present automobile and gasoline taxes in the District was voted last night by the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association in session in the Alexander Shepherd School.

The association also went on record as opposing the tax-by-weight method on automobiles, and use of money derived from automobile taxes for any other purpose but street and highway upkeep and improvement.

Efforts of the City Firefighters Association to obtain an eight-hour day for firemen was indorsed.

Five new members, including Miss Katherine Kramer, daughter of the late Dr. Stephen Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, were taken into the association. Besides Miss Kramer, these included Mrs. Cora E. Robbins, Clarence A. Wilson, R. A. Brawner and Herry Gelfand.

Jelleff Plays Host To Store Employes

With songs, music, a little speech-making and a lot of entertainment, more than 500 employes of the Jelleff Co. banqueted last night at the National Press Club. The employes were guests of the president of the company, Frank R. Jelleff.

An unexpected headliner of the entertainment, in which many local amateur and professional stars took part, was 6-year-old Margaret Gollan, niece of Vice President Margaret Gollan of the Jelleff Co. Dressed in a soldier suit, the girl did tap dances, taking one encore after another.

It was announced that a "Navy" sales team had defeated the "Army" in the annual sales contest sponsored by the store.

Flowers were presented to Mr. Jelleff and to Miss Gollan as a gift of the employes. J. R. Newton, millinery department buyer, was master of ceremonies.

New Test Asked Of Lemke Law In High Court

Lemke Among Counsel; Tribunal Weighs Decision on Accepting Appeal.

By the Associated Press.

A new test of the constitutionality of the revised Frazier-Lemke act, suspending for three years foreclosures on farm mortgages, was filed yesterday in the Supreme Court.

It was carried to the high tribunal by Robert Page Wright, of Bedford County, Pa., who numbered among his attorneys, Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, co-author of the legislation and Presidential candidate of the Union Party in the recent election.

The petition was filed after the court had announced its decision on reviewing approximately 30 cases appealed from lower courts and had begun a new week of arguments which probably will include four New Deal controversies. No opinions were read.

Controversies to be debated, probably beginning Wednesday, involve the 50 per cent tax on silver profits made before the silver purchase act became effective; the Presidential embargo on shipment of arms to Bolivia and Paraguay for their Chaco war, and the Ashurst-Summers act to require labeling of prison-made goods.

Decisions in these cases and whether the new test of the Frazier-Lemke will be reviewed are possible December 7.

In the Frazier Lemke case, Wright sought a review of a decision by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals holding the act unconstitutional.

A month ago the Supreme Court refused to review another case involving the legislation, filed by the Phoenix Joint Stock Land Bank of Kansas City. The Western Missouri Federal District Court held the act constitutional and the bank sought a Supreme Court review without waiting for a decision by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals.

A somewhat similar 5-year act was held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court on the ground that it deprives creditors of property rights. The present law was enacted as a substitute.

Carnegie Illinois Plants Give 10 Per Cent Raise

Pittsburgh, Nov. 16 (AP).—Bulletin board notices in the 18 Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation's Pittsburgh-Youngstown district mills told workers today their pay had been increased — whether the y agreed ot terms of the boost or not.

The corporation announced its 10 per cent wage boost plan, effective for one year and coupled with a controversial cost-of-living method of adjustment, became effective in all plants.

Rep. Cary Gravely Ill, Undergoes Operation

Representative Glover Cary, of Kentucky, yesterday underwent a major operation in a Cincinnati Hospital. He has been in the hospital since early in August.

Last spring, Representative Cary was in Naval Hospital for a long period following a relapse after a siege of pneumonia. Although he was unable to campaign for re-election he received a large plurality.

Musical Show Producer Dies on 71st Birthday

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Alfred K. Aarons, theatrical producer who contributed many musical comedies to the Broadway scene, died in the Presbyterian Hospital today on his seventy-first birthday.

"Mam'zelle Awkins," a musical comedy, was his first production at the turn of the century. It scored a Broadway hit and was followed by "His Honor, the Mayor," "Yama," "The Drums of Jeopardy," "Magnolia," "My Princess" and "$25 an Hour," the last named produced in 1934.

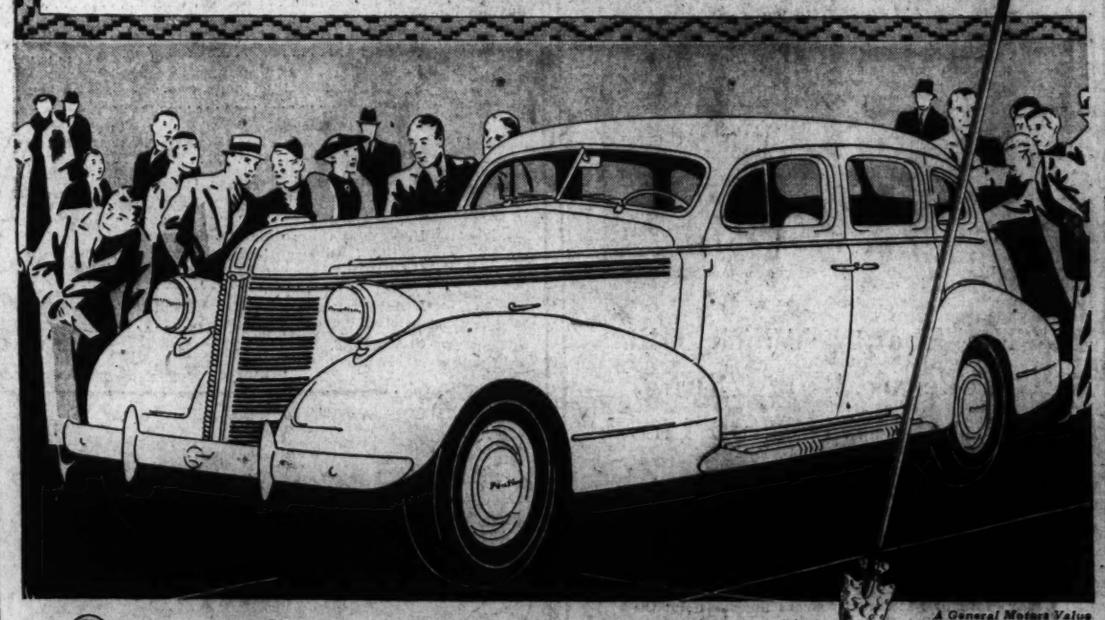
SHOW CROWDS ARE SAYING IT A THOUSAND DIFFERENT WAYS

Everything points to Pontiac

for 1937



A General Motors Value

AMERICA'S FINEST LOW-PRICED CAR

LISTEN to the Show crowds, and there won't be any doubt in your mind about what new car is "tops." They go to the Show with open minds. They come out talking Pontiac. You will too, for the 1937 Pontiac is a lot more car than you dreamed possible in the low-price field!

New Silver Streak styling again makes it the most beautiful thing on wheels. The new wheelbase—5 full inches longer on both six and eight—makes it a real 6-passenger car. In its long list of basic advancements there's an answer to everything you want and need, including the super-safety of new Unisteel Bodies by Fisher and triple-sealed hydraulic brakes. And it is actually more economical than last year's Pontiac—official price-class economy champion!

Yes, you'll agree with the Show crowds —everything points to Pontiac for 1937. It's America's finest low-priced car; and one look tells you why.

Driver Is Killed As Car Upsets Near D. C. Line

Cabin John Man Victim; City Toll 76 When W. M. Rogers Dies.

Phillip D. Prather, 21, of Cabin John, Md., a taxicab driver, was killed early this morning when an automobile he was drivnig overturned on Massachusetts avenue extended, just beyond the District line.

A motorist, Daniel F. Craig, 23, of the 1800 block of Columbia road northwest, a George Washington University student, took Prather to Emergency Hospital, where physicians pronounced him dead.

Craig told police he had left Craig's passengers, a man and woman, sitting in a dazed condition near the overturned car. They did not seem seriously hurt. When police went to the scene both had disappeared.

With the death of William M. Rogers, 43, of 4704 Hunt avenue, Bethesda, Md., in Emergency Hospital yesterday, the city's traffic death toll for the year reached 76.

Two policemen were seriously injured in accidents which occurred while they were chasing speeding motorists. Eight other persons were injured in traffic mishaps in and near the city during the day.

Rogers was injured Armistice Day when his car smashed into a tree at Observatory Circle and Massachusetts avenue. Police believe he fell asleep at the wheel.

Meanwhile, a woman killed in a collision on the Richmond highway, near Bowling Green, Va., was identified tentatively as Miss Lillian Oliver, of Washington. Undertakers at Ashland, Va., said the identification was made by Edward M. Boyd, 59, of this city, with whom the woman was riding.

Two Hurt in Crashes.

Motorcycle Policeman Joseph L. Proctor, jr., 28, of 1859 U street southeast, and Adam M. Arney, 30, of 2112 First street northwest, were seriously injured in crashes while they were chasing speeding automobiles.

Proctor and his partner, Private Lee S. Hansley, pursued a speeding car on Fourteenth street southwest early yesterday. In the middle of the Highway Bridge the car was stopped and the driver told to follow to the Fourth Precinct station.

Instead, the driver fled on across the bridge. Near the Washington Airport, the front tire of the fleeing car blew out and the machine overturned.

Swerving to avoid striking the wrecked car, Proctor crashed into the rear of a freight car standing on a siding just off the highway. He was removed to Emergency Hospital while the driver of the speeding car and six other occupants escaped. He was treated for a fractured shoulder and severe cuts.

Owner Is Located.

The owner of the car, allegedly a passenger at the time of the accident, was located in Alexandria Hospital, suffering a spinal injury.

Policemen E. E. Mast and Oren Speares, of the park police, later arrested William Lax Shu, 24, of Alexandria. Shu was held under $250 bond for a later hearing when arraigned before United States Commissioner John Barton Phillips on charges of reckless driving and leaving after colliding.

Policeman Arney suffered concussion of the brain and skull injuries when he crashed into the back of a car he had been chasing on Benning road northeast. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

James Brosnan, 26, 1235 Owen place northeast, driver of the car into which Arney crashed, was charged with second offense speeding and released to appear in Police Court today.

Two Washingtonians Hurt.

A head-on collision between two automobiles on the Defense highway near Glen Dale, Md., resulted in injuries to four persons, two of them from Washington.

Frank Erdman and his wife, Gladys, both 30, who live at 76 S street northwest were admitted to Casualty Hospital sufferi n g from shock and minor injuries.

The occupants of the other car, Joseph Crawford, colored, 45, and Charles F. Sprigg, colored, 45, both of Bowie, Md., entered the same hospital. Crawford sustained a broken leg and Sprigg was said to have head injuries. The injured persons were carried to the hospital by the Bladensburg rescue squad and a motorist.

Rogers, a railroad tariff expert for the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be buried from Our Lady of Lourdes Church Wednesday. He came here from Westfield, Mass., in 1919. He served as a corporal in the 310th supply company of the quartermaster corps during the World War. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, Kenwood Country Club and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase American Legion chapter.

Mr. Rogers is a member of the bar of the Supreme Court and the Sigma Delta Kappa Legeal Fraternity. He will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

AID TO RELIEF OF PSORIASIS SYMPTOMS

The itching and irritation of psoriasis is readily relieved by Resinol Ointment, an old formula containing ingredients well known to physicians for their effectiveness.

To get best results, wash off the scales with a pure, mild soap. Resinol Soap is gently medicated and free from excess alkali. Use it with warm water, then rinse and pat dry.

Spread Resinol Ointment evenly over the surface, letting it remain for several hours during the day and overnight. Note how quickly its oily base enables the Resinol medication to soothe the angry skin.

Even when the rash begins to fade, do not stop using Resinol too soon. The eruptions of psoriasis have a tendency to recur. For this reason it is advisable to continue Resinol applications as long as there is any trace of irritation.

Driver of Hired Car Is Arrested In Fatal Crash

Youth Jailed in Baltimore Debutante's Death Near Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—Magistrate Thomas Usilton held James J. Stewart, 18, without bail today to await action by the coroner, on a charge of manslaughter in the death of Miss Mary Hope Hunter, Baltimore debutante, in an automobile collision.

A half-inch bolt found at the scene of the accident led to the arrest of Stewart. Detective Charles Brenizer said the bolt was from the hood of an automobile which the youth had rented.

Brenizer charged the car driven by Stewart plowed into an automobile bearing a party of four from a football victory celebration and then sped away. The accident occurred early yesterday just outside of Fairmount Park.

Miss Hunter's escort, Thomas E. Walton, jr., of suburban St. David's, a senior at Yale University, escaped with cuts and bruises. Others in the car were John Boyce, 23, a Yale senior, son of Mrs. Keyward E. Boyce, of Baltimore, and Miss Mary T. Edelen, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wallace Edelen, of Glen Arm, Md., a suburb of Baltimore. They were slightly injured.

The four young people were driving to Walton's home after seeing the Yale-Princeton game at Princeton and attending a dance in Philadelphia.

Seven hours after the accident, the bolt, found near the scene, was fitted into the hood of an abandoned car found in West Philadelphia. The manager of an automobile renting agency said the car had been taken out by Stewart.

Girl Slayer Saved From Chicago Mob

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP).—An angry crowd strove to snatch scarfaced Andrew Capoldi from a police default today shortly after he had confessed slaying a five-year-old girl in a moronic attack.

Taken to a school yard in "Little Italy" to re-enact the killing of Antoinette Tiritilli, the prisoner was surrounded by aroused residents of the neighborhood crying:

"Get him. Kill him."

Relatives left the wake in the humble Tiritilli home to join the throngs.

"Let us at him," two of her uncles shouted. "He killed our little girl."

Capoldi cringed as officers forcibly restrained the uncles from violence and held the crowd back.

Supervising Police Capt. John Stege said the prisoner—a hulking, pockmarked man of 28—made a "complete confession" that horrified "Little Italy."

China Claims Foes Used Japan Planes

Peiping, Nov. 16 (AP).—Chinese sources charged, today that eight Japanese planes bombed forts in Eastern Suiyuan Province, near Taolin. These sources said the planes participated in an attack by 3,000 Mongol irregulars and Manchukuoans. The planes, heavy artillery and tanks were used in six separate attacks. Chinese said.

Provincial troops were reported to have fought back the invaders after inflicting heavy losses. The losses to the Suiyuan troops were slight, Chinese commanders reported.

The battle was said to have taken place Sunday about 125 miles northeast of Kalgan.

Roosevelt High Alumni to Fete Davis Nov. 24

Retiring Principal Will Be Honored at Banquet in Shoreham Hotel.

Allan Davis, who retires from the principalship of Roosevelt High School November 30, is being honored by students and alumni of his school and other associates at functions this month.

The surprise assembly which Roosevelt students gave their veteran principal Friday the day before his seventieth birthday, will be followed by a banquet and program planned by the alumni for November 24, in the Shoreham, it was announced yesterday.

More than 400 of Mr. Davis' former students are expected, according to Mrs. Mary Sherman Resh, of the Abbot Vocational School, who is taking reservations.

The birthday program featured songs, a birthday cake and candles. Cadets, tap dancers, athletes and musicians joined in a demonstration of the school's best talent. Betty Warner read the ode she had written to "Our Principal."

Mr. Davis leaves his post after more than 50 years' service in public schools here, having reached the retirement age last Saturday. His successor has not been announced, although Miss Mae Bradshaw, assistant principal, is frequently mentioned for the post.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, is still receiving applications for the position, and is expected to forward a recommendation to the Board of Education's personnel committee in the next few days.

New York Priest Flees China Band

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—A Reuters (British News Agency) report from Mukden, Manchukuo, today said the Rev. Father Clarence Joseph Burns, held by Chinese bandits since last February 5, had escaped.

Hope for Father Burns' release had faded in the months he was the prisoner of bandits who, reports said, were holding him atop an inaccessible mountain in southeastern Manchukuo and demanding 5,000,000 Chinese dollars for his release.

That demand was made last June, and virtually nothing had been heard from him since.

Father Burns was associated with the Maryknoll Mission at Ossining, N. Y.

3 Die in Moslem Riot Over Lebanon Treaty

Beirut, Syria, Nov. 16 (AP).—At least three persons were killed and more than a score re orted injured today in a series of clashes between Moslems and Christians over the new treaty between France and Lebanon.

A harangue in the Basta Mosque against Lebanese independence Sunday night stirred Moslems into a looting attack on the Christian quarter. Troops fired on the crowds to restore order.

Christian mobs supported by thousands of Aremnians later attacked Moslem districts. Fifty automobiles and several street cars were burned during the fighting.

Board to Hear Data on Alleged BondingRacket

Auto Club Lawyer to Give Testimony Today in Prince Georges.

Possible suspension of at least one more member of the Hyattsville Police Department will hinge on the outcome of the Prince Georges County Commissioners' meeting in Marlboro, Md., today.

The board will hear evidence against this officer presented by a lawyer for the Keystone Automobile Club, instigator of the investigation into an alleged graft ring that is supposed to have ensnared hundreds of Washington motorists.

Similar charges made to the commissioners at their last two meetings have resulted in the suspension of three officers, pending the grand jury's inquiry.

Ogle Marbury, counsel for the board, asked last week that evidence against all the officers allegedly implicated be brought before the commissioners for action. In response to this request the Keystone officials will appear again before the governing body today.

States Attorney Alan Bowie, who began yesterday to assemble evidence for presentation to the special session of the grand jury early in December, is expected to recommend an assistant investigator after a conference with the commissioners today.

Bowie's recommendation will be made to Judge Joseph C. Mattingly of the Circuit Court, who will announce the appointment.

The trial of Maynard W. Hollandsworth, Washington motorist who alleges he was arrested for speeding in Maryland by a District policeman, was postponed yesterday until November 30.

The continuance was asked by Defense Attorney Louis Lebowitz, of Mount Rainier, because of the absence of several of his witnesses.

Inspector William E. Holmes and Lieut. Floyd Truscott, who have been assigned by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown to investigate the Washington angle of the case, were present with Mrs. Antoinette Arnold, trial board stenographer, to hear the evidence.

After the postponement, Inspector Holmes said he would not make a statement in regard to the case until after it had been tried.

The Associates Investment Co., of Washington, yesterday filed a writ of replevin with Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips, of Berwyn, to recover an automobile which was impounded by Prince Georges County police in Payne's garage at College Park on October 5.

The investment company resorted to legal action when the garage refused to release the automobile until a charge of $30 for storage and towing had been paid.

Charles Smith, of Hyattsville, owner of the car, said he left it on the side of the Baltimore boulevard after it had stalled. When he returned for it later the same day, he said, it was gone. Several weeks elapsed, he said, before he located the automobile in the College Park garage.

Since October 20, when the grand jury was first asked by the Keystone Automobile Club to investigate alleged irregularities involving the county police, justices of the peace and bondsmen, the following developments have taken place:

1. The grand jury has recommended a special session to make a thorough investigation of the evidence.

2. The grand jury has urged that a special investigator be appointed to aid Bowie.

3. The board of commissioners has suspended three officers—Warren E. Peake, Claude A. Reese and Frank Bell—all attached to the Hyattsville sub-station.

4. The Keystone Automobile Club has filed suit for a Washington motorist against Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman, who lives at Suitland, Md., for recovery of $140, the difference between $151.70, alleged to have been paid to the bondsmen, and $11.70, which was paid to the court.

Post Woman's Staff Hostesses To Officers of D. C. Federation

Club Members Learn What Columnist Looks Like, Hear Writers Discuss Their Work and Are Entertained at Tea.

The question, "What does the columnist look like?" was answered in person by Mary Haworth, the Poe Sisters, Dudley Harmon and other women writers of The Washington Post yesterday afternoon at a publicity institute and tea given by the woman's department of the paper for officers and publicity chairmen of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

The institute, held in the conference room on the first floor of The Post Building, was opened by Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District federation. Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of the women's pages and author of the humorous feature, "The Gentler Sex," presided.

Alexander F. Jones, managing editor, outlined the purpose of The Post to cover all activities of interest to women in the Capital and to bring to women readers through the various departments of the paper special articles on subjects such as foods, fashions, children and the home.

Visits N. Y. Markets.

Miss Haworth answered many of the questions which are asked her about her column on the woman's page: "Do people really write the letters you publish?" Her answer was "Yes, and many we have not room to publish."

How do you decide what advice to give? Her answer to this was: "Sometimes by seeking the advice of experts in the field covered by the question; often by seeking down into my own soul for it."

Miss Ethel Ehlen, the fashion editor, explained how fashions are presented to Washington women on the pages of The Post before they even reach the shops. As fashion editor, she goes to the New York markets, she told the newspaper's guests, and is able to bring back forecasts of the styles before they actually arrive here.

Miss Lindsay spoke for Miss Rebekah Blake, foods editor and expert who was busy preparing copy for the District Federation of Women's Clubs' cook book soon to be issued, and could not attend the institute.

Miss Jessie Ash Arndt, society editor, presented the Poe sisters, Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson and Miss Elisabeth Poe, who write "The Washington Scene" and other special features and news for the society and women's pages; and explained that Dudley Harmon, who writes "Top Hats and Tiaras," another Sunday feature, and is a member of the society staff, is one of the women writers of The Post, despite the fact her name is Dudley.

The curiosity of those who wanted to know about Marylyn — Miss Marylyn Reeve—who writes "The Merry Whirl," was also satisfied. Marylyn is her real name, the society editor explained, and expressed regret that Miss Reeve was unable to be present.

Miss Marie Sauer, Sunday editor, spoke of the club, school and travel sections in the Sunday edition and introduced Miss Elisabeth Taylor, club editor, who outlined for the publicity chairmen rules for preparation of their copy.

Tea in Department.

At the close of the institute, tea was served in the woman's department on the third floor, with Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson presiding at the tea table. During the tea hour, Mr. Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, and Mrs. Meyer were present to greet the guests.

Among Federation officers who attended were Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, also a past president of the Federation and chairman of radio for the General Federation; Mrs. Byron M. Coon, president of the Takoma Park Woman's Club and chairman of the department of juniors of the Federation; Mrs. E. H. Daniel, first vice president of the District Federation; Mrs. Ernest H. Howard, president of the Police and Fire Department Ladies' Auxiliary; Mrs. Eugene E. Thompson, president of the Sunshine and Community Club; Miss Nellie C. Coiclazier, publicity writer for the Abraham Lincoln Circle, No. 3, G. A. R.; Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, past vice president of the Federation and president of the Housekeepers Alliance; Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, recording secretary for the District Federation; Mrs. Virginia White Steel, chairman of the Women's Republican committee for many years and a past president of the District Federation, and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, another past president of the Federation.

Happy Endings

Six-Year-Old "Incorrigible" Returns to Normal By Classes at Child Guidance Clinic.

These are authentic cases taken from files of Community Chest agencies and show how Chest funds have helped some persons over a hard spot. Any names, of course, are fictitious.

He was about 6 years of age. He looked like a cherub and manifestly was not. He was fast getting beyond control of his mother.

They found him one night sleeping in an automobile. His teacher reported him absent from school. The truant officer got him several times for playing hookey. He had trouble with his lessons.

The parents tried kindness, it didn't work. They tried the rod. He made an awful fuss, but went back to his old tricks. There seemed nothing that anyone could do that would help him.

The parents were in despair. They could see nothing but a dark future for their pride and joy. He was fast becoming due for the label "incorrigible."

The happy ending?

Someone told them about the Child Guidance Clinic operated by the Washington Institute for Mental Hygiene. The parents took the boy to the clinic. A little investigaion proved what is known as a "reading deficiency." He saw from right to left instead of the normal left to right. He is attending classes at the clinic now and is almost normal in his behavior again.

Lower Fares a Boon Says B. & O. President

Baltimore, Nov. 16 (AP).—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., said today the lower passenger fares on B. & O. trains had proved a financial success.

In his report at the 110th annual meeting of stockholders, Willard said he believed the reduced fares responsible for the increased travel which, with "very little additional train mileage, has resulted in increased earnings per train mile of about 10.5 per cent."

"It is also quite evident," he said, "that the lower rates, together with improved services, have contributed substantially towards a better feeling on the part of the public toward the railroads."

Police Net 90 In Second Push On Petty Crime

30 Held for Investigation; Pickpocket, Jail-Breaker Seized in Flop House.

Police drive to rid the city of transient petty hoodlums and wipe out thievery and holdups was continued yesterday with the arrest of nearly 90 men in a D street northwest "flop" house.

Led by Lieut. John H. Fowler, newly appointed supervisor of the robbery squad, Detective Sergts. Robert J. Barrett, Elmer Lewis, William Christian and Guy Rone, rounded up the men in the Stag Hotel, 600 block D street shortly after 6 a. m. A similar raid was staged on a colored lodging house last week.

Taken to police headquarters, 60 of the men were released after questioning. The remainder were fingerprinted and photographed and will be held for robbery show-up tomorrow night.

Lieut. Fowler said a known pickpocket was seized with several other men wanted for holdups. Sergt. Rone, of the fugitive squad, will investigate all of the men held to determine whether they are wanted in other cities. One prisoner was identified as an escaped convict.

Conditions in the hotel where the men were seized led detectives to report the matter to the Health and Fire departments. Sergt Barrett said the men were sleeping on the bare floor with as many as 20 in one room. Each man said he paid 25 cents for the lodging.

Raids on similar places will continue, Lieut. Fowler said, until out-of-town "floaters" who have been coming into the city in the past several weeks are ousted.

"Psychological effect these raids have on other transients will keep them out of Washington in the future," Fowler explained.

Meanwhile, two men were victims of armed bandits and several homes and business places were broken into late Sunday night and early yesterday.

Max Richter, proprietor of a grocery store at 127 L street northwest, was robbed of about $2 in change by three men who threatened him with guns when they entered the store.

Tony Moschetto, 20, of 1213 B street northeast, reported to police two men and a woman robbed him of $11 and his overcoat when they covered him with a gun while he was parked at Seventh and H streets northwest.

Safety, Comfort Mark New Cars

Safety and comfort were uppermost in the minds of designers of America's 1937 automobiles and these factors seem to be making more of an impression than streamlining and power on visitors to the seventeenth annual Automobile Show, now in progress at Calvert Exhibit Hall.

The exhibit, which opened Saturday, will continue during the week and through Saturday, between the daily hours of 11 a. m. and 11 p. m. It is being conducted by the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Every one of the 100 new models on display has an all-steel body, is completely equipped with safety glass, steers easier and has improved brakes. Motors are more accessible and so nearly perfect that they are expected to better the record of last year's cars on which only minor service adjustments were required.

Learn the amazing benefits of GULFPRIDE
THE WORLD'S FINEST MOTOR OIL

WHY is it that no other motor oil in all the world can deliver the performance of GULFPRIDE OIL?

Because only GULFPRIDE starts from the finest Pennsylvania crudes . . . is refined to the same point as other fine motor oils . . . and is then further refined by Gulf's exclusive Alchlor process!

This process is the most efficient ever developed—the fruit of 15 years' research by Gulf scientists—men who stand behind every Gulf product.

Read the facts on this page. Then drive into any Gulf dealer's—and replace your old summer-worn oil with WINTER GULFPRIDE!

(Above)—MANY WORLD'S RECORDS on land, sea, and in the air have been set with GULFPRIDE OIL. Racing drivers, fliers, speedboat pilots swear by it. Proved in the toughest competition, GULFPRIDE will outwear, outlast, and outperform any oil you ever used in your car!

THE ALCHLOR PROCESS removes all sludge and residue. Proof: we took 6 of the finest Pennsylvania oils we could buy and put them through the Alchlor process. It removed 20% waste from already highly refined oils! Be wise—get GULFPRIDE—the only oil that has this head start!

Russia Rejects Reich's Protest In Plot Arrests

Official Refuses to Accept Complaint on Jailing of 28 German Citizens.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 16.—Soviet Russia declined tonight to accept a sharply worded German protest against the jailing of 28 German citizens held incommunicado on charges of espionage and of being involved in a Fascist plot against Russia.

N. N. Kretinsky, Soviet vice commissar for foreign affairs, advised the German charge d'affaires, Werner von Tippelskirch, he was "unable" to receive the complaint.

The protest, declaring the arrests were "extremely aggravating" and certain to strain relations between the two countries, demanded immediate proof of the charges against the imprisoned Germans.

It also insisted on the right to communicate with the prisoners, seized along with a number of persons of other nationalities.

The protest declared Germany considered "no serious reason has been given for the arrest of its nationals."

Leave Is Ruled A Legal Right Of U.S. Worker

Comptroller Cites New Law in Upholding Claim for Traveling Expenses.

Annual leave under the new leave law is a definite legal right of Federal workers and not a privilege, Acting Comptroller General R. N. Elliott ruled yesterday.

Elliott's ruling, made on a claim for $14.80 filed by W. Frank Persons, director of the employment service of the Labor Department, also liberalized a rule that has applied to traveling expenses for years.

While on leave at Booth Bay Harbor, Me., last August, Persons was summoned by President Roosevelt to a conference at Hyde Park, and returned to Booth Bay Harbor after the conference. When Persons requested payments of expenses incurred by this trip, the General Accounting Office refused to approve the voucher because under the old regulations when leave was a privilege the person was always considered to be in the city in which he was employed.

Persons appeal against this preaudit action was upheld by Elliott who ordered reimbursement of the expenses, minus certain deductions. In his decision, Elliott made clear that although leave of an employe can be terminated whenever services of that employe are required, when an employe is directed to perform a duty at a place other than his regular station and is permitted to return to the place where he was on leave, expenses are to be paid him.

The Comptroller General qualified his ruling by permitting this difference: Should an employe's leave be terminated and he be required to return to his regular station via some designated place, the employe would be entitled only to the difference between the expenses incurred and the expense he would have incurred had he come directly to his regular station.

Child Auto Victim To BeBuriedToday

Final rites for 4-year-old Robert S. Dyke, jr., who was killed by an automobile in front of his home, 678 Fourth street northeast, Saturday, will be held this afternoon in National Capital Memorial Park, on Washington-Baltimore boulevard.

The child met death when he ran from the sidewalk into the path of an automobile driven by Joseph F. Pitts, 19, 726 Maryland avenue northeast.

Pitts was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday when Billy Kidwell, 14, who carried the boy up three flights of steps to place him in his mother's arms, after he was struck, told how the accident happened.

"We were chasing each other up and down the sidewalk," Billy testified, "when Bobby suddenly ran from behind a parked car out into the street."

Germany Now Strongest Bulwark in Europe Against Communism and War, Tansill Says

Emerging from the shadow of defeatism and despair into the sunlight of prestige and power under the present regime, Germany stands today as the strongest bulwark in Europe against the spread of communism and war, Dr. Charles C. Tansill declared yesterday.

The American University professor who recently returned from an extensive visit in Germany as guest-lecturer of the Carl Schurz Association and the Nazi government, expressed this opinion in a talk before the Presbyterian Ministers Association at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

"I do not believe there will be a European war for at least five years," Dr. Tansill said. "I noted no ill feeling among the Germans toward any nation except Russia, and only toward that one because of its 'Red' menace. Germany today presents a united front against communism. She wants nothing from other countries except noninterference. Her strong army is a kind of peace insurance in Europe because it will keep other countries from waging war on her. On the other hand, you may be very sure Germany will attack no other nation at the present time; for her goal now is not military supremacy but economic self-security."

Dr. Tansill said, further, he was convinced that 98 per cent of the German people are solidly behind Hitler and satisfied with his program for putting the country back on its feet.

"Accounts that have come to us of the unrest, the boycotts, the breadlines, the widespread dissatisfaction and the irreligious trends in Germany are false," he continued. "There is security in Germany presents a united front against the Nazi government has drawn a line of demarcation between religion and politics, but it is not anti-religious in its influence in any respect."

The back-to-the-land movement is one of the outstanding aids to the agricultural program now being carried out in Germany, Dr. Tansill pointed out. Homes outside the cities have been erected for 500,000 former urbanites, who are now learning to earn a comfortable living from the soil. "Labor camps are also an important function in publicizing the benefits to be derived from rural existence. These camps, in which German boys between the ages of 18 and 20 are required to spend at least six months, are also doing much to break down class distinctions."

The youth movement has proved many; there are no breadlines, no slums and no obvious unrest. True, one of the strongest factors in establishing the Nazi regime, he said. "All modern German leaders are comparatively young men and can understand the needs of youth," he said. "Germany's youth has confidence in those leaders, and is fired with a much more passionate patriotism than modern American young men and women have ever dreamed of.

One of the 14 American honor guests attending the National Socialist Party Congress in Nuremberg in September, Dr. Tansill had numerous opportunities to talk with Hitler and to observe him "in action." He heard Hitler speak many times before big crowds, and was much impressed with the dictator's personal magnetism.

"I consider Hitler one of the ablest orators of the modern age," Dr. Tansill said. "He has a fine, resonant voice and a compelling personality. His power as a convincing public speaker has done much to strengthen his position in the country which under his leadership has regained law, order, hope and self-respect that were completely shattered by the Versailles Treaty."

Dr. Tansill said the feeling is prevalent in Germany that America's attitude toward the Nazi government is not friendly. "The principal reason for this feeling is that the American Ambassador to Germany has openly denounced the government and continues to be very unsympathetic toward it. But neither the attitude of our ambassador nor the protests of any group or groups in this country will affect Hitler's power in the least. The Nazi government is in Germany to stay; and Hitler will remain as its head. The people are solidly behind him, and are completely satisfied with the program he has planned."

Masonic Rites Today For William H. Hoopes

Masonic rites will be conducted at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, at 3:30 p. m. today for William H. Hoopes, retired clerk of the General Accounting Office, who died unexpectedly last Friday in St. Petersburg, Fla. Burial will follow in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Hoopes, who lived at 1747 Eighteenth street northwest, was in Government service for 33 years. He retired about four years ago. Ill for some time, he went South with his wife about eight days ago. Death was attributed to heart failure. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Delia E. Hoopes.

2 Wales Laborite M.P.'s Shun Greeting to King

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—Two Laborite members of Parliament from Wales refused tonight to be on hand to greet King Edward, when he visits Wales Wednesday to inspect conditions among the unemployed.

One of the parliamentarians, Aneurin Bevan, declined the invitation of Labor Minister Ernest Brown on the ground there is suffering in South Wales for which the King's ministers are responsible.

Bevan said he deeply regretted Edward's "well known sympathy" for the unemployed should be used to conceal what he called negligence of his ministers.

Co-operation Means Just That.

Maj. Berry's trade-union affiliations and partisan political activities have made him unacceptable to a large number of businessmen in his role of industrial co-ordinator. It is certainly proper to demand that the presiding officer at the coming industrial conference should be free from the slightest suspicion of bias in either his industrial or his political attitude, and that he should not be committed in advance to any specific program.

Judged by his past performances and professions, the present industrial co-ordinator fails to meet these tests of adequacy. Furthermore, an article appearing today on the page opposite tends to confirm the suspicion that Maj. Berry does not intend to maintain an impartial detached attitude toward participants in the December conference.

If Col. Brady, who is the co-ordinator's "right-hand man," correctly reflects his superior's viewpoint, businessmen will not be encouraged to state their problems. They will simply be told on what terms amnesty will be granted former Administration critics. That is to be inferred from the colonel's belligerent references to opponents who have "uncovered by their smoke every one of their positions, so that the batteries of those holding the line now have the exact range and a position of tremendous importance."

It is also significant that Col. Brady devotes his attention exclusively to the problems of labor and the desirability of raising standards of pay and lowering hours of work. He makes only incidental reference to the trade practice problems that vitally concern business. And he assumes that the election has given Congress and the President a popular mandate to carry out far-reaching regulation of conditions of employment for the sake of the "general welfare."

How much legal regulation will be necessary, Col. Brady points out, depends upon "the degree of co-operation and voluntary acceptance" of the principles governing fair labor standards by employers themselves. Before this issue arises, however, "co-operation" and "voluntary acceptance" in regard to the principles governing industrial co-ordination will have to be exhibited by the bureaucrats. It is up to Maj. Berry himself to learn the elements of co-operation before his office denounces others for their shortcomings in that regard.

Unforeseen By Henry George.

The hardy American pioneers thumbed their noses at the landlord and tax collector, and slowly crossed the open prairies in covered wagons that carried most of the contemporary conveniences of life. Their only fear was that an Indian tribe might collect both rent and taxes in the form of scalps. And Indians, after all, were not under the protection of the game laws.

But those were the horse and buggy days, or maybe the ox and wagon days. Today the migrating family travels hundreds of miles between stops and bunks at night in an auto trailer with beds, refrigerator, kitchen stove, electric lights and running water. There are said to be 100,000 American families that have no other home, and factories are adding daily to the quarter of a million trailers now on American roads.

The menace of Indians, except those who sell souvenirs on reservations, was pretty well eliminated by the original pioneers on their way westward. But the migration today, which heads with greater versatility to all points of the compass, meets with little more hospitality than the Indians gave our ancestors. Orchard Lake, Mich., in a test case decided a few days ago, banned trailers altogether within its jurisdiction. Other municipalities restrict them severely. Most local revenues come from taxes on real estate, and the average city is unprepared to convert its tax collectors into a motorcycle corps to check up on the trailer resident.

But the trend will probably defy municipal government. No authority can check the American instinct for independence in the home, especially when that instinct is quickened by a gasoline motor. A family with wanderlust and a trailer can too easily bounce the dust of inhospitable cities off its tires and gather elsewhere in a contented family circle about its own dashboard. Be it ever so mobile, there's no place like home.

Bad News For Prague.

With the calm statement that "it no longer recognizes the regulations" the German government on Saturday destroyed another large section of the Treaty of Versailles. Ten years ago this action would have shaken Europe to its foundations and would very probably have led to the immediate military occupation of German territory. Today, especially in the United States, it passes almost unnoticed—a vivid illustration of the fact that the Versailles Treaty, except in its territorial clauses, is no longer regarded as having any real binding force.

There was much that was promising in the section of the peace treaty which established control by international commissions over navigation on the principal German rivers. If some of the principles laid down had been extended in an impartial and uniform manner they would have eliminated many troublesome formalities and unnecessary restrictions hampering to international trade. This might have proved particularly true on rivers which, like the Rhine and Danube, form frontiers for part of their course.

As in the case of disarmament, however, no serious attempt was ever made to apply to the victorious nations the obligations they were so willing to have binding on Germany alone. And no more than a glance at the articles of the peace treaty now discarded is necessary to understand why the Hitler regime has taken one-sided action to destroy one-sided commitments imposed by force in 1919. Article 332 of the Treaty of Versailles, for instance, stated that:

> On the waterways declared to be international in the preceding article, the nationals, property and flags of all powers shall be treated on a footing of perfect equality . . . Nevertheless, German vessels shall not be entitled to carry passengers or goods by regular services between the ports of any allied or associated power, without special authority from such power.

It was, of course, inevitable that such deliberately discriminatory and unfair provisions, designed to keep Germany in a permanently inferior commercial position, would be overthrown as soon as the Reich felt itself strong enough to break these fetters with impunity. That is the case today. And that is why the present destruction of the river-navigation section of the peace treaty immediately emphasizes the question of how long the territorial sections of that treaty are likely to stand.

To this question none, unless it be a handful of men in the inner councils of the Nazi government, can today give answer. But there is one aspect of the action taken by Germany on Saturday which will be noted by all who believe that Czechoslovakia is the chief immediate danger zone and that talk of direct Franco-German or Russo-German hostilities is altogether beside the point.

Under the section of the Treaty of Versailles which is now scrapped Czechoslovakia was given certain special rights not merely as to the control of navigation on the Elbe River, but more particularly in the establishment of free zones under Czechoslovakian control in the German ports of Hamburg and Stettin. The importance of this to the little inland state arises from the fact that Prague, its capital, is on the Elbe, which flows northward across Germany to enter the North Sea at Hamburg. The internationalized Elbe, with the free zone at its mouth, is Czechoslovakia's only direct access to the sea, and by this route travels much of the country's import and export trade.

The German Minister at Prague has given oral assurances that the latest Nazi move will not affect the free port arrangements. But this will be of little consolation since the river which leads to Hamburg can now be closed to foreign traffic at a moment's notice. Isolated between Germany, Austria and Hungary, with Mussolini openly inciting Hungarian desires for Slovak territory, it would be strange if both Czechs and Slovaks did not feel that the precariousness of their position is intensified by the latest German move.

Reunion In Verona.

Richard Sheridan once remarked that it is safest in matrimony to begin with a little aversion. Maybe that was why young Franklin Roosevelt crossed the political tracks so light-heartedly to carry off the pretty blonde daughter of America's munition baron, Eugene du Pont. Or maybe both parties to this modern Montague-Capulet romance believe with Plautus that a dish spiced with love pleases every palate.

In her interview with the press the bride-to-be made haste to explain that she did not vote in the last election. "I wasn't old enough to vote," she said. But then Franklin, jr., is 22 and it would be insulting to Mr. Farley to suggest that he failed to cast a ballot. Did he vote for his father then, or were the arguments of the Liberty League used to dissuade him? Was there another balcony scene and the echo of another's pleading:

> O Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou Romeo?
> Deny thy father and refuse thy name
> Or if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love
> And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

It seems more likely that though backgammon featured in the courtship, politics was taboo. Or rather, that love transcended politics. For somehow one cannot imagine the dashing Franklin prefacing his words of proposal with a declaration that after marriage a scion of an "economic royalist" would meet her master.

We have nothing but sympathy for the bridegroom who has now to return to school. How can Franklin, jr., who is a law student, get heart-balm out of Blackstone? How can he avoid the garish classroom to cut his Ethel out in little stars? To quote the bard again: "Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books; but love from love, toward school with heavy looks."

The Tenancy Problem.

Farm tenant legislation is almost certain to occupy the attention of the next Congress. The Administration has already given its support to the Bankhead bill designed to assist tenant farmers in acquiring land of their own. Indeed, the Resettlement Administration has taken options on more than 70,000 acres of land with the object of transferring it to former tenants on a long-term payment plan. And Administrator Tugwell has outlined an ambitious program which he hopes the President will submit to Congress.

Some means of rehabilitating destitute share-croppers is urgently needed to relieve the distress caused by the AAA crop curtailment policy. Many investigators, including some in the Government service, have pointed out the hardships to which tenants of the South fell heir when cotton acreage was drastically reduced. A committee under the direction of Norman Thomas and William R. Amberson concluded that "at least 15 per cent, and probably 20 per cent, of all share-cropper families have lost their opportunity to make a living on the land by the only labor they know" as a result of the AAA's crop restrictions.

Tenancy had been increasing for many years, but the problem it involves became far more acute when thousands of landlords dismissed croppers no longer needed to plant and harvest acreage rented to the AAA. The Administration has acquired a real obligation, therefore, to ease the distress of these unfortunate families.

Beyond that, of course, the tenancy system as it has operated in the past is responsible for numerous economic and social maladjustments. It encourages farmers to "mine" the soil for the maximum production of cash crops, while giving no effort to food for home consumption, to conservation or to improvement of buildings and equipment. In brief, it promotes the most irresponsible type of farming, for the tenant usually expects to move on to greener pastures. More than 33 per cent of them actually do move once a year or oftener. Normal community life, adequate education and economic stability are impossible under these conditions.

There can be no question as to the desirability of some action to rescue this forgotten group from destitution and ignorance. It does not follow, however, that the Government should buy each tenant a farm. Dr. Tugwell would like to have Congress appropriate $50,000,000 per year for the transformation of tenants into landowning farmers "until the job is done." Does he mean to say that the Government should provide farms for all tenants? Socialistic Mr. Thomas, after thoroughly investigating the problem, concluded that any remedial program should recognize the fact "that most of the laborers under consideration are poorly prepared to work individually and independently."

To some extent Dr. Tugwell appreciates that problem, for he would replace absentee landlordism by bureaucratic landlordism. Under his proposal tenants acquiring farms through the Government would have to follow certain planting and management orders from Washington for 40 years. During that period they would not be able to mortgage their farms or to make a final settlement of their indebtedness to the Government. Undoubtedly many of the tenants thus established on farms of their own would need close supervision, but it is yet to be proved that that job can be effectively done by the Government.

Many improvements could be made within the tenancy system without attempting to abolish it in those localities where it serves a useful purpose. One step would be a change in the law so as to require compensation to tenants for improvements to the farms they operate. This would encourage initiative and stability of tenure. No doubt co-operative arrangements enabling tenants to raise their own food could also be worked out. Likewise, their status might be improved through organization and collective bargaining.

On a limited scale Federal financial aid to responsible tenants eager to become farm owners should prove to be constructive. But it certainly offers no panacea. When the issue is raised in the forthcoming session it is to be hoped that Congress will grapple with it realistically in an effort to eliminate abuses instead of trying suddenly to abolish the tenancy system.

A sociologist says the best thing for insane persons to do is to work hard. But, doctor, so many of them aren't anything like that crazy.

Electricity Jungle.

Karl K. Darrow in "The Renaissance of Physics."

All matter is stuffed full of electricity, and in fact all matter is electricity. Of this there are two kinds, the positive and the negative. The negative electricity is composed of the very small, very light, very mobile, very agile particles which are called electrons (the commonest word in modern physics). . . . But in addition, in all these solid substances there is a rigid skeleton or framework, which is really the strong and massive portion of the solid; and with this framework the positive electricity is tightly bound. One may think of a solid body as a three-dimensional jungle, in which there are countless trees and countless nimble little animals; the massive motionless trees correspond to the positive electricity, and the footloose, quick-moving beasts to the negative electrons.

Court And Constitution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is rather disappointing to note astute political observers and well known commentators alluding to the "legislative powers" of the Supreme Court of the United States.

There is nothing in the creation of the court, or in our history and theory of legal construction, that gives an iota or scintilla of legislative power to the Supreme Court, or for that matter to any other American court—Federal or State, trial or appellate. This position is elementary, fundamental, unassailable. It follows axiomatically from the separation of executive, legislative and judicial powers of Government, as set forth in our organic law, which is the supreme municipal law of the land.

Stating the above proposition in more practical terms, if a judge becomes a political economist or "legislator" as regards even the common law, still less a law crystallized into a Federal or State statute, he gets above his business as a judge. Therefore, when writers speak of depriving "the Nine Old Men of the right to override acts of Congress" this can only be true in a constitutional sense when the court interprets—just that, and nothing more—a statute as exceeding the powers granted to Congress by the Constitution.

Hence, it can be stated categorically that all American courts have absolutely nothing to do with the wisdom or justice of the laws they interpret. In fine, let's not submarine the Constitution by judicial "construction"—let's use only genuine construction! In this way, we shall achieve at least one kind of Americanism pure and undefiled.

WILLIAM MORGAN HANNON.
New Orleans, La., Nov. 12.

Need For Mr. Winant.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: John G. Winant put principle above party when he resigned his position as chairman of the Social Security Board to answer Republican attacks. He did more; by this action he subjected his personal position and reputation to misinterpretation and attack. Regardless of one's personal opinion as to the wisdom of this action, it is evident that it took real courage and showed that the social security program meant more to him than anything else.

The Post's editorial of November 16 speaks of the unfortunate precedent established if leaders were free to leave their positions for campaign purposes and then return to them. Mr. Winant was not campaigning up and down the land for any party as such, but for the sole purpose of saving the social security program when it faced destruction. Chief Justice Hughes resigned from the Supreme Court to run for President when he deemed it his duty to his country at that time. He was later reappointed to the court because the Court needed a man of his wisdom, ability and integrity.

The Social Security Board needs the ability, integrity, industry and prestige of a man like John G. Winant. He has shown himself big enough to resign for the best interest of his work—we now hope that despite misunderstanding and criticism he will be big enough to return for that same reason.

Political Experiments.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The discussion which in its ramifications has reached the pulpit as well as the press, concerning communism, fascism, socialism and their kindred movements, may serve eventually a good purpose.

Instead of seeing that all these movements are, to a great extent, emergency movements where each nation is trying in its way to meet an after-war disruption, our less consistent thinkers are flooding the newspapers with scarecrow and bugaboo utterances on the specter of communism as the outstanding danger to our nation. But we are probably more in danger of some form of fascism.

Why is it not more charitable to say that all nations are trying experiments, as each nation can best act, to solve world problems just as we as a nation are trying to do the same? The United States can no more accept fascism than it can communism, for neither would fit our needs. And it is the climax of folly to make these questions an occasion of bitterness between different sections of the church.

If Russia wants to try out an experiment and will do it just as Mussolini and Hitler in their respective ways are experimenting, let us agree to let them do their best and worse, if need be. But this is a different matter from saying that we must take sides and make their battles our battles. We have our own problems, but we should be internationalistic enough to see in any national movement anywhere on earth the same attempt which we are making to permit truth to triumph over superstition and obsoletism.

Panama's Reaction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Never have I seen so much enthusiasm in an election in the U. S. A. that has taken place here in Central America. The Spaniards practically went wild when informed that Roosevelt had won. I, being born in Florida and naturally Democratic, could not help but pull for the greatest man in the history of the United States. Even though we were not allowed to vote I wrote letters to everyone in the dear old South that I knew begging and praying to them not to let dear Franklin down. And thanks to intelligence they kept him on top.

I have been down here 13 years and know what revolutions are and had it not been for Roosevelt the U. S. A. would have been in such a catastrophe today.

The "Men Of Chivalry."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent correspondent, the Rev. Urban Adelman, objected to your editorial, "Modern Hessians" (the Moorish troops and foreign legionaries on the Fascist side of the Spanish struggle.)

He objects on the ground that all the "men of chivalry" are on the rebel side, while the "scum" are on the side of the Spanish government.

Christ was a man of the poor people. Christ was opposed to the "men of chivalry" of his day—the Roman soldiery, the money changers, the scribes and Pharisees, the so-called "best people," including reactionary churchmen.

Another Guard's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have before me an article written by a Federal guard who says that he is telling facts, but all the guards are not in that fix.

Nearly all of them are retired men drawing from $100 to $150 per month extra now. I would say that those who are not drawing retirement pay should be considered, the District of Columbia guards as well—one of which I happen to be.

Commissioner For The Philippines.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In one of his columns in The Post, Mr. Franklyn Waltman has said that the Filipinos are deeply concerned over the identity of the American High Commissioner to the Commonwealth of the Philippines, because the next four years will be crucial for the Filipinos, and their prospect for achieving economic and political stability depends in large part on adjusting their relationships with the American people. Mr. Waltman mentioned as possible successors to Frank Murphy, who was elected Governor of Michigan, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, former Senator Harry Hawes, former Representative Butler Hare, of South Carolina, and Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who is now in the islands as the field marshal of the Philippine Commonwealth army.

Being a Filipino and a student of Philippine affairs, as they are developed both in the Philippines and the United States, it is natural that I should be particularly concerned over the identity of the next American high commissioner. A man of the type of Frank Murphy, who has been merely a "yes man" to President Quezon, would not be the right person to maintain American prestige in the Philippines, and to impress upon my countrymen the authority of the United States Government commensurate with its responsibility. Gov. Murphy's accomplishments in the Philippines have been greatly exaggerated in the United States. His success, in my opinion, as governor general, and later, as high commissioner, was due to his willingness to be subservient to the dictates of President Quezon. So long as the highest ranking American official in the Philippines condones and approves of what Mr. Quezon thinks and likes as to how the government is run he would be called, by Mr. Quezon and his sycophants, an excellent governor general and a great friend of the Filipino people.

The late Governors General Wood and Theodore Roosevelt, jr., were not good governors general, according to Mr. Quezon's standards, because they dared to assert their independence of will and superior intelligence, and therefore, did not hesitate to oppose Mr. Quezon's policies when those policies were contrary to the accepted American principles of government. Governors General Harrison, Davis and Murphy were all praised by President Quezon as excellent officials because they suffered him to run the insular government to suit his taste.

None of the men mentioned by Mr. Waltman in his article would, in my opinion, make an ideal American high commissioner to the Philippines. Former Senator Hawes would not be capable of fulfilling the office of high commissioner because of his connections with various Philippine industrial concerns. At present the Senator is the chief counsel for the Philippine Sugar Association, which maintains an elaborate office in the Nation's Capital. He is also an adviser to the Philippine Resident Commissioner to the United States. Again, Gen. MacArthur is too good a friend of Mr. Quezon's.

Mr. Quezon is a very dynamic man, and there is no doubt that he is attempting to serve the Filipino people, of whom he is unquestionably leader. For this reason, the United States needs a man in the Philippines who will see to it that Mr. Quezon does not carry too far his ever-growing dictatorial powers which might endanger the success of the Philippine Commonwealth and jeopardize America's interests in that part of the world.

I would nominate Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, formerly head of the defunct NRA and now a newspaper columnist, for the office of high commissioner. One good turn deserves another, and now is the time for the President to extend the olive branch of peace to the brilliant soldier-writer and appoint him to the Manila post. I am more than sure that Gen. Johnson would discharge the duties entrusted to him creditably and to the glory and honor of the American flag. Gen. Johnson would make an ideal man for the Philippines.

The Beach Road.

THE Chesapeake Beach Railroad has gone out of business, my father said. We were standing in the garden on one of those days in early April which are damp and cold, not with the clean coldness of winter, but with that chill which comes only when winter is behind and the warm days not yet come. Yes, he said, while you were away the Beach Road stopped running.

Stopped running—but then, what will become of Mr. Long, I wondered. He was the perennial conductor of the Beach Road, that 28-mile-long railroad which carried me each Saturday for so many years into Prince Georges County and the world of my childhood. Once, I suppose, its coaches had been shiny with paint, its engine lusty and powerful, and its baggage cars bulging with freight. But that was long before the days when I knew it; when, dangling from my father's hand, I was raced across the cinders and swung up on the platform with a boost from Mr. Long's palm.

The Beach Road ran from Washington down through Southern Maryland to an amusement park and summer development on the Chesapeake Bay. It was a single track road with sidings and ran slightly down hill all the way, through rolling farm land heavy with tall tobacco plants. In the early days, and in fact until recently, the line made enough money for a scanty living by carrying the mail and farm implements and fertilizer down into Prince Georges, Anne Arundel and Calvert Counties, and bringing back hogsheads of tobacco, to be transshipped to the Baltimore warehouses.

Finding our seats on the coach was always difficult of achievement. Generations of bodies had forced their wills upon the yellow cane seats, many of which were broken or sagging. Some of the window screens had holes, through which the cinders poured. The train usually was made up of one or two passenger coaches, through which we scurried searching for two vacant and intact seats; a coach divided by a wooden partition to provide a smoking compartment; a Jim Crow coach, and a freight car. It was years before I learned that all trains were not as bustling and odorous as ours, nor manned by a red-haired engineer, a Mr. Long, a whistling brakeman, and a lean and grave assistant conductor.

Mr. Long was chubby and filled his uniform out in comfortable curves. His face was rosy and creased in a smile. I think it must have brightened his face even when he slept. As he bent over our seats to punch our tickets he always paused to inquire about the family.

About 8 miles down the track my family and I would leave the train at Brown's Station, where one of my uncles met us in the buggy. The horses would be faced with their heads toward the track, so they wouldn't be surprised when the train came whistling down the cut, and bolt. Sometimes my uncles would be late coming, and we'd go in Mr. Brown's store to wait. It would be dark inside the store, and smell pleasantly of harness, plaited straw hats, horehound drops and red and white striped peppermint sticks.

Sundays in winter, when it got dark early and the wind came whistling down the track, the train went back to town at 5 minutes to 6. We could hear it whooping down the cut and would race the horses and get there just in time to light a newspaper and wave it across the rails. The train would slide to a stop, and there'd be a shower of smoke and hot sparks, and everyone kissing each other good-by. Mr. Long would jump down from the steps and boost me up, and we'd find a seat in the car, and I'd go fast asleep, with the swinging coal oil lamps throwing long shadows down the aisles, and the glow of warm lamp light in cabins, fading past our windows.

In summer the train went back at 6 minutes to 4, so we had to leave the country when it was prettiest, the fields lying open and warm in the sunlight, and smelling sweet.

All of that seems a long time ago. Farmers began sending their tobacco to Baltimore by truck, and saving weeks in transit, and the beach was hit by storms, which destroyed the boardwalk, and generally hard times—it had never been very successful at its best—and so the railroad had less and less business to do. It raked up some money somewhere and got a new gasoline-electric engine and coach combined, for the passenger runs, but that wasn't very satisfactory, and after a while the road turned it back.

For a time it ran the passenger coaches up one day and down the next. Then it tried running them down on Friday and back on Monday. And now it has stopped for good.

Mr. Long and Mr. West, the lean and grave assistant conductor, and the red-haired engineer and the burly young brakeman no longer will take me into the country of my childhood. But that country and the little girl who lived in it have been gone a long time. Now the Beach Road is gone, too, the smoke of its engine has blown away from the fields, and the conductor has hung up his cap.

Fair Enough

Ministry Of Sport.

THERE IS TALK of a government ministry of sport and, conquering an old superstition, I now believe it could be a good thing provided it could be kept nonpolitical and reasonably honest as to graft in the presence of strong temptation.

Under efficient, honest supervision sport would attract more participants than nowadays, and there is no reason why this country should imitate the Germans and Italians, who use sport frankly to develop cannon fodder, and the brood stock to produce more cannon fodder. There is something beastly about the deliberate purpose of building up young women to physical symmetry and strength so that they may bear sound recruits for war, and the American attitude toward motherhood is too poetic ever to accept it.

But there can be no doubt that sport would improve the breed of people in this country in the physical sense if brought to the people by the Government because, for all our vaunted athleticism, we are, on the whole, a scrubby lot who point with pride to a small element of famous athletes and kid ourselves into a proud belief that they represent the general run of Americans.

• • • •

SOME IDEALISTS argue that the mind improves with the body, but that is just a wall motto, as every athletic director knows. Some of our great athletes have been Phi Beta Kappas, but more have been great dumb lumps of meat and bone. The mental average of those who get famous on the sport page probably is no more than a decimal point above or below that of people who never made a team.

The opportunity for a Government ministry or department of sport lies in the fact that comparatively few Americans play any game often enough to derive any benefit. Most of those who do play are young, but that doesn't even mean that all the young ones have a chance to play. Initiative is lacking and organization could supply the initiative, the facilities and the program, enlisting in sport not only youth but a great element of men of mature years who are still young enough to play in their spare time.

It is true we have organizations now, but our Olympic authorities made a mesay failure of their responsibility last summer, and the limit was reached when Jesse Owens, the Negro runner, was declared to be no amateur merely because he refused to give a command performance, to the intense social embarrassment of the nabobs who had promised to produce him without consulting his desires.

• • • •

THE AMATEURISM of lawn tennis has been a spectacular fake for 20 years, with professional amateurs, mainly women, earning better returns, one way or another, than most professional fighters and ball players. In amateur boxing, thousands of kids slam one another for the private profit of individuals and the stockholder corporations posing as clubs. And college football has become a flagrant reproach to the moral honesty of institutions which are supposed to set a decent example to the young, and a robust disgrace to the teaching profession whose most august members annually put their names to false affidavits knowing them to be false.

The morals of our sport could hardly be much worse under Government supervision and they would be decidedly improved if a ministry or department of sport were to abolish entirely not only the distinction between amateurs and professionals but the very word "amateur" itself. This would be good riddance, because nobody knows what it means except that it does mean hypocrisy. Then all competitions would be "open," the necessity for polite perjury would be eliminated and the matter of a player's earnings would be something strictly for himself, his paymaster and the tax collector.

TRUE, some of our Olympic friends might object, but then, most of them use many cunning tricks to disguise their pros as amateurs, and, anyway, the Olympics are becoming a great political racket in which the players represent not nations, but political forms and Caesars. It would not be a bad idea to establish an Olympic debating tournament for the discussion of political systems, but to clutter up the sporting arena with childish political salutes, goosesteps, swastikas, sledge hammers and dingbats is to distort the occasion.

But, whether we go to the Olympics or merely play occasional international meets with friendly, civilized nations, we ought to have some efficient way of developing, selecting and conducting the best possible American team. Private organizations have now demonstrated that the job has outgrown them. They fall far short of developing sport to the utmost, for many sections are absolutely barren, and when they do scrape a team together it is by no means the best of which we are capable and is wretchedly mishandled.

The purpose of a department of sport, as I see it, would be to promote sport for the good sport, the people, and the purpose of the big tournament would be to honor the star performers in the name of their country, and thus inspire the rest of the players.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Our Own Radio Court.

Mr. Malakander—Now calm yourself. We all know how you feel, but please try to tell your story.

Case No. 8790—Your honor, a few years ago I married a young woman and we now have five children. I had been twice married before, but I didn't tell her.

Judge—had you been divorced from those other wives?

Case No. 8790—No, sir.

Judge—What happened to them?

Case No. 8790—I dunno; they're around town somewhere.

Judge—But what made you marry with two wives still living?

Case No. 8790—It slipped my mind.

Judge—My good man, why do you come here to ask me what to do in matrimonial affairs as serious as those?

Case No. 8790—I ain't asking you for matrimonial advice. What I want to know is where I can go to have my memory trained.

• • • •

Mr. Malakander—Next case! No. 8971. Now, don't sob!

Case No. 8791—Please, your honor, I am 27 years old and married to a wife 58 who refuses to support me.

Mr. Malakander—Please stop weeping. We appreciate how you must feel in such a situation, but brace up.

Case No. 8791—She leaves me alone all day long while she goes off to some wire mill. And when she comes home she gets sarcastic because she is tired and I am all set for night clubs.

Judge—Do you ask her to accompany you to these night clubs?

Judge—Why?

Case 8791—She says she can't spare the money.

Judge—The thing to do is to go to any magistrate's court and give the facts just as you have given them here.

Case No. 8791—But the nearest court is 3 miles away from my house.

Judge—That's all right, the court will refund your carfare.

• • • •

Mr. Malakander—Case No. 8792. And stop sniffling.

Case No. 8792—I am a lawyer, your honor. I am a graduate of two law schools, have a very good standing with the bar associations and know the laws very thoroughly.

Judge—Yes; go on.

Case No. 8792—That's all I have to say.

Judge—But what are you here for? What do you want to know?

Case No. 8792—I don't want to know anything; I thought you might.

Regulation Of Labor

Berry Adviser Sees Broader Reading For 'Welfare.'

The author of the following is tecanical adviser to Maj. George L. Berry, the Co-ordinator for Industrial Co-operation. Formerly he had been assistant administrative officer of the NRA.

By George Stuart Brady.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

SINCE I EXPRESSED certain opinions in these columns last December at the time of the industrial conference regarding NRA and industrial regulation, something of fundamental national importance has happened. It was not merely the re-election of the President. It was the fact that in making the "big push" all along the line from June to November of this year the opponents of the principles advocated by the Administration have uncovered by their smoke every one of their positions, so that the batteries of those holding the line now have the exact range and a position of tremendous advantage.

In presuming to forecast what results will come from this strategical change, one will get nowhere without taking into consideration the extraordinary leadership of the New Deal Administration. Such columnists as Heywood Broun, whom events have shown to have had more political acumen than most editorial writers, have already rated the President as in line for a higher position in history than his predecessor of the same name or even of other Presidents whose names are by-words among school children.

The opponents, during the campaign of 1936, themselves plotted the battlefield. Many issues might have been sidestepped or softpedalled, but the firing from the masked batteries brought every issue of the New Deal into plain relief before the people, so that one of the Administration chiefs boldly stated a few days before the election that "reform" had become one of the three R's of the campaign.

Sees Election Results As Order To "Find A Way."

NO ONE but a confirmed reactionary could interpret the election as anything but a command to move forward and find a way. No one who rightly judges the character of the Administration can believe otherwise than that the Administration will "find a way," and that it will not merely "consolidate its position," but will remember the very essential principles of good generalship, which Marshal Foch so aptly describes in his book "Les Principes:" "Merely to maintain positions is to prepare implicitly for defeat."

Without such a type of leadership, expert advice, no matter how painstaking and profound, becomes "a mere cloak for amateur strategy," or in cases where the executive is weak and desires to please all, there results only inane and mediocre compromises. We had too much of both types during the years from 1920 to 1932. We are more likely to see Jeffersonian and Jacksonian leadership for the next four years.

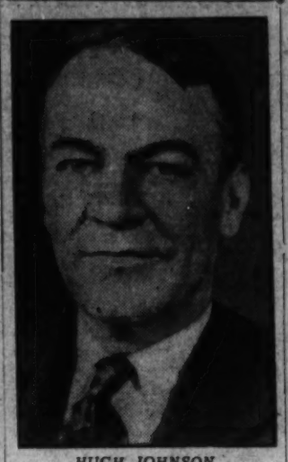
The answer to what is to be done by the Federal Government along business lines was stated in one short paragraph in the Madison Square Garden speech on October 31, which was almost a defiant answer to the goading of the Republican chairman:

Of course we will continue to seek to improve working conditions for the workers of America—to reduce hours overlong, to increase wages that spell starvation, to end the labor of children, to wipe out sweatshops. Of course we will continue every effort to end monopoly in business, to support collective bargaining, to stop unfair competition, to abolish dishonorable trade practices. For all these we have only just begun to fight.

New Deal Principles Described As Not New.

THE PRINCIPLES to be carried forward, and which most of us in the New Deal believe will be carried forward, are not new. They are pertaining to matters which have been crying for solution in this complicated industrial age for a century. As soon as Theodore Roosevelt came to power in 1901, he declared: "I have bound myself to treat the Constitution as a document that places human rights above property rights." The present President has repeated that formula in a multitude of ways.

Later, Theodore Roosevelt said: "We will protect the rights of the wealthy man, but we maintain that he holds wealth subject to the general right of the community to regulate its business use as the public welfare requires." Four days before he became President in 1901 Theodore Roosevelt said in a speech at Minneapolis:



HUGH JOHNSON.

No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to where our legislation shall stop in interfering between man and man . . . All that can be said is that it is highly desirable on the one hand not to weaken individual initiative, and on the other hand, that, in a constantly increasing number of cases, we shall find it necessary in the future to shackle cunning as in the past we have shackled force . . . It is not only highly desirable, but necessary, that there should be legislation which shall carefully shield the interests of wage workers.

From 1901 to 1908 those principles fought for emergence, but the country and the world were not ready to fight hard enough for them. Today, the fight for those principles has reached down to the people, and show every evidence of being successful, and the long battle for economic democracy, progressively waged by Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland, Roosevelt, Wilson, and finally another Roosevelt, has been driven out of its position of trench and dugout warfare into the open. Here is the proposition as laid down by Thomas Jefferson in 1785:

Whenever there are in any country uncultivated lands and unemployed poor, it is clear that the laws of property have been so far extended as to violate natural right.

Words Of Jefferson Translated For Today.

TRANSLATING Jefferson in terms of industrial America of 1936, the New Deal, and the progressives of all parties who have forwarded the principles of the New Deal, will say today:

Whenever there are in any country unused economic capacity and unemployed poor, it is clear that the laws of property have been so far extended as to violate natural right.

That principle, and not any hazy idealism about "Jeffersonian liberty" is the assured formula for what will be done during the next four years. And the first natural detail must and will be the finding of a solution for the regulation of those citizens, individuals or corporations, who hire other citizens, which we popularly call "labor." In other words, there will be regulation of hours to a point where all who want work can share in the available work, and a regulation of basic wages so that no citizen can be employed by another at wages below a level necessary to maintain his family on a proper scale in the community.

A surprising number of men in responsible positions in Washington believe that labor regulation can still be obtained within the limits of the Constitution, and are not looking for a constitutional change further than the ratification of the child labor amendment. They believe that the NRA case was complicated by the mess into which its trade practice regulations had precipitated it, and that the court was certain the country did not approve of the excessive grant of power. It is to be remembered that the Supreme Court in at least one case (Munn vs. Illinois) made a favorable decision that was far more momentous than the unfavorable NRA decision. It stated:

When the owner of property devotes it to a use in which the public has an interest, he in effect grants to the public an interest in its use, and must, to the extent of that interest, submit to be controlled by the public for the common good.

Thus, Congress as well as the President has a mandate, and this year it must recognize the people's charge that when an individual or corporation has a business (property) which depends for its existence upon the public buying, selling, and advertising of goods over State lines, and upon the hiring and employment of other citizens to produce those goods, the production and sale of those goods has an effect upon the business of other citizens in other States, often causing the ruin of other businesses by low standards of labor. When Congress itself sets that down as a definite finding of fact, not leaving it to extra-Government agencies, it is likely that the court will agree that labor regulation is for the "general welfare."

Argues Changed Era Demands Control Of Employers.

History of Schools Shows Changing Trend.

WE HAVE HAD in our school experience a very definite example of the changing position of courts on public regulation when the masses of the people demand such regulation. It was only a century ago that labor leaders who met in Philadelphia to demand free schools for the children of workmen were arrested as dangerous radicals. But eventually, through the years, it was shown that public welfare demanded a knowledge of the elementary branches of education, until today the State assumes without question the right to compel attendance of children at school even against any protests of parents.

How much legal regulation will be necessary to obtain fair competition in that field which is the very basis of fair trade practices—labor standards—will depend upon the degree of co-operation and voluntary acceptance of the principles by the employers themselves. If the principle sinks in, and the social security act and the surplus profits tax are forcing it to sink in, the regulation by the Federal Government need be no greater than a very general statement of principles, with a maximum work-week which would be ample to take care of all reasonable peaks, and thus leave to the State the making of local regulations more stringent to suit local conditions.

The setting of minimum wages is conceded by all to be a stupendous task for a Federal Government in a country with such diverse conditions as the United States, since "living wages" is a relative term depending upon many factors. The solution seems to lie in some form of law that will give the Federal Government the power of an arbitrator in setting standards below which citizens of the Republic cannot be hired by another. This may call, not only for the interpretation of what constitutes "general welfare," but also for an interpretation of what the constitutional expression "involuntary servitude" means in a machine-age democracy.

Roosevelt Calls For Arbitration Of Ship Strike

Tells Mayors, However, That Trip to South America Is More Important.

formed her he hoped to take the matter up with President Roosevelt. Rossi lingered behind at the White House after the main group of mayors had left.

Leaving a conference with the President yesterday morning, at which the maritime strike was discussed, Secretary of Commerce Roper said:

"I think it looks hopeful."

Eight Mayors Sign.

Besides LaGuardia and Rossi, mayors signing the telegraphed arbitration proposal were Frank Shaw, Los Angeles; Joseph K. Carson, of Portland, Oreg.; William McCracken, jr., of Oakland; S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia; Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston, and Meyer C. Ellenstein, of Newark.

Associated Press dispatches reported perishable vegetable supplies at Juneau, Alaska, exhausted because of the strike. N. C. Hatfield, president of the Chamber of Commerce in the far Alaskan capital, wired Seattle the local supply of butter and eggs has vanished, and meat will be gone in a few days.

McGrady, Unionists Confer.

As the strike entered its eighteenth day, with 37,000 men out and at least 178 ships idle in ports, Associated Press dispatches from San Francisco reported Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady conferring with seagoing unions on a much redrafted proposal for control of hiring halls, pivotal issue in the strike. His proposal would provide for a union observer at the halls. Unions demand control of the halls and employers, who claim unions have taken over their management, want at least "neutral" conrtol.

Shippers and striking maritime unions were reported to be awaiting possible Government peace steps from Washington.

The strike continued to spread in the East. Dispatches from New York quoted Joseph Curran, chairman of the seamen's strike strategic committe, as saying the United States liner Washington was unable to obtain a crew to sail on schedule Wednesday. Strikers also claimed 192 men left the Grace liner Santa Paula today.

50 Dig in Gold Mine For Entombed Pair

Superior, Mont., Nov. 16 (AP).—Fifty men, with frost-chilled mud about their ankles, worked through a crumbling, water-soaked mine tunnel tonight in an effort to reach two gold miners, entombe since Saturday night.

The miners, Antone Gustafson, 40, and Oscar Gevart, 45, apparently trapped by a slide in a narrow horizontal tunnel at the Windfall Placer Gold Mine, faced possible drowning if they were not crushed by the tons of mud, rock and gravel.

Little hope was held they would be found alive as the muckers, working in shifts of three in their cramped quarters, passed dirt in buckets out to the tunnel entrance.

After Madrid

By Barnet Nover

The Graveyard of Fascism.

THE STIRRING DRAMA taking place at Madrid has an importance far beyond its bearing on the outcome of the Spanish civil war. Indeed, it may very well prove a great turning point in the history of Europe and the world.

So far as the Spanish government is concerned, the loss of the capital would unquestionably be a serious, but need not necessarily be a fatal, blow. With Barcelona, Valencia, Bilbao and other points in their possession, the loyalists could still continue the fight against the rebels. But if Gen. Franco fails at this juncture, there may be no second chance for him.

In reality the rebel position is perhaps more shaky than is visible on the surface. For weeks—until held up at the very gate of Madrid—the insurgents managed to win an almost unbroken series of victories. Their progress was increasingly rapid. A good part of Spain is, actually or nominally, in their hands.

But these victories can easily prove meaningless. The very size of the area under insurgent control can very easily become, if Madrid is not taken, a liability rather than an asset. However considerable their supplies of airplanes, tanks, heavy artillery, or ammunition may be, the rebels now as ever suffer from a shortage of manpower. That is why Gen. Franco has been forced to depend, to so large an extent, on Moors and Foreign Legionnaires as the spearpoint of his fighting machine. If the loyalists can now put their superiority in manpower to effective use, the jig would be up for Franco.

• • • •

Madrid, however, has during the past ten days been more than the scene of a battle in a civil war. It has become a great symbol. It is, its defenders and their sympathizers say, the front line trench in the struggle between democracy and fascism. And, they confidently predict, it will prove to be the graveyard of fascism.

This interpretation obviously needs qualification. Democracy has, during recent years, been holding its own in many parts of the world. It is difficult to believe, therefore, that democracy in Great Britain or the Scandinavian countries or the United States would be placed in jeopardy whether Madrid falls or not. Yet, on the other hand, there is a very real point in the contention that the repulse of the rebels at this point in the civil war would constitute a real blow at fascism.

• • • •

IT IS AN extremely significant fact, all too often lost to sight, that the much-touted victories of the Fascist dictatorships in the last years have all been external ones. For all their tremendous efforts the Hitler and Mussolini regimes have been unable to parallel within Germany and Italy the economic advance that has taken place in such democratic lands as the United States or Great Britain.

Indeed, the German people are being flatly told that they will have to subsist on less butter, less fats and less meat because the regime needs more cannon, tanks, battleships and airplanes. And in Italy the financial-economic situation remains in such a parlous state that the government no longer prints figures concerning the budget, the note issue or the gold reserve.

It is this very failure of the totalitarian states to give their citizens a larger measure of economic well-being to compensate for the liberties taken from them, that provides the impetus for the drive for foreign victories.

Only in this way can they provide the people with the opiate that alone can make them forget the pains of hunger and regimentation. And it is the imperative need of such victories which, in part, has been responsible for the strange phenomenon of fascism, essentially nationalism carried to the nth degree, suddenly becoming militantly internationalist.

By pooling their efforts against the weak and divided democracies, the dictatorships believe new and greater victories of prestige can be gained.

• • • •

IF THE DEMOCRATIC powers did not at once realize that the Spanish civil war had great international implications, the Fascist nations did. It was not long after the start of the July uprising that they began to supply the rebels with arms, ammunition and instruments of war.

Why did they do so? In part, no doubt, because both Italy and Germany saw a possibility of getting from a grateful Spanish Fascist regime bits of colonial areas and naval bases that might prove very valuable in the future.

But there was also the clear understanding of the fact that a victory of the Spanish Popular Front would be a blow to fascism throughout Europe. For even as fascism was in its origin a device with which to combat communism, so the Popular Front has since come into being as a device capable of fighting fascism.

It had shown its capacity in France. Should it also prove its efficiency in Spain there is no telling how far the movement might spread. Indeed, since the Popular Fronts everywhere consist of elements not in the least hostile to internationalism the Fascist states perhaps foresee the ultimate possibility of an international Popular Front to curb fascism.

If this line of reasoning was in part responsible for the aid given Gen. Franco by Italy and Germany, the dancer now is that, with Gen. Franco faced with the possibility of defeat, his Fascist allies elsewhere in Europe will greatly increase the aid given to him. But whether they can provide him with the manpower he needs is not so clear.

On the other hand if Gen. Franco fails to take Madrid, the loss of prestige suffered by Italy and Germany, the accession of strength given the popular front idea, may prove decisive in the war against fascism.

• • • •

REPEATEDLY during recent years, democracies have retreated in the face of threats by dictators. The non-intervention plan of France was, in itself, a form of this retreat. In return for a promise by the Fascist dictatorships not to violate international law, France and Great Britain agreed not to do what, under international law, they have every right to do.

The fate of the non-intervention agreement has proved, if any further proof were needed, how little the word of any state can be trusted when it sets up national interest as the highest law. But the moment the democracies learn that the bark of the dictators is worse than their bite, when, in particular they discover their own real strength and learn to stand together, the tide of fascism may ebb as quickly as it came.

It is an interesting and significant fact that in democracies the failure of a government is seldom fatal to the regime. Democracies have failed repeatedly in recent years. But the possibility of success is always to be taken into account. There is usually another chance left. For dictatorships, as for Gen. Franco at Madrid, one failure may prove too many. That helps to explain the unusually bitter character of the fighting in and around the Spanish capital today.

Patriotism And Schools.

Under no law of California, finds Superior Judge Peter J. Shields, has the Sacramento school board any authority to bar 9-year-old Charlotte Gabrielli from school because she refuses to salute the flag. He orders the child reinstated in her classes.

It is fortunate that there is no law in California by which a school board can condemn a child to illiteracy for no better reason than that her parents hold peculiar religious notions. For this is all the case with little Charlotte. Her parents are members of the sect called Jehovah's Witnesses. This sect thinks it finds in the Bible a command to pay no homage to any man-made symbol. This includes flags, all flags, any flags.

Far more curious than any notion held by Jehovah's Witnesses is the notion that patriotism can be ordained by ordinances, produced by penalties, promoted by punishment. Patriotism is a flower of the human heart, one of the noblest, and the flowers of the heart are not nourished by force and compulsion.

Text of President's Talk

The text of President Roosevelt's remarks yesterday to the mayors in conference here follows:

You have a lot of problems and I am glad that Fiorello (Mayor LaGuardia) mentioned the fact that there is sympathy for them in the White House—that there is understanding of all of your individual problems. I want to keep in touch with what you do.

I will know in an hour whether I push off for Buenos Aires tomorrow night or not. I think I am going.

I see the Mayor of San Francisco looking at me, but this ship strike on the West Coast could go on for a week. It might go on for two weeks, or longer.

As between this particular strike and whatever effect my visit to South America may have on the peace of the world, the peace of the world is the more important of the two.

I hope the ship owners and the men out on strike will recognize that fact and come together.

I think I can say that the Federal Government will take care of its full share of the burden of relief after you and the Governors of the States have done everything you fully and reasonably can be expected to do in this connection.

If I leave tomorrow night I will be gone until the fourteenth of December. In the meantime, I am working out the Federal budget for the fiscal year 1938 and if your conference will keep in touch with the director of the budget, with Harry Hopkins, Secretary Ickes and the other Federal agencies, we should have things in such shape so that when I get back in December, we will have a clear picture of what the coming fiscal year will be.

It is fine to see you. I thank you all for coming to see me.

The President Will Address Peace Parley, Pay Visit to Rio de Janeiro.

cision to go to Buenos Aires on this premise, it was said. The committee, which had waited on the President with the intent of telling him the strike had grown larger than a local problem, and required Federal intervention of even greater extent than the conciliatory efforts of the Labor Department, left nonplussed.

The President will tsop at Trinidad both on the outgoing and incoming journeys, for refueling of the Indianapolis, but he will not leave the ship on the first of these two stops. The second time he will go ashore.

The White House would not announce the port of Argetnina at which the President will leave the Indianapolis, but indications were that Mar del Plata would be chosen.

Party to Be Small.

James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son; Edward Gallagher, a friend of James'; Capt. Paul Bastedo and Col. Edwin M. Watson his Naval and Army aides, respectively, and Capt. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, will make up the very small party aboard the ship.

The peace conference was initiated by the President on January 30 of last year in a letter addressed to the presidents of the various republics. President Augustin P. Justo, of Argentina, then summoned the conference.

Three newspapermen form the three major press associations will accompany the President on a following ship, the U. S. S. Chester, on the 13,000 mile voyage, longest trip yet taken by the President.

Significant in the President's busy day was the reported "change in the spirit of the membership of the United States Chamber of Commerce toward the New Deal," according to Chamber Chief Harper Sibley.

Sibley told reporters after his call at the White House, "The election clarified things. The chamber's principles are unchanged, but there will be less haste in assembling reports."

Reminded by reporters of the chamber's series of anti-New Deal resolutions adopted in 1935 at the annual convention of the organization, Sibley insisted the purpose of the chamber's leadership has always been "full co-operation with the Administration in power."

Sibley told the President industry has re-employed 8,000,000 men since the depths of the depression, and that but 4,000,000 employable unemployed, excepting professional men, remain in the country. This checked closely with statistics of the National Industrial Conference Board and the Department of Commerce figures, both released last week, which showed less than 9,000,000 peresons unemployed, making no provision in this total for millions of unemployables.

An official statement from rebel field headquarters said their troops had captured a building in University City, north of the Paseo de Rosales, which additional unconfirmed reports said the insurgents also had reached.

(The Paseo de Rosales runs north and west of the Montana barracks, already bombarded from land and air.)

The North Station area, on the other side of the barracks from University City, apparently was the next objective of the attackers.

Heavy shellfire shook this district throughout the day.

Speedy tanks which have been brought into play time and again during the siege of Madrid, led the advance across the Manzanares River, which serves as Madrid's protective "moat."

Behind them the troops, packing machine guns and rifles, forded the shallow stream and swarmed across the plains within the shadow of Madrid's outlying buildings.

As workers in Madrid labored to rebuild fortifications shattered by enemy bombardments, five Fascist warplanes bombed the Cuatro Caminos section of north Madrid, where most of the workers live.

not giving to just one group, but to 65 which come under the Chest."

Governmental Unit Leads.

Heading yesterday's list of reported returns was the Governmental Unit, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, unit chairman, announced 15,697 week-end gifts totaling $116,060.94. This gave the unit 28.5 per cent of its quota.

The Special Assignment Unit, reported by Mrs. Wilson Compton, showed 39 gifts totaling $20,165. Added to gifts previously reported, this gave the unit 77.37 per cent of its quota.

Announcing the unit had "skimmed the cream from its list of prospects," Mrs. Compton said they were now "going after the skimmed milk."

"I am a farmer," she laughed "and I have milked a cow. Any of you who have had this experience know the richest milk is the 'strippings' at the end of the milking. We are going after the 'strippings' and put the campaign over."

Other Groups Report.

The Metropolitan Unit, announced by Chauncey Parker in the absence of Chairman Karl W. Corby, who is ill, reported 1,645 gifts, totaling $27,381.18, bringing 36.3 per cent of its quota.

Robert E. Swope, reporting for the Group Solicitation Unit, announced 4,580 gifts totaling $34,117.65. This unit now has 21.04 per cent of its quota.

As evidence of Washington's willingness to contribute, Chest officials cited the action of C. Mercier, known as the State Department "apple man."

He conducts a fruit business from a small cart at the State Department corner. Yesterday, without solicitation, he offered $10 to "folks worse off than I am."

Many Quotas Exceeded.

It was also announced that various Government agencies had already exceeded their quota. Notable among these was the Farm Credit Bureau, many divisions of which have reported more than 100 per cent above their quota.

Efforts to rout Washington's "four public enemies"—hunger, disease, crime and despair—have gone forward through untiring labors of the Speakers Unit, Chairman Jennings announced. Mrs. Elwood Street, chairman, is in charge of 60 speakers who are available to outline Chest activities and describe the need for gifts.

Another radio playlet—"Other People's Money"—produced by members of local amateur theatrical groups, was given last night over Station WMAL. Others will follow each night at 7:15.

Among the gifts of $100 and over reported yesterday were: $7,000, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss; $1,500, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Gaillard; $1,200, Mr. and Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton; $700, the Rockport Fund, Inc.; $600, William Alexander Julian, $500, Mr. and Mrs. George Shiras 3d, Mrs. Alice Maury Parmelee, National Union Fire Insurance Co., Mrs. Delos A. States to Ask Time Extension On Security Act

Florida Governor Calls Dec. 31 Deadline 'Blackjack for Special Sessions.'

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—Seven Governors, whose States are among 33 which have until December 31 to comply with the unemployment insurance features of the Federal social securities act, began concerted efforts today to obtain a retroactive extension of the deadline from the next session of Congress.

The chief executives, attending the twenty-eighth annual Governors' conference, postponed until tomorrow preparation of a formal resolution demanding more time for the passage of legislation which would enable their States to benefit from taxes employers pay on 1936 payrolls.

Gov. David Sholtz of Florida described the December 31 limit for compliance as a "black-jack to force special sessions of the Legislatures" and said such a session in Florida would cost $200,000 and would have the effect of unbalancing the State's budget.

Coercion Denied.

Vincent M. Miles, a member of the Social Security Board, who had addressed the Governors prior to the discussion, told them he did not know if such an extension would be possible without jeopardizing the constitutionality of the act. He denied there had been any intent by Congress "to coerce a State to do anything."

Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland declared the December 31 limitation was "unfair" because the social security act was passed after the adjournment of the regular sessions of most State Legislatures.

"We face the alternative of losing what money we will pay in or of calling a special session," he said.

Virginia in Dilemma.

Gov. George D. Peery of Virginia and Gov. R. L. Cochran of Nebraska said special sessions in their States had failed to pass unemployment insurance laws. In the event they called others they said such legislation, without emergency clauses, would not become effective by December 31.

Federation of Art Given $85,000 Fund

The American Federation of Art with headquarters in the Barr building is $85,000 richer as result of being named yesterday among beneficiaries of three funds totaling $135,000 "for the furtherance of fine arts," created by the Carnegie Corporation.

The $85,000 will be used for the benefit of the American Federation of Art, which consists of more than 485 separate organizations.

L. B. Houff, jr., business manager and membership secretary, said the newly-established fund would be used "in a general development program carrying the federation to new heights of achievement."

He said a portion of the fund would be used to carry out a program planned for the American Magazine of Art.

Another Step in Pensions for 26,000,000

Scenes like above were duplicated yesterday throughout the country when Federal pension accounts were delivered to employers of 26,000,000 workers.

Questions on How the Security Act Works Answered in First of Series of Post Articles

(Editor's note: The public is asking how the social security act works. The Washington Post answers below some of the major questions about it. More will be answered tomorrow.)

By the Associated Press.

Why did my employer receive yesterday a form called "SS 4" to be filled out for the Government?

This was an initial step to put the old-age pension section of the security act into effect January 1.

Will I get a pension?

Yes, if you reach 65 after 1941 and if you meet the other requirements.

What other requirements?

Principally, you must work in an employment covered by the law at least one day in each of five different years beginning with 1937, and must have at least $2,000 credited to your "wage account."

My "account?"

Your employer, if you work in business or industry, is to be given an "identification number." You soon will get an application blank for an "account number." On this account will be kept a record of your earnings, as reported periodically by the employer. The size of your monthly Government check after you reach 65 will be based on this record.

What workers are not covered?

Farm and domestic help, casual laborers, ships' crews, employes of Federal, State or local governments, the self-employed, and employes of railroads (who come under another pension law), and of religious, educational, charitable and scientific institutions.

Suppose I teach school or am out of work, will I get an account?

You can apply for one, and any wages you get from a covered employment in years to come will be entered on it.

Where will the money for the pensions come from?

The wages of the 26,000,000 employes affected and the pay rolls in those shops each are to be taxed 1 per cent in 1937, and up to 3 per cent in 1949 and thereafter.

Who pays?

The boss must deduct your portion from your pay envelope, match it and turn the money over to the Government monthly. The first payment is due February 28, on January wages and pay rolls.

Will I get back as much as I contribute?

More—the maximum tax is 3 per cent and the least anyone will get back is one-half of 1 per cent more than that.

Suppose I go on working after 65?

Then your check will be held up for every month in which you receive wages from a covered employment.

Can I stay out of the plan?

No, if you work in business or industry.

Can I buy my way in if I own a store?

No, the benefits are not so purchasable.

My uncle has one clerk in his shoe store. Must he report?

Yes.

When will that clerk and I get our applications to fill out?

Your employers must report this week. Employes will get their questionnaires November 24, to be returned by December 5.

Suppose I lose my card and forget the "account number?"

First, you are expected to report the number to the employer as a check so it can be traced through him. Second, your birthplace and parents' names are to be filed to help trace down your number if other means fail.

If I don't receive an application blank, what then?

It is your responsibility and that of your employer to get blanks from the postoffice.

In January, 1942.

Suppose I work several years and then lose my job, can I collect anything at that time?

Not under the old-age benefit system. Another section of the security act is designed to promote unemployment insurance by the States to take care of such instances.

Does the Federal Government administer that?

If I need more than the pension to retire on after 1941, will I get it?

No, the amount depends solely on what earnings have been credited to your account.

How about the movie actor who saves his money and has an independent income?

Independent income makes no difference; the checks will go out to the eligibles just the same at a minimum of $10 and a maximum of $85 a month.

Suppose I die before reaching 65?

Your estate will be entitled to 3½ per cent of the amount recorded on your wage account meaning 3½ per cent of the total wages you have received under the act.

Winant Agrees To Temporary Return to Duty

'Integration' of Security Board, Other Agencies Asked by President.

As the Nation's postmen staggered around their routes with record loads, delivering 5,000,000 social security application blanks to employers of the country, President Roosevelt yesterday prevailed upon John G. Winant, former chairman of the board, to return and administer its affairs, at least temporarily.

Winant visited the White House Saturday to talk over the situation. A lifelong Republican of national prominence, he resigned during the political campaign when that party leveled criticisms at the social security act, in order to be able to reply from a nonpolitical basis to the accusations.

The President released a copy of a letter he wrote to Winant, former Republican Governor of New Hampshire:

"I have been thinking over our talk on Saturday.

"I appreciate the reasons why you are reluctant to resume your work with the Social Security Board.

"But I feel it essential that you help complete the immediate job of organization which you and your associates have had so well under way.

Asks Him to Return.

"Since on Saturday you agreed that if I felt it imperative, you would come back temporarily to complete that job, I am now asking you to do it—to come back for a few weeks, say until the first of the year, for that purpose.

"While I am away, will you be thinking about the problems of integrating the Social Security Board's activities with those of other Government agencies?"

The first step in setting up social security accounts for 26,000,000 American workers began with yesterday's distribution through 45,000 postoffices of the blanks.

Each of the country's employers is required to fill out the blank and return it to his local postoffice by November 21.

The number of employe blanks he specifies will determine the postoffices' next action—that of mailing a blank to every employe in the country. Employer applications are to be forwarded to the Baltimore office of the board for compilation.

Returnable by December 5.

Employe blanks must be returned tot local postoffices not later than December 5. Every worker will receive an account number and will forward his wage record. Employes will receive identification cards and account numbers during December.

The board's 12 regional offices and 56 field offices were swamped throughout the Nation yesterday, according to Associated Press dispatches, which revealed long lines of information-seeking employers stood before the offices all day.

The task, described by officials here as the largest of its kind ever undertaken by any country, has been going on with exceptional smoothness, hte board's spokesmen claim, partly owing to the mechanical bookkeeping set-up used in the Baltimore office, which obviates the vast files necessitated in countries such as England, which use manual tabulation.

How keen are your eyes and your lips?
How to "read" faces
Keen eyes
Long, narrow, deep-set . . . becoming mere slits when focused in thought. Colored portion sharp and piercing. Whites clear. Brow beetling downward—frequently overlapping lower lid at outer corner of eye. A shrewd shopper—a keen judge.
Keen lips

Keen shoppers with an eye to economy and good taste are over-joyed at finding this delicious "double-rich" Kentucky straight Bourbon!

President Taft's Niece Arrives Here With Husband to Celebrate Tenth Anniversary of Her Marriage in Washington Cathedral

Joseph L. Brents Return to U. S. for Visit After Duty in Consular Service in Palestine; Guests of Mrs. Howell Moorhead.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Ten years ago tomorrow, Washington Cathedral was the scene of the marriage of Miss Patricia Herron, niece of President William Howard Taft, then Chief Jusice, and Mrs. Taft, to Mr. Joseph L. Brent, of Baltimore. A reception at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle followed. Yesterday, after five years' absence, Mr. and Mrs. Brent arrived in the Capital to be here for the observance of their anniversary.

They are the guests of Mrs. Howell Moorhead and will later open the house they have taken near Green Spring Valley, for the winter months. They have just returned from Palestine, where Mr. Brent, who is in the United States foreign service, has been First Consul for the past three years, and previous to that they were in Egypt.

It has been five years since they were last in Washington, and their many friends here are glad to welcome them back and to know they will be nearby during the period of Mr. Brent's leave. They will return to the Capital next month again to be the guests of Mrs. Moorhead.

Many of their friends will have opportunity to greet them this afternoon at a cocktail party at which Mrs. Moorhead is entertaining in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Merrill, of Alexandria, who have recently returned from their wedding trip, a world tour on which they were gone for nine months.

Mrs. Harriot Blatch Spending Month Here.

Another visitor in Washington for several weeks' stay is Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, of Greenwich, Conn., who will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gerritt Smith Miller for a month and will be entertained extensively.

Next Monday Elsie Hill (Mrs. Albert Levitt), will entertain the Vassar alumnae at a tea in her honor. Mrs. Blatch, organizer of the Women's Political Union, of New York State, and an outstanding leader in the early suffrage movement, was a member of one of the first classes of Vassar College, having been graduated in 1878. Her mother, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, called the first equal rights convention in the world, a meeting held in 1848 at Seneca Falls, N. Y.

Mrs. Blatch frequently visits in Washington and her wide circle of friends here always look forward to her coming. Her daughter, Mrs. Nora Blatch de Forrest, of Greenwich, carried on the family tradition of leadership as the first woman graduate in engineering at Cornell University.

With many years of distinguished service behind her, Mrs. Blatch still continues her active interest in national and international affairs and for this reason particularly enjoys her trips to Washington. One distinction she claims which is quite apart from this interest, however, is that of being a great-grandmother—one of which she is equally proud.

Distinguished Author Makes Short Visit.

Phyllis Bentley, noted English author of "Inheritance" and other important novels dealing with English life, was another guest in Washington, but she remained only for a brief visit in the Capital, coming Sunday and leaving yesterday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Fayette Dow entertained her during her stay and invited a small group of friends in literary circles to meet her Sunday evening.

Miss Bentley, a slight, animated person with finely chiseled features and soft grey hair, has great charm, takes keen interest in world affairs and discusses them with a decisiveness which leaves no doubt as to her viewpoint on any issue. Through all her conversation there runs a gayety and wit.

She wears her hair in a bob, curled around the back, and told an amusing story of how she happened to adopt that style. Some critic had asserted her books were masculine; that they lacked the feminine touch. She had been wearing her hair in a straight bob, but was so annoyed she decided to be entirely feminine, let it grow longer and worn it curled ever since.

She is now on a lecture tour which has taken her through the South and Middle West, and went yesterday to address a gathering in Bethlehem, Pa. She will speak in New England and expects to leave early in December on her return to her home in Halifax, Yorkshire, which is the setting for most of her nine novels. Her latest book, "Freedom Farewell," was published last February. She was in the United States two years ago, but her visit here as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Dow was her first in the Capital.

Among the friends who were asked to meet her were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stafford, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Dell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wood and Mrs. Mary Ross Gannett.

International Affairs Mrs. Howard's Subject

Mrs. George Ross Howard, who will speak today at the Sulgrave Club on international affairs, will give special emphasis to Spain, highlights of the forthcoming Pan-American Congress and its delegates, England's role as peacemaker and De Valera's hopes for the Irish Free State.

Development of the labor system will be her national theme. She will close her lecture with brief mention of names in the news of the day and a resume of Washington's first Town Hall forum on Sunday evening.

Dr. Patterson Gives Luncheon For Dr. Mancia

Cuban Here to Decorate Gen. Keen; Mrs. Mann, Sister Hostesses.

By Dudley Harmon.

Monday was saved from being the usual let-down after Sunday by a luncheon and a cocktail party yesterday afternoon—the first of an official nature and the second strictly social. The Cuban Ambassador, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui, entertained for Dr. Manuel Mancia at lunch, and Mrs. William T. Mann and her sister, Miss Betty Beale, invited a few friends in from 5 to 7 at their home on Tracy place.

On a twin mission, which includes being present at the centenary of the Medical Library and Museum and bestowing a medal on Brig. Gen. Jefferson Keen, Dr. Manica arrived from Cuba several days ago with his wife and daughter. Cuban Secretary of Sanitation, he will this afternoon bestow the Carlos J. Finlay decoration on Gen. Keen, who is retired, for his services during the United States military occupation of Cuba.

Also present at the ceremony will be Dr. Finlay, son of the man for whom the medal is named, and professor at the University of Havana.

Later yesterday in the afternoon, 2324 Tracy place was a hive of activity as Nancy Mann and Betty Beale entertained at cocktails. Both wore the hostess gowns which are becoming so popular the country over. Mrs. Mann's consisted of a green and silver blouse with a black skirt, and her sister's was a black taffeta frock with a long skirt and square decolletage, with which she wore a handsome necklace and bracelet of green stones set in silver.

Present were Prince del Drago, newly arrived First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, with the Marquis Capomazza, also of the Italian Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, the Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schlatter, who are moving into a Connecticut avenue apartment December 1 from their home in Alexandria; Mrs. F. Wilkinson Bunker, in gray tweeds; Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell, with the latter's uncle, Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill; Miss Dianne Rowland, Miss Rebecca Trucco, Mr. Frank Curie, Miss Florence Harris and Mr. William K. Ryan.

Miss Mary Keller Engaged to Marry

Betrothal to Mr. Goodhart Is Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert H. Keller, of 3621 Van Ness street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Cornelia Keller, to Mr. Raymond J. Goodhart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Goodhart, of Washington. The announcement was made at a party given by the young couple last night at the home of Miss Keller.

Both the bride-to-be and her fiance attended the University of Maryland. Miss Keller was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority and Mr. Goodhart belonged to Alpha Tau Omega. The wedding will take place in the spring.

Georgia Society Will Hold Dance

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH BRENT, who have recently arrived from Palestine, where Mr. Brent has been serving as United States Consul. They are guests of Mrs. Howell Moorhead.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Phyllis Richardson is quite the observing young lady! She has been seriously taking up riding at the Hanna Moore Academy, near Baltimore, and in connection with this has had the great privilege of going through some very famous stables. Not long ago she visited the Vanderbilt collection of horses and has been raving about them ever since.

Telling her mother about them, she said: "Mother, you've no idea what beautiful horses the Vanderbilts have—why they are really very nice and there are so many!"

Cousin Bob McCandlish who was listening to all this, humphed and retorted: "Well isn't it a good thing that we have Phyllis to go out and gather news like that for us—of course, we had no idea that the Vanderbilts had any horses—not much."

• • • •

It is going to be a gay party at the Richardsons' home, White House, when Randy entertains next Saturday. There is to be the huge dance at Willard Hall for Mary Senate Howes, which will be preceded by a gathering at the home. Anne Barrett, of Warrenton, Sally McCandlish and Betty Marsh are going to spend the week-end with Randy, and then, to, there wil be several guests imported from New York.

From what one hears of the plans and bustling the young hostess has been making, there will be, among other things, a stag line that will put those at West Point and Annapolis, to shame.

And what will Johnnie Dent do now that his family is about to up and leave for the tropics? Even though he was living here and the Col. and Mrs. Dent were over in Baltimore, still that is not so far away. However, stations cannot last forever, and so in the spring, May 4, to be exact, the senior Dents will sail from New York for Panama.

Margaret Spier has one of the most unusual pocketbooks we have ever seen. It is of brown alligator, and fastens with an intriguing clasp that, upon closer examination, turns out to be a tiny camera and actually takes pictures. So, beware—should you see this little brunette out tea dancing and carefully carrying her purse . . . you may rest assured that she has started the hobby of catching some of the odd expressions one sees on fellow-daneers faces, during collisions, elbow bumpings and heel-and-toe encounters.

Mrs. Farley Arriving.

Mrs. James A. Farley is arriving in Washington today and will be at the Mayflower during her stay in the city.

D. A. R. Chapter To Stage Ball Saturday Night

Plans are being made for the seventeenth continental ball of Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter, D. A. R., to be held Saturday night at the Carlton Hotel. Mrs. Edgar E. Good is chairman of the ball; Mrs. Goodwin W. Miller, vice chairman; Mrs. John L. De Mayo, chairman of the patroness committee, and Miss Frances E. Zebley, chairman of the young ladies' committee.

When first founded, the ball was held during the annual continental congress of the D. A. R., and the pages for the congress were guests of honor. After the inauguratiion of the famous "Pages' Ball," Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter has held the ball usually near the Thanksgiving season, and devoted the proceeds to providing scholarships for mountain children at Crossnore School, contributing toward the upkeep of other schools, and to sending underprivileged children of the city to camps during the summer.

On the list of patronesses are two young women of Paris, France, the Misses Karen-Marie and Helene Owen, who are visiting in this country and at present are at the Shoreham. They are members of the Benjamin Franklin Chapter, D. A. R., of Paris.

Patronesses includes Mrs. Charles B. Keesee, Mrs. William Pough, Mrs. Elmer T. Boyd, Mrs. David Caldwell, Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, Mrs. D. L. Rice, Mrs. Wesley Hanford, Mrs. Joseph J. Greenlaw, Miss Janet Richards, Miss Agnes M. Randolph, Mrs. B. Edwin Erikson, Mrs. Albert S. Boles, Miss Luella Chase, Mrs. Alexander H. Bell and Mrs. Clayton E. Emig.

Also Mrs. Frank Morrison, Mrs. William D. Leetch, Mrs. Mallette Spengler, Mrs. Earle W. Richardson, Mrs. Edward N. Digley, Mrs. Sterling Eagleton, Mrs. Leis Rhodes, Mrs. Leonard W. Richardson, Mrs. John F. Wolfe, Mrs. Harvey P. Baxter, Mrs. Joseph C. Gardner, Mrs. Carroll J. McGuire, Mrs. Bessie W. Palm, Mrs. Charles Vernon Hill, Mrs. George D. Sullivan, Mrs. Marion S. Alley, Mrs. Fred H. Bushing, Mrs. William R. Lane, Mrs. William F. Bullis, Mrs. Arthur E. Kimberley, Mrs. Charles Nash and Mrs. Graham W. Parkinson.

Howes Have Guest.

The Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. William W. Howes will have as their guest at the Mayflower, Mrs. Samuel Stone, of Attleboro, Mass., who will arrive today to visit their debutante daughter, Miss Mary Senate Howes.

Society Notes

Senator and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis are expected to return to Washington for the season on Chirstmas Day. Senator Lewis, who has been vacationing in Pinehurst, N. C., is now in Chicago.

The Charge d'Affaires of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Dr. Josef Nemecek, will entertain on Friday afternoon at a cocktail party at the legation in honor of Dr. Ivan Franges, secretary of the Yugoslavian Legation. Dr. Franges will leave Washington shortly to work at the foreign office in his country.

Senor Don Miguel Lopez Pumajero, Minister of Colombia, and his daughter, Senorita Lucia Lopez, left Washington yesterday to attend the Pan American peace conference in Buenos Aires.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Fowler and their daughter, Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler, expect to leave Washington today by motor for Palm Beach, where they will open their home at 14 South Lake Trail, and remain for the winter season.

The Comptroller of the Curency, Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, has returned to Washington from a trip to California.

Mrs. John Gibbons Leaves for New York.

Mrs. John Gibbons has gone to New York to remain until the end of the month.

Mr. William Beale, jr., of 2324 Tracy place, is a guest of the Marine Terrace, Miami Beach, Fla.

Miss Celeste Whelan, of Philadelphia, has arirved in Washington to spend the season with her brother, Mr. John Whelan.

Mr. Eben F. Comins has left for Boston, where he will spend a week. He will give a talk at Wellesley College, near Boston, on his recent trip to Mexico.

Mr. Comins' exhibit of drawings of Mexican types is now on exhibition at the Farnsworth Art Museum of the college.

The Michigan State Society will hold a meeting on Thursday evening at the Lafayette Hotel. Plans will be made for a dance to be held at the same hotel on Friday evening, December 11.

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde will entertain this afternoon in his apartment in honor of his niece, Mrs. Guignard Sparks.

Mrs. H. P. Howard, of San Francisco, is stopping at the Dodge.

Miss Newton, Rev. Murray Are Married

Bride Is the Daughter of Former Secretary to President Hoover.

Of much interest to Washington was the wedding in Minneapolis yesterday afternoon of Miss Grace Laura Newton, only daughter of former Representative and Mrs. Walter Hughes Newton, to the Rev. Philip G. Murray, of Washington. The bride's father came to the Capital as a member of Congress in 1919 and later served as secretary to President Hoover.

The Rev. W. S. Abernathy of Washington performed the ceremony, which took place at the home of the bride's parents and was followed by a reception. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory velvet made with long sleeves and a short train. The neck was shirred and there was a slight fullness at the shoulders of the gown. She wore a wreath of white roses in her hair and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Her maid of honor and only attendant was Miss Ferne Schafer, who wore a frock of aquamarine crepe and carried yellow roses. Mr. John Marshall Newton, the bride's brother, was best man.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live at 2011 Ashland avenue, St. Paul, Minn., where the bridegroom will assume the pastorate of Park Baptist Church. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Murray, of Staten Island, N. Y., and was formerly assistant minister of the Calvary Baptist Church in Washington. He attended the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. Mrs. Murray attended George Washington University.

Miss Jones to Speak at 20th Century Club

The music section of the Twentieth Century Club will open its winter season of lecture recitals at 2 p. m. Friday, when Miss Beatrice Pinkney Jones will speak on the subject "Musical Contrasts." The meeting will be held at the Arts Club, 2017 I street, and a luncheon at 1 p. m. will precede the meeting.

Orvis A. Schmidt Wins Chicago Bride; Now on Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Orvis Adrian Schmidtt, the latter formerly Miss Elizabeth Merriam, daughter of Dr. Charles E. Merriam, of the University of Chicago, were on their wedding trip today after their marriage in Chicago Saturday.

The couple met in 1934 on a student tour of Japan. Mrs. Schmidtt represented the University of Chicago and Mr. Schmidtt represented Tufts College, near Boston, at which he had a graduate fellowship. He is now a research assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, and they will reside in Washington, according to the Associated Press.

LaGuardias Here.

Arts Club to Stage Side Shows Tuesday

The Arts Club will have one of its most colorful evenings tonight "Country Fair Night"—with all the artists doing their bit to give it the atmosphere of a real fair.

Numerous attractions are planned which include the usual "side show," booths for various skill games, fortune tellers, bingo, hot-dog stands, peanut vendors, balloon men, organ grinder and an exhibit of "prize" vegetables.

The gallery will be transformed into the "fair grounds" with the decorations in charge of Miss Ann Fuller Abbott, assisted by Mr. Hugo Inden. The event is sponsored by the auxiliary committee, including Mr. William J. McManus, Miss Lilla La Garde, Mr. Lyle A. Brookover, Mrs. William R. Chapline, Miss Eleanor Parke Custis, Mr. Charles A. R. Dunn, Mr. Harold Allen Long, Mr. Lynch Luquer, Mr. Rowland Lyons, Mrs. Pembroke Pitt, Mr. Walter S. Studdiford, Mr. A. Lenox Uhler, Miss Marie E. Walcott and Miss Elizabeth Will.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Two Bachelors, One Married Couple and One Young Girl Give "Rebekah" Benefit of Their Opinions.

"Maybe some young persons would be willing to say what they think," wistfully wrote the 23-year-old correspondent whose letter, signed "Rebekah," was published in this column last week. "Rebekah's" problem had to do with her inability to reconcile her early moral training with the pagan philosophy of her matrimonial-minded suitors.

She has broken off one engagement because of a difference in opinion on what constitutes ethical conduct for an affianced couple and is wondering whether to break her second engagement for the same reason. Passing over the moral side of the question, as one in which the correspondent is already well schooled, this columnist cited social, emotional and scientific reasons why she should not desert her standard. Today's column reveals what many readers of "Rebekah's" letter think of her fiance's attitude. M. H.

* * * *

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is the first time I have ever written to a department or column like yours. I have read some interesting discussions in your column, but the one in The Post of November 12 was the first that ever inspired me to write. The letter was signed "Rebekah." I think she must be a wonderful girl of great courage and fine character.

* * * *

I am a young man 23 years old, of good family. My parents gave me good training and advice at home and did their best to send me through school. However, there are several children and we are not wealthy, so I have just had high school training and one year in college. I graduated from high school at the age of 16. This is just by way of giving you a sketchy picture of myself.

* * * *

My real purpose in writing is to say that since high school days I have stuck by a resolution to lead a clean life, keep a clear conscience and be worthy of a fine girl when I marry. She has every right to expect of me what I hope to find inher. Some fellows laugh at the single standard. The majority of them do, I am sorry to say. Their advice is: "Have a good time; take your fun where you find it. When love is there for the taking, why not take it?"

* * * *

I can't see things that way. I feel it is my duty to myself to be a man and a gentleman, and I have only respect and admiration for the girl who, like "Rebekah," wishes to steer clear of immoral association. Somehow, I don't mind being called "old-fashioned." In fact, I rather like it. The term seems to be used for describing every minority group these days, anyway . . . So, with genuine interest in your column and best wishes for "Rebekah," I remain,

VIRGINIAN.

"Stand By Your Guns."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I want you to know that there are many who regard your answers as decisive and the product of reason and intellect and a spirit of fair play. In reference to "Rebekah's" problem, asking how she may preserve her integrity and her ideals, I wish to say that I think your answer was the only possible one. If she stands by her guns she will never regret it. The policy she has so far pursued is the only one worthy of a person who has a mite of self-respect.

* * * *

I happen to know some young ladies who, by the use of just enough patter and small talk, have prevented such serious crises arriving in their love affairs. The results in such cases have been to the advantage of all concerned. Yours very sincerely,

SOUTHERN MAN.

Cites Sixth Commandment.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In all the time I have been reading your interesting column I have never seen you try so hard to pussyfoot as you did in advising the young girl who subscribes herself "Rebekah." To those of us who are familiar with the Ten Commandents, "Thou Shalt Not Commit Adultery" is sufficient reason to cling to virginity and good behavior. Moreover, good society demands that all should conduct themselves in strict accordance with the laws of good morals.

* * * *

I would advise "Rebekah," if she would be happy in later years, to discharge in no uncertain terms the boy friend who expects unreasonable privileges, and to endeavor to cultivate friendships with persons who place some premium on human decency. Her stupidity must have already assumed enormous proportions, as she seems not to know the difference between the roads to happiness and human misery. OSCAR.

A Wife's Opinion.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In glancing over my husband's shoulder a few moments ago as he pounded away on his typewriter with vim and vigor, I noticed he was writing you concerning "Rebekah's" letter, which was published in your column last week.

Frankly (and I hope he won't mind) I think his letter sounds rather self-righteous and even a little old maidish. Of course, I agree with him that every girl should remain chaste until she is married, but I also think every intelligent girl wants to do that.

* * * *

"Rebekah" says the man in question loves her. I say—no, he does not. That isn't love. Love is a sacred thing, and for a lasting one it must be kept clean and shining. I sincerely believe the girl who yields to a man before marriage will never, never forget and will always regret that she made the mistake.

* * * *

My advice to "Rebekah" is to drop the man like a "hot potato," and to seek wholesome, clean friends elsewhere. The minute a friend of the opposite sex makes a move the least suggestive, the thing to do is to drop him. He will then understand that he has become acquainted with the sort of girl he will some day wish to marry, and that he has been a little hasty . . . Suppose "Rebekah" did submit to this man, and later he changed his mind about wishing to marry her, as he probably would? How could she offer herself in holy matrimony to a man with any pride? Take it from me for what it is worth, resisting temptation makes one feel grand! I know!

OSCAR'S WIFE.

Finds Petting "So Boring."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Rebekah's" letter of November 12 gives me the courage to tell what I have been up against ever since I came to Washington. My case is not entirely like hers, but I have the same complaint to make she has. Is there one decent man in the City of Washington? If there is, I haven't met him.

* * * *

I came here several months ago from another city and since then I have gone out with as many boys, if not more than I went out with at home. The last few months before I left home I went steady with one of the grandest boys that ever lived. We were both quite young in actual years but old enough to "know better." We found out that certain things weren't good for us, so after that we avoided them. We found out that we got along much better being just good friends.

* * * *

I've met all kinds of boys everywhere—at school, through friends and even at church, but every last one of them is the same. They don't want me for my friendship. They want me for what they think I can and will give. I did fall for one—one I thought was different. If anything he was worse. I've just about given up all hope of ever meeting a decent man in this city.

The indecency is not the only objectionable feature. The whole thing is so boring. To have to sit hour after hour and do nothing but pet bores me stiff. It is so monotonous. It wears on my patience, my nerves, and even, in some cases, my strength. And then it's so disgusting. Why in heaven's name can't they just be friends with me? Good companionship is far more satisfying.

It may be my fault, but I can't see how. I don't encourage them. I'd like to quit going with boys altogether, but I can't see as that would get me anywhere. It certainly wouldn't take me any closer to the kind of boy I want to meet. There must be one such boy in Washington! DISGUSTED.

Increase Your Charm

MANY GIRLS, he said, think that a man is only attracted to those who have pretty faces or divine figures.

Well, if that were true, a great number of girls now happily married, comfortably settled in their own home and living contentedly with their children and husbands would never have had a chance to make that trip to the altar.

Men are not so much attracted by a pretty face as they are by the girl who has imagination as well as emotion. One who isn't hemmed in too narrowly by her immediate surroundings or takes herself too seriously. Who has a sense of proportion and, hopefully, a sense of humor. Also ability to get a new and outside viewpoint. Who shows by her manner that she will not be the possessive and dictatorial wife. Who will be quick to recognize and encourage a man's capabilities, yet not try to reform him to her own way.

If you impulsively speak right out before thinking—don't do that. Saying the first flash that comes into your mind shows you lack the poise and mental grace that charming people always have. Tact is kindliness, generosity, understanding, sympathy and tolerance.

If you are a tactless blunderer no one will ever tell you so, but you will often be left out of things.

Many embarrassing situations grow out of ignorance of what is the correct thing to do in social contacts. Such little points as etiquette of introduction, table manners, how to conduct oneself in public places, as theater, restaurant, concert.

Being yourself is the wrong self to be unless you know you are a "charming self." For mannerisms and habits that detract from your charm simply are not being a likable "self."

Don't try to look like someone else. Get a vision of what you could be like at your best, then work toward that. Don't save your nicest clothes for some distant important occasion. You never know whom you will meet on the day you are looking your worst.

There are ten steps to popularity that every girl can easily climb. These steps are fully explained in our new 40-page booklet, "You Can Be Popular." It will show hidden values in you that you can develop very much to your own advantage.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "You Can Be Popular," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

French Countess Finds That Power Of Second Sight Is a Mixed Blessing

Gift of Prophecy Has Been in Her Family for Generations.

By Elizabeth Young.

IT IS a mixed blessing to possess the gift of second sight, as the Countess Alain de Pierrefeu can testify. For generations the gift of prophecy has cropped out in her family, which is of mixed Welsh and Scottish blood.

Sometimes the coming event which casts its shadow across her sensitized spirit is joyous in nature. Other times it is foreboding and sorrowful. Sometimes the augury visits her in the guise of "a voice with words;" other times it comes to her in the form of a picture hovering just in front of her mind; and still other times it comes to her in dreams. And the message is not to be denied. It is always fulfilled.

Former Bostonian.

The Countess de Pierrefeu is the former Elsa Tudor, of Boston. Her title derives from her marriage, shortly after the turn of the century, to a member of the French aristocracy who was killed in the first days of the World War. An indefatigable worker for world peace, she has emerged from the comparative retirement of her 900-acre estate, The Sanctuary, at Antrim, N. H., to represent the People's Mandate Committee of Boston as delegate to the Inter-American Peace Conference, which opens in Buenos Aires December 1.

Recently returned for Europe, where she passed the summer and fall working in the interests of world peace, the Countess stopped in Washington last week while en route to Miami, Fla., where she plans to join other delegates on a plane flight to South America. She was the guest of Mrs. Carolyn D. Hastings at the Shoreham Hotel while here.

The tragedy of widowhood cast its black silhouette across her dreams long years before the World War broke out, the Countess de Pierrefeu admits. Her husband was employed as meterological engineer with the Illinois Steel Co., of Chicago, when she had her first soul-shaking premonition she was to lose him; that he was to be drawn into some great maelstrom from which he would not return. She knew she would seek to follow him, but in vain. She was away from her husband when her sleep was first broken by disturbing dreams indicating what was to come, and at first she chose to ignore their import. After a time she wrote her husband, asking what it could mean. An exchange of letters on the subject followed and when her husband, a French officer, was found mortally wounded on the battlefield, the first of these letters was discovered in a packet over his heart. She had followed him as far as she could. She was in a front-line hospital, in charge of a ward where the most severely wounded were treated.

Foresaw Revolution.

As the war dragged on, a picture persisted before her mind of revolution in Germany. To a friend she remarked, "You will see that this war will end by revolution in Germany"—("And that's just the way it did end," she added, when recounting her prediction.) The countess has never seen another threat of war the nature and proportions of the so-called World War, but she had foreseen revolution all over Europe in advance of present outbreaks.

Working for peace at Geneva, years after the armistice was signed, she was awakened one night by a voice saying distinctly, "Your brother will not live . . ."

"I knew perfectly which brother was meant, although I had several brothers and no particular reason to fear for the health of any of them," the countess said.

For generations, the gift of second sight has cropped out in the family of the Countess Alain de Pierrefeu (above). She is the former Elsa Tudor, of Boston, whose forefathers came from Wales and Scotland. Her late husband was one of the first French officers known in America to be killed in the World War.

"Or perhaps it would be more truthful to say that I had had a letter from my cook at The Sanctuary in New Hampshire, mentioning that a certain brother then staying there was suffering from a neglected cold. It was this brother the voice referred to."

The countess awakened her son, they packed immediately and left Geneva at dawn after a hasty breakfast. They managed to catch a boat at Havre, without losing a moment's time, and were one day out of New York harbor when a cable reached them saying, "Uncle Billy was killed in an automobile accident yesterday."

"It was the brother who had the cold, the countess said. "I got there just in time for the funeral."

It may be that happiness casts no shadow as it advances across the years. Yet when happiness is in store for the countess or those she loves, she divines its oulines —though indistinctly.

"I remember my eldest daughter's questioning me: 'Mother, when shall I meet the man I really wanted to marry?" the countess continued. "'I can feel him coming now,' I told her. 'You will meet him within two years, and it will be a very happy marriage.' And it was—and is. Those things do happen—" she referring to the materialization of prophesy.

The Countess de Pierrefeu maintains a realistic attitude of mind toward her gift. She knows the psychiatrists' evaulation of dreams and their meaning. She mentioned a book on dreams written by Henri Bergson, the renowned French philosopher-scientist, as saying that science now has an explanation for dreams of all kinds, with the sole exception of prophetic dreams. "The prophetic dream we have no explanation for—" she quoted Bergson as saying.

For some years now the countess has been keeping account of her prophetic dreams, jotting them down in her diaries, and it is her intention to submit her experiences in book form one day. Asked for her own explanation of the nature of prophetic dreams, the countess said:

"I can only explain them in the words of Tennyson in 'Locksley Hall'—Coming events cast heir shadow before.' I think they do. I think the sensitive see the shadows. Those who aren't sensitive, don't."

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Some Causes of Dizziness.

The symptom of dizziness is usually of short duration and need not be regarded with great concern. Too much tobacco or other toxin may be responsible or the digestive tract may be involved with an upset liver. Quiet, plus a sizable dose of epsom salts, generally relieves the situation completely. Or, again, the tissues may be loaded with water, thus interfering with circulation, and the kidneys will not handle the situation as speedily as we would wish. As soon as the fluid balance is restored all signs of vertigo often disappear.

But there are some instances in which a sense of going "round and round" is significant and a careful search must be made for the cause, as the phenomenon may be incapacitating or even dangerous. One often wonders how many accidents due to falls have their inception in a momentary attack of lightheadedness.

As a rule, the condition does not appear alone but is accompanied by impairment of hearing, ringing in the ears, headache and nausea. Sometimes it is so severe that the patient will involuntarily grasp at some fixed object in order to retain his balance. We preserve our equilibrium—that is, the ability to stand upright and to walk straight—because of the precise balance of machinery between the inner ear, the vestibular nerve and certain structures within the skull. If disease attacks any portion of this delicately correlated pathway the sensation of of whirling may appear.

Oftentimes the trouble originates in the inner ear where infection may have wrought havoc. Furthermore, we know that the blood supply must be preserved intact and be sufficient in amount. Anything, therefore, that changes the flow of blood or diminishes the caliber of the arteries supplying the internal ear may give rise to the symptom. Toxins can lead to spasms of the arterial wall, which will decrease the quantity of blood carried by a vessel, and they may came from infections about the head, particularly the sinuses, the teeth and the tonsils.

Mild corrective measures should be applied first. We must make sure that both the Eustachian tubes are open so that air can reach the middle ear spaces via the throat. If one of these channels is closed vertigo may be felt on descending in an elevator or whenever the air pressure changes. This is occasionally observed by airplane passengers. It is important, therefore, that pilots shall not suffer from throat infections likely to obstruct the normal flow of air from the throat to the ear. If reeling is preceded by earache, that fact alone gives us sufficient clew to infection within this area.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"SOMETIME this winter I'm getting new rugs," said our neighbor, "and I want to plan my present refurnishings to suit them. The main problem right now is the walls. What color wall paper would you get—also what in the world shall I plan on for the rugs? I'm all at sea about selections."

She's the most attractive thing, and so is her house. That's why we knew she'd end up with the prettiest living room on our block—without any tips from us. But of course we're always ready to say our piece.

We suggested a clear India tea color for the walls because she has a sofa in apple green and a pair of easy chairs in an antique floral pattern. Then her draperies are made of bronze colored taffeta, so we thought that her rugs might be nice in basic tones of rusty rose. She has some lovely lamps with green porcelain bases and an apple green china tea set that we'd like to own ourself. In fact it's a nice room already, and we think it will be all but perfect when the additions are made.

Child Can Learn How to Count Through Games

Mothers Can Teach Them Simple Arithmetic at Early Age.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

AS A RULE children are unable to count well before they are six, and many of them are even slower in learning. The reason is partly that they have very little practice in counting before they go to school. With no conscious effort at all a child can begin to learn numbers at three or four.

One mother played a game with her children from the time they were between two and three, which was both instructive and entertaining for the child.

Lesson Is Game.

She put a pile of blocks or toothpicks into a corner and sat down at a little distance from it. Then she would ask the baby to go bring her one of the objects in the pile. Next she would say to the child "Now bring me two."

At first he would hesitate, not knowing what she meant. But after a few experiments and corrections he succeeded, and before long was able to count as many as ten objects. The child even could add and multiply various units.

Children can learn, and indeed learn without effort long before they are usually reqquired to do so. They learn every minute from their toys and from play, and if mothers will occasionally join in the play and teach along the natural lines that the child is used to, they can help him attain a vast store of miscellaneous and useful knowledge without overstraining him in any way.

Actual Pleasure.

Furthermore, the acquiring of knowledge in this informal fashion is an actual pleasure to the child. If it is put off until he goes to school the chances are that it will become an unwelcome task.

The one thing for the mother to keep in mind is never to let these games become lessons, never to insist on the child's playing them if he is tired or uninterested, and never to be cross and exacting.

New Wall Colors.

If you'd like something refreshingly different for your walls, consider some of the new colors shown in Elizabeth MacRae Boykin's new bulletin, "How to Select New Colors for Your Walls." It will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 16.

THE LOCAL style girls, a nervous and high-strung lot, dither rather easily at best, but recently they have been positively whirling in the streets over the visit of Capt. Edward Molyneux, the noted fashion creator from Paris. And truly, there is no more unusual figure in the field than the captain, who pocketed war decorations from Britain and France and then dove into the designing business with enormous eclat and success.

ALICE HUGHES.

Now he has reached such stature as a designer that the possesion of a few little Molyneux items is a bit like owning the Legion of Honor, and appearing in one in a large, watchful crowd is to see the social standing go up like a 1928 stock market graph. This may be faintly silly, but it is none the less true.

Eddie announced, the moment he wheeled off the Europa, that he was here just for fun—and he began to have it in great gobs. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne fed him royally at their Murray Hill hut, and Clifton Webb, the dancer who is at present reclining in a drama, tossed an evening party in his honor. Meanwhile, it is only fair to say that the captain is keeping a keen eye on the backs of the rich American women to whom he peddles raiment in Paris, London, Cannes, Biarritz and Monte Carlo. He thinks that is fun, too.

* * * *

Molyneux looks for boom times in France again, "but definitely," as he dares phrase it. He continues to dress such royalty as Princess Mary and the Duchess of Kent of England. He makes beautiful clothes, gobs of money and has fun. Lucky Capt. Molyneux, say the girls, giving him the Chautauqua salute!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The Battle of the Hamlets finally came off, with the critics almost unanimously giving the crown of love and beauty to the morose Dane of John Gielgud, of England, leaving Mr. Leslie Howard far in the rear. Leslie has had no luck in classic roles this season, his Romeo also having taken a critical drubbing. But he does look beautiful in tights, no matter what the meanies say. Yet we of the older classes remember John Barrymore's Hamlet as the optical feast of the century—or don't we? . . .

* * * *

The struggle of youth for a higher education is certainly growing less violent. Now they are offering $500 to the best dancer among local college students—and the battle to enter the thing is terrific. Just a simple little foxtrot, folks—and Phi Beta Kappa is just around the corner! . . .

* * * *

Lovely Muriel King, the designer, gave her first private showing the other day and came up with a collection of thrilling duds reflecting, in some respects, her recent jaunt to Mexico. Among the 20, for instance, she showed a slate-blue dinner dress with a glistening design of gold beads and spangles up and down each side, in the manner of Mexican-suit trimming. You'd love Muriel, and her place, too—a big, old time brownstone in the east Sixties where she lives and does her one-woman business. She calls herself a "seamstress"—and what an one! Then, too, she's her own best model . . .

* * * *

Day after tomorrow is the day, and the town's well-policed husbands are being closely watched. Auntie Mae West begins appearing in person on the stage of a local theater—the first time her opulence has been revealed here in over two years. And though it seems rather evident that her vogue has passed its peak, it is certain that she will jam the big Broadway house to the rafters.

Eden 'Regrets' Reich Seizure Of Waterways

Briton Holds International Relations Confused by Hitler's Bold Step.

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in the House of Commons today deplored Reichsfuehrer Hitler's repatriation of German waterways as rendering "somewhat difficult the conduct of international relations."

(In Paris today officials said Belgium and Czechoslovia would join france in protesting Germany's denunciation of the navigation clauses of the Versailles treaty.)

Eden expressed "regrets" that Germany has "again abandoned procedure by negotiation in favor of unilateral action despite the assurance given last year."

The foreign secretary's remarks were in reply to a question from the labor leader, Clement R. Attlee.

"These regrets," Eden continued, "are not due to fears of any imporportant British trading interests having been jeopardized by the German decision, but due to the fact that action of this character must render somewhat difficult the conduct of international relations."

Eden then declined to answer Attlee's next question:

"Are there any more agreements which are likely to be denounced by Germany this week-end and what possible confidence can be placed in her signature agreements?"

Attlee's "week-end" reference apparently meant Hitler's frequent custom of announcing vital decisions on Sunday when the statesmen of other nations are away from their foreign offices.

Home Secretary Sir John Simon then moved the second reading of the Government's "public order" barring persons from wearing political uniforms such as those used by the Fascist adherents of Sir Oswald Mosely.

Britain's "parliamentary liberties" were endangered by "private armies," Sir John declared in urging Parliament to "deal with the matter now, before it develops into something more serious."

Archbishop of Lyon, Noted Prelate, Is Dead

Lyon, France, Nov. 16 (AP).—Cardinal Louis-Joseph Maurin, Archbishop of Lyon, died today. He was 77 years old.

His Eminence Louis-Joseph Maurin was cardinal of Lyon and primate of the Gauls, the latter a title handed down by the Vatican since the beginning of the second century.

Ordained a priest in 1882, he was made a bishop in 1911. Pope Benedict XV made him archbishop of Lyon in 1916 and created him a cardinal in the following year. On several occasions he was a papal legate.

Bodies of Five Taken From Ruins of Home

Irwin, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP).—Firemen dug the burned bodies of four children and their 21-year-old brother from ruins of their home in Hahntown, a little mining town, early today. None could be recognized.

They died last night after flames swept through the two-story frame home of Michael Gubanic, a miner.

Mrs. Mary Watters Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Lucy Watters, who died Saturday at her home, 1711 Thirty-fifth street northwest, following a long illness, will be held at 2 p. m. today from the home.

Mrs. Watters, a native of Bedford County, Va., was the wife of Frank Lutz Watters. She was descendent of an old Virginia family and had lived in Washington for many years.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Watters is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Holt Fleetwood, of this city, and Mrs. John Bowie, of Roanoke, Va.; four sisters, Mrs. S. McDowell Meek and Mrs. Frank Hansboro Iden, of this city, and Mrs. W. J. Cromer and Mrs. John Arthur Ray, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and two brothers, William L. Reid, of this city, and H. Burwell Reid, of Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. Watters was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the United States Daughters of 1812.

Student Tells of Drowsiness In Letter as Gas Takes Life

Harvard Man Found Dead by Janitor; Unfinished Note Mentions Odor Observed While Cooking Breakfast; Death Held Accidental.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 16.—Illuminating gas cut short a brilliant Harvard Law School graduate student's letter to his parents today as he recorded in a gay mood the numbing effects of what he did not suspect was death itself.

Robert Hunt, a janitor at an Agassiz street apartment house, found John R. Meltzer, 23, of Chicago, slumped in a chair in his rooms today, the unfinished letter before him and two gas jets in a nearby stove open.

Over one of the jets was a pan of skim milk, on the other a pan of bacon. Medical Examiner David C. Dow said death was accidental.

Meltzer, only partially dressed, as though he had taken the few minutes while his breakfast was cooking to write to his parents, had begun his letter:

"Dear Folks—My apartment is very nice except there always seems to be an odor of gas about . . . this a. m. I feel very sleepy and can hardly stay awake to finish this letter."

He mentioned he had begun preparation of breakfast by putting bacon and skim milk on the stove and then wrote:

"I am very happy and content here and inclined to be a bit gay."

Meltzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius W. Meltzer, of Chicago, was graduated from Harvard Law School last year with honors and was studying this year on a university fellowship.

He was an editor of the Harvard Law Review and had received his bachelor of science degree at the University of Pennsylvania.

Soldier Faces Trial.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 16.—Alfred Fulks, 19, indicted Saturday by the grand jury here for larceny, was returned today from Fort Howard, where he was recently after having enlisted in the United States Army. Fulks and two companions will be tried for the theft of brass from the Western Maryland Railroad Co.

9,000 Get Pay Raise.

Danville, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—Notices were posted by Supt. George W. Robertson in the Dan River Mills today announcing a 10 per cent wage increase to all employes effective next Monday. The pay roll here now is $130,000 per week. More than 9,000 workers are effected.

I sometimes wonder who isn't ordering our Family's Whiskey!

It must be nobody ever tastes it but what they order some right off quick!

Judging from how most everybody took to our Family's Whiskey the moment they found they could have the same whiskey as us distillers enjoy ourselves, there must be mighty few folks ever get a taste of this Family's Recipe of ours without their ordering some just so quick as ever they can!

Well, I suppose by rights you couldn't hardly expect different. Not as I'd have you think William and Tom and me are asking for the credit for its being so tasty. I claim it's Pa Wilken more than anybody—that is, him and Grandpa Wilken. It was Grandpa Wilken that gave Pa his schooling in whiskey making—and then Pa picked up plenty in his own 44 years of distilling. And all that the three generations of us Wilkens picked up relating to mildness and tastiness, we put into our own Family's Recipe. I'd love for you just to get a taste of it!

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Rebel's Return

Fingerprint clerks at the Federal Bureau of Investigation have long ago grown accustomed to the tourists who come through the identification section twice each day. Last Friday afternoon's tour, however, provoked considerable snickering and laughter among the clerks. Cause of the merriment was that tagging along at the rear of the tour were two of the ten fingerprint clearks whose dismissal by J. Edgar Hoover was fought so bitterly by former Justice Lodge No. 21.

Add election forecasts: In the current issue of "Indians at Work" Commissioner John Collier contributes an editorial dated November 1 predicting with "certainty" that "Indians will have another four years of opportunity under President Roosevelt."

Navy Gleanings

The greater portions of the reports of the heads of the various Navy Department bureaus now being released deal with naval matters, but here and there are little items of interest to the civilian personnel.

From the report of Admiral William H. Standley, Chief of Naval Operations: Fourteen hundred books and documents were added to the Bureau's library last year, bringing the collection up to 83,240. The photographic collection now numbers 31,760 prints.

From Rear Admiral A. B. Cook, Bureau of Aeronautics: The 1936 civilian personnel roll of 5,790 consists of 339 technical experts, 1,304 clerks and messengers and 4,147 mechanical laborers.

From Capt. L. R. Leahy, of the Hydrographic Office: Eighteen more employes were on the pay roll on June 30, of this year, than the same date last. Comparative figures being 188 and 170. Despite this increase "the force is still below that normally employed up to May, 1934 . . . To keep pace with increasing demands from the fleet, the merchant marine and aviation, both naval and civil, an increase in personnel is desirable."

Also, "During the fiscal year about 11,000 feet of additional floor space was occupied. There still are features which would be greatly improved could some of allotted space be rearranged with other bureaus. It would be highly desirable to obtain the five rooms in the rear of the third floor, second wing, now occupied by Compensation Board, in lieu of those in sixth wing, and consolidate engravers in one locality."

From Capt. J. F. Hellweg, Naval Observatory: "Statement regarding the non-filling of all vacancies because of Federal economy is again repeated. The reorganization of the observotory staff necessitated by the lapsing of some key positions compelled the reassignment of duties and the combining of different divisions. It is hoped that authorization and appropriation this year may be made available and the staff restored to its original numerical strength." . . . Two watch and chronometer repairers and one instrument finisher are also requested to take care of increasing repair demands from Bureau of Aeronautics.

From Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, Bureau of Navigation: During fiscal year civilian personnel averaged 256.04 permanent employes on basis of 260 positions against 253.2 employes on basis of 255 positions for preceding year. With emergency employes, this year's average was brought up to 262.34.

"Although allowed an increase of five permanent employes, the bureau finds it increasingly difficult to function and without further increase this condition will become more serious as naval personnel increases, as effect of legislation covering all phases of the Navy becomes more apparent and as full use is made of increase in leave authorized by the new leave law."

No fireworks are to be permitted at tonight's meeting of the Commerce Lodge of the A. F. G. E., President Leonard Kemp assures us.

"Calling All Cars"

Radio policing is the latest weapon employed by the United States Immigration patrol along the Rio Grande and it is proving a most effective weapon as any number of Mexicans who attempted to cross illegally into this country can testify to their sorrow.

The current issue of The Guardian at the Gate, official organ of the Immigration Inspector's Association, contains a new description of a new radio tower with a 75-foot high observation house, that has been set up at El Paso, Tex., and an account of how it is used to spy out the actions of suspicious looking persons and to summon patrol cars:

"Calling Car 26, Calling Car 26. Go to river about three blocks below Stanton Street Bridge. Three persons on Mexican bank. One is pointing across. Two enter water . . . You will have to hurry; two men are half way across, three blocks below Stanton Street Bridge . . . Stop your car or they will see you . . . They are mingling with the bathers . . . They are coming out . . . They are sitting on bank, putting on shoes . . . One is tall and thin, other is medium height and stout . . . The tall one has a white shirt and blue overalls . . . They are coming right toward you . . . That's them right in front of you."

The Farm Credit Club is experimenting with a new monthly publication, the first issue of which is scheduled to appear this week. The tentative editorial staff includes W. J. Maddox, editor in chief; T. L. Piper, managing editor; Grace McGeerr, B. F. Denman and A. C. Bernard, associates; George Upman and Thomas Pritchard, art, and W. J. Carmack, advertising manager . . .

Events and meetings of interest for today are, opening of Treasury Department's Federal art program exhibit at Corcoran Art Gallery . . . Agriculture Symphony Orchestra concert tonight in Labor Auditorium . . . Michigan-Washington Democratic Club meets at Washington Hotel . . . Ninth anniversary dinner of the Association of Federal Architects at Carlton Hotel . . .

Youth Splits With Elders Over Buses

Young Element Shows Favor for Proposed Motor Service.

Youth was aligned against old age in a sectional squabble over whether buses should replace street cars in the Takoma Park area yesterday during an all-day hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Young matrons heartily indorsed the experimental Takoma Park express bus line and urged adoption of the Capital Transit Co. plan, or a modification of it, whereby street railway service would be discontinued beyond Fourteenth street and Colorado avenue.

Patrons of the street car line past middle age, however, objected bitterly to the proposed change.

The substantial reduction in riding time between Takoma Park and downtown Washington offered by the bus does not impress them; they made it clear that they are accustomed to street cars and have no desire for a change.

Only one concrete counter-proposal to that of the transit company came out of the mass of conflicting testimony.

Routing Is Condition.

W. H. Parsons, who said he represented a transportaion committee from the Manor Park, Takoma Park, D. C., and Chillum Heights citizens associations, offered the counter-proposal. He said that the organizations he spoke for had indorsed the change from street cars to buses on condition that their proposed routing of the buses is adopted.

The Petworth Citizens Association, he said, had indorsed their plan, but the Brightwood Citizens Association had refused to participate in their conferences.

Parsons suggested that the rush hour Takoma express bus line remain on its present route down Fifth street to Madison street, thence west to Thirteenth street.

For the norush periods, however, he proposed a dual route. The first would come up Fifth street to Gallatin street, then turn into Kansas avenue, thence to Third street, and end at underpass on Van Buren street.

Faster Time Asked.

He also demanded that the proposed shuttle bus service be more frequent than every 15 minutes and suggested that it be fixed at 7½ minutes. The 16 new buses, he asserted, would not be sufficient for the shuttle and express bus lines although he explained he could offer no estimate as to the number needed.

Typical of the conflicting views presented to the commission was the testimony of Mrs. Andrew J. Moyer and Mrs. Margaret M. H. Finch, both residents of Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Moyer, young matron, presented a petition carrying 102 signatures requesting regular Takoma Park bus service and charged that a mass meeting at which retention of street cars had been voted 42 to 16, was packed with trolley advocates.

Among the two persons who refused to sign her petition, she said, was an old man who rides to town about once a year.

Mrs. Finch, a slightly gray Navy Department employe, told the commission that she detested buses from every point of view and is content to ocupy an hour in riding from her home to work every morning.

Trolleys Preferred.

Mrs. L. L. Connor, of 300 Rittenhouse street, commented that the buses might be all right for the "quicker-moving" young folks, but that she preferred the slower street cars.

William McK. Clayton, of the Brightwood Citizense Association, and Arthur E. Cook, of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Association, were the principal spokesmen for the group who demanded that the street cars be retained and that the commission carry out its suspended order of last February requiring the transit company to buil d double tracks on Kennedy street.

Harry Waters, a resident of Kennedy street, however, presented a petition asking that the street car tracks be removed and that buses be substituted.

$17,392 Expenses Reported by Norris

By the Associated Press.

Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, former Republican, reported yesterday he had spent $17,392 to win his re-election to the Senate as an independent in a three-cornered contest.

Expenditures of $10,034 were listed by Robert G. Simmons, his Republican opponent, while Terry Carpenter, Democratic candidate, spent $8,511.

Norris' expenditures statement filed with the secretary of the Senate showed contributions of $17,392, including $6,265 from the Progressive National Committee; $1,500 from Labor's Nonpartisan League, and $1,000 from Mrs. Oliva Cutting, of Long Island, and J. M. Patterson.

Democrats to Meet.

The monthly meeting of the Democratic League of the District of Columbia will be held today at 8:30 p. m. in the Hamilton Hotel. Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, will be the guest speaker.

Priest Dons Purple Robe Of Prelate at Catholic U.

Mgr. Edward B. Jordan, of Catholic University, and Bishop T. C. O'Reilly, of Scranton.

Rev. Dr. Edward B. Jordan, Dean of Catholic Sisters College, Given Rank of Rt. Rev. Monsignor.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Benedict Jordan, associate professor of education at Catholic University and dean of the Catholic Sisters College, yesterday was invested as a domestic prelate to Pope Pius XI with the rank of right reverend monsignor.

The ceremony took place in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception and was witnessed by a colorful gathering that included four bishops, a number of monsignori and hundreds of priests, nuns and Trinity College students in caps and gowns.

Mgr. Jordan, one of the country's foremost educators, was invested by his bishop, the Most Rev. Thomas C. O'Reilly, of Scranton, Pa. The sermon was preached by the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of Catholic University.

Ministry Lauded.

After sketching the career of Mgr. Jordan, Mgr. McCormick said:

"His ministry of over 25 years has been therefore one of teaching, and without intending to dwell further upon it, out of deference to the wishes of Mgr. Jordan, we cannot refrain from saying that for him it has been a real ministry, a canonical mission in the truest sense of the word, as sacred a charge as any other phase of priestly work. For this, according to the words of St. Paul, he is 'to be esteemed worthy of double honor' for he has labored long and well in the word nad in doctrine."

Bishop O'Reilly celebrated the benedictin, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Gerge Jhnsn, asciate prfessr of education at Catholic University, and the Rev. Dr. Leo L. McVay, of the department of education at Catholic University.

The four bishops, besides Bishop O'Reilly, who attended the investiture, were the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, of Richmond; the Most Rev. William J. Hafey, of Raleigh, N. C.; the Most Rev. George L. Leech, of Harrisburg, Pa., and the Most Rev. Edward F. Hoban, of Rockford, Ill.

Papal Brief Read.

The papal brief elevating Mgr. Jordan to th epurple garb, signed by Cardinal Pacelli, secretary of tsate for the Vatican, was read by the Re. Dr. Joseph P. Christopher, associate professor of Greek and Latin at Catholic Uniersity.

Mgr. Jordan was born in Dunsmore, Pa., educated in the public schools there, thereafter winning his B. S. degree from St. Thomas College, in Scranton and his A. B. from Mount St. Mary's College at Emmitsburg, Md. He was ordained at Rome on April 10, 1909, and took his degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology from the Propaganda Uniersity the same year.

From 1910 to 1921 he was a teacher of biology and education and from 1918-1920 vice president of Mount St. Mary's. In 1921 he became an instructor in education, dividing his time between Catholic University, Sisters College and Trinity College. Last spring he became dean of the Catholic Sisters College.

Other Important Events.

The investiture of Mgr. Jordan was one of a serioes if important events this week at Catholic University. This morning at 10 o'clock the trustees of Catholic University hold a meeting, and tomorrow the rector will be inaugurated and the American heirarchy, composed of all the bishops of the United States, will convene to discuss matters of policy.

Library Marks Its 100th Year At Service Here

Army Medical Collection Is Hailed by English Physician.

Men of science and leaders in the medical profession from all sections of the world met last night to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Army Medical LiLbrary—the largest and best of its kind in the world.

Gathered in the flag-draped hall of the library, at Seventh street and Independence avenue southwest, a crowd of more than 600 heard Sir Humphrey Davy Rolleston, outstanding English physician, term the Army Medical Library one of America's four great contributions to the advancement of medical science.

Introduced by the surgeon general of the Army, Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, Sir Humphrey declared that the library ranks in medical importance with the know-l edge of anesthesia, the discovery that insects spread disease and the development of public health laboratories.

Suggesis New Building.

As a fitting way to celebrate the centennial anniversary of the library, Sir Humphrey suggested a new structure be built to house the more than 900,000 books. The priceless collection, it is understood, might be destroyed should the 50-year-old building burn.

Sir Humphrey is emeritus professor of physics at Cambridge University, president of the Royal College of Physicians, president of the Royal Society of Medicine, surgeon vice admiral in the royal navy and holder of many royal decorations and honorary uniersity degrees.

At the conclusion of his speech, the English physician was presented with a scroll making him a consultant to the Army Madical Library. The presentation was made by Surgeon General Reynolds.

Message From Rooseelt.

Col. Harold W. Jones, librarian, read a message from President Rooseelt in which the President expressed his regret at being unable to attend the ceremonies and his hope that the resources of the library would continue to be aailable "to all who work for the betterment of mankind through the prevention of disease and the alleviation of human suffering." The Rev. Oliver Hart, D. D., rector of St. Paul's, pronounced the invocation.

Col. Jones also read a list of greetings from institutions in all the leading countries of the world.

Founded in 1836 by Surg. Gen. Joseph Lovell, the library grew slowly until Surg. John Billings was given the task of enlarging it at the close of the Civil War. The institution's great "Index Catalogue," etsablished by Dr. Billings, lists practically everything published in the medical sciences in every land and every language. This actalogue, used as widely abroad as in this country, was termed America's greatest gift to medicine by the late Dr. William Welch, of Johns Hopkins.

President Wants Inaugural Stands On Colonial Lines

President Roosevelt yesterday conferred with Waddy Wood, local architect, and made known his wishes with respect to the reviewing stand at the White House for the inaugural parade.

Wood, who designed the court of honor for Roosevelt's first inaugural, said the President this time wants the court constructed along early Colonial lines.

Reservations being received at hotels indicate a huge crowd of visitors will be here on January 20, a greater crowd probably than was here for the last inaugural.

Civic Group Support Plan For Abattoir

Lincoln Park Declares Project Will Help Northeast.

Kenilworth, Central Labor Union Urge Building Slaughter House.

Two citizens' associations in Kenilworth and Lincoln Park, and the powerful Central Labor Union last night whole-heartedly endorsed the construction of a new abattoir in the 3700 block of Benning road northeast by Adolf Gobel, Inc., meat packers.

At the Kenilworth meeting, held at Kenilworth avenue and Ord street meeting house, a resolution was adopted after a five-minute talk by C. P. Pierson, contact man for the company.

Pierson next attended the Lincoln Park Association meeting in the Bryan School. Charles M. Maize, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Kenilworth group, citing opposition from associations farther removed from the site of the proposed abattoir, asked:

"Why should the citizens in Chevy Chase be opposed to an abattoir in our district."

The action of the Lincoln Park body closely followed that of Kenilworth.

Resolution Drafted.

It was with almost unanimous indorsement that a resolution was drafted to be sent to President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, the Park and Planning Commission, the District Commissioners and the oBard of Trade.

The resolution stated that "it is our belief that the operations of this plant will materially benefit and help the northeast and southeast sections of Washington." It added that many men would find employment in the new slaughterhouse upon its completion.

At about the time both associations were adopting their resolutions, the Central Labor Union met in Columbia Typographical Temple, and went on record as favoring the construction of the plant.

Committee Study Balked.

When first introduced the motion was to be referred to the executive committee for further study, but objections forced the issue to the floor, where it was passed.

The esolution then was sent back to the committee rto be sent to the Distict Commissioners.

Meanwhile, it was learned, an amended answer to the Gobel suit for writ of mandamus against the Commissioners will be filed ni District Court today by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal upon an order issued yesterday by the District heads.

Whiel Seal wil be prepared to argue the case at once, it si likely that argument will be delayed by W. Gwynn Gardiner, counsel for Gobel, until he can produce the data demanded by the Commissioners.

PWA Aid Withdrawn.

Although last week the District was promised the aid of counsel for the PWA and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, indications yesterday were that the District will have to contest the Gobel suit alone.

It also appeared that the PWA has dropped a considered plan to file a counter suit to enjoin the Commissioners from issuing the building permit demanded by Gbel to enlarge and reopen its slaughter house on Benning road northeast.

The Commissioners cited six specific reasons for rejecting the permit. They are:

1. Drawings submitted do not show all horizontal waste and soil piping connections to the plumbing stacks in sufficient detail to insure compliance with District regulations.

2. Drawings are inadequate on plumbing fixtures, vats, tanks, et cetra.

3. Detail drawings are lacking to enable the District to determine whether the public water supply is adequately protected.

4. Holding pen plans do not show adequate oerhank of the roof at the eaes to exclude rain water from sanitary sewer.

5. Drawings do not show screens in connection with drainage lines.

6. Detail drawings are lacking to show the capacity of arious vats, tanks, cookers and other processing appliances.

Birth-Control Work In New Zealand Told

How New Zealand is campaigning for systematic distribution of birth control information for poor women was described yesterday at the home of Mrs. Ruth Hopper, 4000 Cathedral avenue, by Mrs. Jean Allie Dawson, of Auckland, New Zealand.

Mrs. Dawson represented the Birth Control International Information Center, London, is making contracts for the center throughout the world.

"New Zealand has no legal restrictions on birth control data and it is just a question of showing the authorities such a service is needed," Miss Dawson said.

Federal Murals Exhibit Opens Today at Corcoran

Official to Attend Formal Viewing of Treasury Department Art Project; Many Painters, Variety of Subjects Represented in Display.

An exhibition opens today at the Corcoran Gallery of Art which leads one to believe that before long persons will go to their postoffice not solely to buy stamps or mail parcels but als to admire wall paintings and see their town's history depicted by oil and brush.

It is the first comprehensive display of work undertaken by the Treasury Department Art Projects in the last two years. There was a press preview yesterday. High Federal officials, led by Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., will attend the formal opening from 3 to 6 p. m. today, and then the show will be turned over to the public, running until December 13.

Edward Bruce, well-known American painter and patron saint of the Nation's struggling artists, was at the head of the stairs yesterday to greet reporters, art critics and other early comess.

It was "Ned" Bruce who launched an esthetic tempest a couple of years ago when he affixed the label, "Ladies in Cheesecloth," to Gilbert White's symbolic and serious mural, which was installed recently in the Department of Agriculture's main building.

Because of a critical illness last year, Bruce is a semi-invalid, but his bon mots, wisecracks and gift of repartee were not impaired by his desperate fight for life.

"The motto of this exhibit," he said, "is 'Two murals in every house.'"

As chief of the Treasury's section of painting and sculpture, Bruce had general supervision over the execution of the more than 600 murals, mural studies, sculpture, sculpture models, architectral models of rooms, easel paintings and drawings which comprise the exhibition. Selected from thousands of entries, they represent the work of 350 artists.

The Treasury's program for decorating Federal buildings everywhere was described by Bruce as "the most significant art project that this country or any country has ever had."

"I think it was one of the greatest things approved by the President to pull us out of the depression," he said.

He revealed that Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas in a letter to a group of artists shortly before the election, had pledged himself to continue the present program, which has given work to hundreds of famous artists and "unknowns" alike, if he were elected.

Another disclosure at yesterday's preview was the book, "Art in Federal Buildings," which Bruce and Forbes Watson, art critic and adviser in the Federal project compiled to depict what has been done to embellish postoffices, courthouses, customs houses and other Government buildings since 1934.

Profusely illustrated with murals and mural designs, the volume was made possible by the raising of funds from private sources by Bruce, Watson and their associates in the painting and sculpture section: Olin Dows, Maria Ealand, Inalee Hopper, Cecil H. Jones, Henry LaFarge and Edward Rowan.

A primary purpose of the sponsors, they say in the preface, is to increase the public of America's artists and help gain for them private commissions. Rowan is superintendent and Hopper and Miss Ealand are assistants in the painting and sculpture section. Dows is chief and LaFarge and Jones assistants in the relief art project.

Murals and mural designs for Government buildings in Osceola, Iowa, and Washington, Santa Fe, N. M., and Somerville, Mass., and other towns and cities are in the Corcoran exhibition.

The show presents practically everything from the pouring of iron and the history of Springfield, Mass., to odd studies of women climbing to the roof to escape flood waters and easel paintings of the Coast Guard plane frequently used by Secretary Morgenthau.

Andrew Winter, who is a liberally tatooed fo'c'sle salior, is responsible for the group of Coast Guard paintings which eventually will hang in the training academy.

Another contributor is Stuart Holmes, famous screen "heavy" of the silent film days, who is represented by a redwood bas-relief depicting the progress of transport.

Court Denies Plea on D. C. Personal Tax

Tax Specialist Claimed Levy Discriminatory, Unconstitutional.

William Cogger, attorney and a tax specialist on the legal staff of Catholic University, lost his attack on the constitutionality of the District personal property tax law in the United States Supreme Court yesterday.

The high court refused to review a judgment against Cogger by the District Court of Appeals. The case was brought by the barrister merely to test the law, which he called "unconstitutional" on the grounds that he held it "discriminatory."

More than a year ago the District Commissioners filed a petition against Cogger, who admitted ownership of a valuable group of securities, alleging he had neglected or refused to file a personal property return as required by the law.

Claimed Tax Invalid.

Through his attorneys, John E. Hughes and Philip F. Biggins, Cogger asserted the tax did not apply to members of Congress and other high officilas, and for that reason was invalid.

"Exception," he argued, through his lawyers, "apply to members of Congress and Cabinet officers."

He added it was "unreasonable, capricious and arbitrary discrimination and violated the fifth amendment."

In replying, the Commissioners argued that "Congress, in granting the exemptions complained of, was but according to nonresidents temporarily residing in the District the same exemption which is granted to residents of the District with respect to the shares of stock of business corporations engaged in business in the District which pays taxes upon their assets in the same manner as individuals are taxed."

Loses in Every Test.

Cogger's contention, when it was brought before Justice Joseph W. Cox, was denied. The justice sustained the legality of the personal property requirements, and dismissed Cogger's petition at the request of Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon West.

The case was taken before the high court October 13 of this year.

Hundreds of Washingtonians have been sued by the Commissioners to compel them to file personal property tax schedules. By a refusal of review, the Supreme Court made it legally necessary for these to file returns and pay the prescribed levies.

In Hollywood With Jimmy Fiddler

Rudy the Battler.

Hollywood, Nov. 16.—Rudy Vallee, who seems constantly involved in fistic melees, is unquestionably a victim of this Nation's willingness to be led by publicity. It is a long proven fact that public opinion can be molded into any form under the deft touch of a clever press agent. That is how we got into the World War. How movie stars are created.

Vallee has suffered two kinds of publicity that make pugnacious gentlemen see red. First, he has been definitely labeled a ladies' man. Secondly, his battles invariably reach newspaper front pages, part of the price of fame. Were he an unknown, he might go out in the back alley and fight until the cops arrived, and get no more than a fine for disturbing the peace. But as Rudy Vallee, one wild swing that misses by three feet is captioned "Battle of the Century."

There is a class of mankind that likes to fight fellow men who are known to be favorites with the opposite sex. There is a second group that likes to match fists with men who have earned reputations as fighters. George Raft meets up with the latter class; Rudolph Valentino was once a target for the former. Vallee intrigues both.

En passant, I asked Mae West, "Do you keep a diary?"

"If I do," she quipped with that slow smile, "you can bet it's in code."

At lunch with Mervyn LeRoy yesterday, he told me this incident on himself. He has a habit of ordering "Quiet!" on his sets. Even when there is absolute silence, he absentmindedly shouts the order. At home with his Mrs. and mother the other evening, he was deep in study of scenes to be filmed next morning. The two women were in whispering conversation, and LeRoy suddenly turned on them and cried, "Quiet! Can't you see we're shooting?" He was so embarrassed that he retired to his room for the night, and his wife refused to forgive him until he came across with a nifty peace gift.

A noticeable thing about Margaret Sullavan is her constancy. Within the past year she has had but two steady escorts to places-about-town. Until his recent engagement to a New York society woman, one was Henry Fonda. The other is Director William Wyler. The constancy angle? Both are Margaret's former husbands.

In front of the Brown Derby this noon, a young man laden with autograph books sidled up and said, "I read your column. Does it interest you to know I make $25 a week selling autographs to tourists?" Interest me? I'm thinking of swapping him this column for his autograph business.

"Come and Get It", Sam Goldwyn's Picturization Of Edna Ferber's Story, Is Edward Arnold's Best

Walter Brennan Also Does Outstanding Bit of Acting As Swede Lumberjack; President Roosevelt Lauds Purposes of the Variety Club and Extends Wishes For a Successful Annual Frolic; Odd Items of Timely News and Gossip of the Show World.

IT WILL be said, of course, that Edward Arnold reaches the peak of his career as a screen actor in "Come and Get It," Samuel Goldwyn's celluloid transcription of the Edna Ferber story, which was previewed by a quorum of the drama desks Sunday night, but my vote will go to Walter Brennan.

BELL.

This Mr. Brennan has been seen in a great number of character roles on the silver sheet, but I doubt that I ever have seen so perfect a performance as he turns in as Swan Bostrom, the Swede lumberjack in this subject.

His odd dialect is perfection itself; his demeanor is wholly that of a mental nonentity under the dominance of a powerful personality and his whole treatment of the role such as to place the stamp of pre-eminence upon him among the lesser actors of the contemporary cinema.

The dominant character in the play, as goes without saying, is Edward Arnold. While Mr. Brennan was the first to capture my interest in the unreeling of the story, there is no gainsaying that this probably is Arnold's best picture. It starts him on the way to greatness as a lumberjack with ambition and carries him through the fascinating business of north Wisconsin lumbering to those tragic later days in which he is humiliated by the daughter of the woman he once had cast aside by being dubbed, in front of his own son, as "just an old man."

The story, as all of Edna Ferber's are apt to be, is such a deft blending of romance, big business and doubtful morals that it should command the interest of all adult audiences of whatever gender when it comes to the screen at Loew's Palace on Thursday.

* * * *

The imminence of this subject on the screen accounts for the "log-rolling" contest that is being staged in the Shoreham pool this afternoon at 4, between Henry Delyea, world champion, and his No. 1 challenger, Harry Wilson. Delyea won the championship recently in Seattle, Wash., and both he and Wilson are from Couer D'Alene, Idaho. In case you are doubtful of what this log-rolling business is all about, it consists of a demonstration of the art of remaining right side up on a spinning log in any depth of water. You have seen the thing done in the newsreels. Now you have an opportunity to see it done in swanky surroundings, sans corduroys.

The basic principle of charitable enterprise that actuates the Variety Club of Washington, along with all other tents in the national organization, yesterday received the indorsement of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt in a message which said in part that "any undertaking which has for its object the alleviation of human suffering, especially among children, is entitled to the heartiest support."

The President felicitated the members of Variety and expressed the wish that Saturday night's third annual banquet and ball might be the huge success that the cause which it represents so richly deserves.

All of the proceeds of this annual club frolic are devoted to the welfare fund, dedicated to the mitigation of juvenile suffering and the provision of those sources of innocent pleasure to which all youth is entitled.

Glen Carow, Washington's youthful piano virtuoso, who has been doing nobly at the keyboard since he was in his early teens and who recently sprang into city-wide prominence by holding the stage until Fritz Kreisler arrived at Constitution Hall, after a wreck had delayed him for hours, will be featured on the stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater beginning Friday. Carow has been a student of the piano since he was 6. He is at present conducting his own music school.

Dots and Dashes.

When Grand Duchess Marie of Russia arrives in the Capital, she will be greeted by Emery Deutsch, currently appearing on the stage at Loew's Capitol with his violin, which is only one degree less famous than Rubinoff's . . . Or maybe it is the other way around . . . Noel Coward's appearance at the National this fortnight is the magnet that is attracting notables from every direction . . . Neysa McMein, Alexander Woollcott, members of the diplomatic service and who not? . . . Even Eddie Melcher, the evacuating Fourth Estater, almost crashed the cast Saturday afternoon . . . And speaking of such, welcome to the ranks of the downtrodden, Jay Carmody . . . Mr. Carmody's by-line, as you probably noticed, appeared for the first time over the drama column in the Evening Star yesterday . . . Today a number of the boys and girls of the critical fraternity, or sorority, or whatever it is, are in New York gazing at the RKO-Radio picturization of "Winterset" . . . I thought I was going to be among them, but things didn't quite work out that way . . . They seldom do . . . It might be well to keep your eye on the film time tables this week since the managerial gentlemen presiding over the magic lantern shows have their hearts and minds set on changing bills every whip-stitch, as the saying is, beginning tomorrow . . . And it might not be amiss, while we are on the subject, to direct attention to the fact that Noel Coward tonight is presenting one of his best bills of one-act plays—"Ways and Means," "Still Life" and "Family Album" . . . This, as a matter of fact, is the bill I like best of the trilogy of programs of three plays each . . . Many have told me I am crazy for holding this view . . . But that is something that has been going on for years and ought to be common knowledge by now . . . Any Coward bill you may happen in upon is apt to be the "ten best plays of the year" . . . They all are of such high quality and uniform merit that the matter of choice among them becomes simply a matter of personal taste and predilection.

To-Whom-It-May-Concern Note.

Will Be Aboard That "Gold Plane"

This is the smiling likeness of Jeanne Madden, the sweet-voiced young comedienne from Scranton, Pa., who made so favorably an impression with Dick Powell and Joan Blondell in "Stage Struck." Miss Madden will be one of the Warner stars aboard the "Gold Diggers of 1937" plane when that aerial junket reaches the Capital next Tuesday. A bright future on the screen seems to spread before her.

Mrs. Ely Culbertson on Contract

A Difficult Analysis.

Average players would take a more cheerful view of their own perplexities at the bridge table if they knew how brain-racking the world's greatest experts find certain hands. I recall one a few years ago that, for a time I feared would lead to a duel between two outstanding masters (who must remain nameless). One said that on a certain opening lead, a five club contract would be undefeatable; the other averred hotly that unusually good defense would defeat the contract. One was right, of course, and the the other wrong, but it is easy to see how the latter could have erred in his analysis. Certainly, declarer's play would have had to be very fine against the defense proposed.

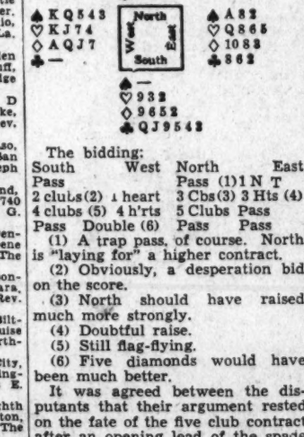
East-West 60 part-score.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass		Pass (1)	1 N T
2 clubs (2)	4 heart	3 Cbs (3)	3 Hts (4)
4 clubs (5)	4 h'rts	5 Clubs	Pass
Pass	Double (6)	Pass	Pass

(1) A trap pass, of course. North is "laying for" a higher contract.

(2) Obviously, a desperation bid on the score.

(3) North should have raised much more strongly.

(4) Doubtful raise.

(5) Still flag-flying.

(6) Five diamonds would have been much better.

It was agreed between the disputants that their argument rested on the fate of the five club contract after an opening lead of the spade King. Expert B (the loser) proposed the following very ingenuous defense:

"South would have to try to ruff two diamonds and one heart in dummy and it would be up to East to prevent this. Thus, when the Ace and another heart are led from dummy, East must hop up with the Queen and return a trump. Then, when a diamond is played up to dummy's King, West must cooperate by playing, not the Ace or seven, but the Queen or Jack. Dummy's King wins, but now East can win the second diamond lead with his ten and return another trump. This would limit dummy to ruffing only two red cards."

Expert A applauded the ingenuity but demurred in the conclusion reached. And his proposed line of play for the declarer was even shrewder than the other's defense had been:

"After ruffing the spade King, declarer should lead a diamond and West would have to play as Expert B explained (the diamond Queen) or risk a straight cross-ruff by declarer. Dummy's King would win and the spade Jack would be led. East, if he knew what he was doing, would play the Ace, since otherwise declarer would pass this trick and subsequently ruff away the Ace, leaving two good spade tricks in dummy. The Ace would be ruffed and dummy reentered with a trump for the lead and passing of the spade ten, South discarding a heart. West would win and return a heart (as good as any return), dummy's Ace would go up, East's trumps would be drawn, ending in dummy and declarer would then discard his remaining heart and one diamond on the nine and seven of spades. He would then concede one diamond and ruff the last one in dummy."

Bride-to-Be

By Vida Hurst

SYNOPSIS.

Becky Stern is the pretty young secretary of Francis Rhodes, elderly owner of a prosperous paper-manufacturing company. Because of her employer's illness, Becky has been working in his home, where she has had to repulse the attentions of Francis Junior, a mad-cap youth of her own age. Here also she has met Philip, handsome, embittered architect nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes, who has just returned after eight years from Mexico City. Philip is an orphan and self-made. He is the object of the envious hatred of Francis Junior to whom he has been held up as a model.

Regina, Philip's married cousin, and her mother are convinced Philip has returned from Mexico to win Lelia Meade, beautiful young widow, who had jilted him eight years before, and who shows now that she regrets it. Becky is called on to take letters for Philip and falls in love with him while Francis Junior, made more ardent by Becky's frequent snubs, involves her in several embarrassing situations which, she fears, may cause her to lose her job. Though his father does not learn of his infatuation, Philip does and his attitude toward Becky is influenced by it. She is ready to quit her job, but her father urges her to stay with it as a reorganization in his office may leave him jobless. She does, but the strain is difficult. She does not hide very successfully her interest in Philip and Francis Junior, Regina and Becky's mother all suspect her secrets.

It almost seems that Philip guesses it, too, when his uncle and aunt leave on a cruise and he arranges to have Becky remain to work for him. So he may keep an eye on Francis Junior, he arranges not to open an office at once, but conduct his business from the elder Rhodes' home.

CHAPTER 8.

The whole family, including Becky, went to the boat to see them off. Mr. Rhodes looked better already and Mrs. Rhodes less pigeon like and more the grand, little lady in her smart, traveling coat. Everyone pretended to be very gay. Even Francis, jr., made an effort to be less sardonic.

"Don't worry about anything," he said. "Everything is going to be fine."

"I hope so," his father returned rather doubtfully.

Lelia was there looking very lovely in black with gardenias pinned to her silver fox and Regina, a startling contrast, in severely tailored gray. But when the last strand of confetti had been broken, and the boat had pulled away they all looked at each other in relief.

"I'll take you home, Becky," Francis, jr., offered.

She accepted, realizing it would have been silly to refuse, but every nerve was strained toward the man in the other group. If only she might have been walking beside him smiling into his face as Celia did!

"Home?" Francis asked.

"To your home," she replied. "I've a lot of work to do yet. I want to get everything cleaned up before I start working for your cousin."

The young man beside her frowned.

"Of course, you know it's totally unnecessary for you to work for Phil. We could have found plenty for you to do at the factory."

"I want to work for him," she declared. "His letters are so interesting. All about plans for houses and wonderful modernistic buildings. Sometimes he shows me his blue prints and explains them to me and often he writes a letter in Spanish. It's fascinating."

Good Luck.

"It must be," he said dryly. "Well, I wish you luck!"

Regretting her enthusiasm Becky said kindly, "You've helped your father a lot, Francis, by being so industrious the last two weeks."

"What are you trying to do? Build me up?" he asked. "I suppose you're afraid it won't last now that he's gone? Well, you're right. It won't. I'm going out tonight and cut loose."

"Don't do anything you'll be sorry for," she begged.

"Why shouldn't I," he demanded. "Who cares? Do you? Don't answer! I know you don't."

"No one else can be responsible for your actions but yourself," she reminded him.

For one moment she had been tempted to tell him she would spend the evening with him if that would help. Then she thought, "No, it would just encourage him to think that any time he threatens to drink too much I'll see him. If he isn't man enough to behave for his own sake I can't help it."

She said "good-by" and let him go, but she could not work for thinking about it and presently she decided she would tell Philip if he came home before she left.

Hidden.

She was sitting on the floor straightening out the files which were kept on a lower shelf of one of the bookcases, when she heard voices. Philip and Lelia had evidently come home without the Littles. Probably only stopped for a moment on their way some place else. Becky felt crumpled and dirty. She had no desire to see either of them. If only they would stay out of the library!

But they didn't. Becky was concealed from view by one of the heavy, upholstered chairs and could not see them, but she could tell from their voices that they were already in the room. Still they might not stay. If they hadn't seen her already they wouldn't. She was so disturbed about having to face them in her disheveled condition that she had not paid any attention to their conversation, but suddenly it came to her with a shock that Lelia was crying.

"Sit down, Lelia! Don't cry, my dear! Please!" Philip said in a distressed tone while Becky thought wildly, "I can't appear now. She'd never forgive me. Why didn't I cough or say something in the first place?"

"I don't believe it. I can't believe it," Lelia sobbed. "You're just acting like this because of your masculine pride."

"There isn't such a thing when one is really in love," Philip said, in his low voice. "I proved that when I came back to you as I did."

"You admit then that you came with the idea of marrying me?"

"You know I did. I'd made up my mind that if you really felt as Regina had told me you did, I would forget what had happened and we would try it again."

"But I do love you, Philip," she insisted. "I haven't changed. And I've been so happy."

"I was happy at first, too," he admitted. "You are more beautiful than ever. Infinitely more alluring than the girl you were eight years ago."

Becky could hear Lelia's soft sigh of satisfaction and could imagine the gleam of her dusky eyes as she urged, "Well, then?"

Not in Love.

"But love isn't logical," Philip protested. "You know that as well as I do. In spite of the fact that you are everything any man could want in a wife I am no longer in love with you. Too much has happened to both of us. The person you are today is not the Lelia who was in my heart. At first I thought if we were together more I would be able to merge the two persons you seem to be, but I can't. Much as I would like to I know now it can't be done. I should have known better than to expect it. One can't ever go back to anything."

Lelia sounded unconvinced.

"Phil, darling, don't take it so seriously. After all there's no rush about it. Let's just go on as we are."

"It wouldn't be fair to you. Every one expects us to be married. I'm keeping your other friends away."

"If I don't care, why should you?"

Did Becky imagine it or was there a suggestion of impatience in his reply?

"I'm going to start working now that my wrist is healed, and I'll have no time to play around. You probably don't realize it but I've never in my life spent as much time with any woman as I've spent the last six weeks with you."

"I don't see what that has to do with it," she argued. "I shouldn't expect you to see me in the day time if you're busy but surely we could go places together at night."

Discovered.

"I've just told you why, Lelia! We'll be the best of friends always, I hope, but I can't keep up this appearance of being one of your suitors when I'm not."

"Jealous, Phil?" she asked hopefully.

"No," he insisted. "And I'm not in love with any one else. I'm just trying to tell the truth."

"If I really thought you meant it, I'd go away."

There was silence for a moment then he said, "I do mean it."

"All right!" she answered. "Then I'll go. And don't come with me. Not even to the door."

Becky heard the swish of her skirt as she moved across the room. A door closed in the hall and there was the sound of her car going down the drive.

Had Philip followed her in spite of her protest or remained in the library? Cautiously Becky lifted her head from the shadowy corner behind the chair. As she did so the movement of her body made Philip turn. He was standing by the window.

"Becky!" he cried, "What in the world are you doing?"

Invitation to Show Brought by Mails 19 Years Too Late

Nearly 20 years ago a friend of Miss Anna Kluge mailed a postcard to her asking that she attend a show at the Strand Theater.

Miss Kluge received the card a few days ago and remarked, "I guess I missed a good show.'

The card was postmarked September 14, 1917, and was addressed to 1730 Q street northwest. Miss E. E. Johnson, who lives there now, found it in her mailbox last Friday. It was forwarded to Miss Kluge, now living at 1323 Clifton street northwest.

Two Perfect Records Up Saturday

Northwestern, Marquette Risk Unblemished Performances.

Fordham and Georgia, Harvard and Yale Head Program.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Nov. 16.—Three big games in which two of the Nation's outstanding teams risk their perfect records against stiff opposition and another gambles with an invitation to the Rose Bowl feature this week's program as the football season ploughs into the stretch.

Northwestern, brand new champion of the Big Ten, will invade South Bend, Ind., for an all-important encounter with Notre Dame, last obstacle between the Evanston Wildcats and a perfect season—and the national championship. In view of performances last week by the Wildcats and Ramblers, this should be a close, hard-fought game. Notre Dame won with comparative ease over Army, 20-6, while Northwestern had difficulty in beating desperate Michigan, 9-0.

Duquesne Question Mark.

At Pittsburgh, Marquette's Golden Avalanche will descend upon Duquesne, and anything can happen to Marquette's perfect record because "Little Clipper" Smith's Duquesne Dukes are an outfit that can rise to heroic heights when occasion requires and play championship football. They did this against Pittsburgh, remember, and only last week they downed Carnegie Tech team, 13-0. Of course that victory had little of the lustre of Marquette's brilliant 33-0 triumph over a strong Southern eleven, Mississippi. This is the last game on Marquette's schedule.

New York, "Sleepy" Jim Crowley's Fordham Rams will throw their granite line against invading Georgia's Bulldogs who last week turned back Tulane's Green Wave, 12-6. Although Alabama, powerhouse of the South, still is being mentioned as an Eastern Rose Bowl prospect because only a tie with Tennessee spots its record, most Eastern sports writers believe that Fordham will get the Pasadena invitation if the Rams can finish their season undefeated, despite their scoreless tie with Pittsburgh. Fordham has tilted with big-timers from every section of the football map this season, while Alabama's opposition has been purely Southern. If the Rams can beat Georgia, only comparatively weak New York U. remains on their schedule.

Harvard vs. Yale.

In surveying this week's program, we must not forget that traditional ivy-clustered classic between Harvard and Yale at New Haven's big bowl Saturday. Aside from the traditional angle, this edition promises to be a honey because the winner will be hailed as champion of the "Big Three." You see, Harvard has held Princeton to a 14-14 tie, and last week the Elis upset Princeton, 26-23. The Harvard youngsters have improved amazingly of late and will give Yale a hard fight.

Meanwhile, other hostilities may be outlined as follows:

East—Iowa, of the Big Ten, invades Temple; Colgate has a neighborhood brawl with Syracuse, and Army has a breather in Hobart while tuning up for the big game with Navy on the 28th. The Middies are idle. Other matches pair Manhattan-Villanova, Penn State-Bucknell, Catholic U.-Western Maryland, Boston College-Boston U., Holy Cross-St. Anselm, and N. Y. U.-City College.

Midwest—Now that Northwestern has clinched the Big Ten title, the conference season will come to a close with four teams, now tied, fighting for the runner-up position. Two of them, Purdue and Indiana, tangle at Lafayette, while Minnesota engages Wisconsin, and Ohio State meets Michigan. A fourth

Army Grid Squad Not Given Let-up

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 16 (AP).—Anxious to begin preparations for the Navy game a week from Saturday, Gar Davidson, Army coach, called out his entire squad for practice today, including those who had played nearly all of last Saturday's game with Notre Dame.

Bing Kobes, sophomore end who suffered a sprained ankle, and Samuels, reserve back, with a twisted knee, reported the only injuries of consequence resulting from the battle with Notre Dame. With Kobes out, Preston returned to his old place at left end.

Todays' drill consisted of work on some plays for the Navy game. Davidson plans to take the undefeated little Hobart team in stride next Saturday.

Kelley, Yale End, Is Compared To Shevlin, 'All-Time Greatest'

Post Staff Photo

It seems you can't keep Larry Kelley, of Yale, out of conversation. The fact was very evident yesterday when the Touchdown Club gathered for its weekly luncheon at the Lafayette Hotel.

No sooner had Phil King, once an All-American quarterback at Princeton in 1893, commenced his remarks as principal speaker than he ran straight into the ostentatious Mr. Kelley. Quarterback King, now field general of a department store on Seventh street, was talking about the Yale-Princeton game which he saw Saturday, and before he knew it he was talking about Larry Kelley.

"He gabs a lot and he puffs out his chest a lot," said King, "but he has a right to. He's no average football player. Kelly's what you call not only 'good,' but 'great.' His spunk is what helped give Yale the spunk that beat Princeton."

Johnnie McGovern, All-American quarterback at Minnesota in 1900, said he had a theory about Kelley. Johnnie thinks maybe Larry heard stories about Tom Shevlin, the Yale end who is called by many the greatest of all time.

"Tom was the same sort of guy," McGovern said. "Tom told me once when he was coaching at Minnesota that there was nobody alive could play end right except him. 'know more about playing end than anybody in the country,' Tom told me, 'more than anybody ever has and more than anybody ever will.' Maybe Larry Kelley heard Tom and decided to step into his shoes."

The Touchdown Club is preparing elaborately for its All Sports Dinner at the Willard, December 9. Grantland Rice has been invited to serve as master of ceremonies. Other notables to be present are Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Bucky Harris, Jake Powell, Clark Griffith, Joe Bluege, Ben Chapman, Sam Rice, Nick Altrock and possibly Braddock.

Maryland, G. U. Prepare for Struggle

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A couple of beaten and, in one instance, badly battered football teams, Georgetown and Maryland, yesterday settled down to the serious business of preparing themselves for Washington's lone grid classic Saturday at College Park, but whatever feelings or emotions the boys may have concerning their third annual meeting were not discernible to the casual observer.

Maryland's regulars were dismissed after 15 minutes of light, informal exercises, while the majority of Georgetown's didn't even report. Those who did were kept out less than an hour, limbering up, punting and running through signals. In neither camp was there the slightest trace or sign of excitement or concern about the game.

Calm Before the Storm.

Frank Dobson, Maryland's head man, and Jack Hagerty, whipwielder at the Hilltop, were more than content to give their men a well-earned rest and a little freedom before rturning to the punishing practice grind. Today matters will be vastly different, for both squads are down for full-time workouts.

At Maryland, Johnny Gormley, blocking back, is the only regular not certain of starting this week. He is on the hospitalization list with a bum shoulder. Almost all of the others are afflicted with bruises and bumps of varying degrees, but all virtually are certain to be ready at game-time.

At this writing, Maryland, with the brilliant Guckeyson, Headley, Meade, Ellinger and its host of capable reserve backs, reigns a slight favorite over the Hoyas, and likely will retain this status until game-time. But there is an abundance of Georgetown money available and as soon as the boys get around to betting it the odds are certain to shorten.

Snyder May Be Out.

Georgetown probably will be without the services of its star end, Al Snyder, who suffered a severe back injury in the Manhattan game, and his loss will be a severe blow to the team's powerful defense. An

Marshall Still May Move His Pros Here

George Preston Marshall detrained here last night after watching his Boston Redskins play to a crowd of 11,200 against the Chicago Bears on Sunday and declared that he is still favorable to Washington as a possible new site of the Boston franchise in the National Professional Football League.

"The crowd at Boston was an improvement over previous crowds," said Marshall, "but Boston is still very much on trial with me. I will take no action on any transfer of the franchise until after the league meeting on December 12, however."

Before leaving for Boston last week, Marshall had declared that unless the Redskins' game with the Bears drew a $25,000 gate, he would install his franchise in another city, preferably Washington.

Publicity Better.

He had declared himself vastly dissatisfied not only with the poor attendance at the pro-league games but with the space allotted his team in the Boston newspapers, which he declared subordinated professional football to horse racing and college football.

"But last week the advance publicity was a great deal more satisfactory and even the notices after our 26-0 defeat were not too critical," he said. "That is an encouraging sign, but I am still ready to move out of Boston if a better site can be found. Washington is the city to which I would like to move the team. I believe it would be supported here.

"On December 6 I will meet with the other stockholders in New York to discuss the transfer and when the league meeting is held December 12, it will go before the league. Shortly after that date I will make a definite announcement of our 1937 plans."

Ohio State U. Varsity Given Only Brief Work

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 16 (AP).—Ohio State University's varsity grid squad took a brief workout this afternoon, then rested while the first string "shock troops" scrimmaged with the freshmen. Friday, on he eve of the season's final game with Michigan, seven seniors will launch themselves at the tackling dummy in the traditional "senior tackle," the last of their collegiate careers. They are Dye, Antenucci, Cumiskey, Wendt, Smith, Hamrich and Kleinhans.

Wildcats Top Rankings in Grid Poll

Northwestern Is Pick of 17 Experts; 4 Favor Minnesota.

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 16.—Clinging tenaciously to their slender margin with the same bulldog spirit that carried them to Big Ten triumph and an all-winning season thus far, Northwestern led Minnesota today in the Associated Press college football ranking poll.

The balloting marked Northwestern's third straight week on top. For the second straight week the Wildcats led the Gophers by a scant 6 points, with a total of 337 out of a maximum of 370. Minnesota accumulated 331 points.

Seventeen of the 37 experts contributing to this week's nation-wide sampling of the expert pulse kept Northwestern at the peak. Twelve named Minnesota as the country's best team. Four placed Fordham, currently the "hot" Eastern choice for the Rose Bowl, in the No. 1 position despite the fact the Rams did not even play Saturday. The University of Washington, moving up to sixth from tenth in the national poll, and Louisiana State, No. 5 on the list, split the other first-place ballots.

Here's the outcome of this week's poll (points on 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 basis):

1.	Northwestern	337
2.	Minnesota	331
3.	Fordham	257
4.	Pittsburgh	240
5.	Louisiana State	166
6.	U. of Washington	165
7.	Marquette	154
8.	Alabama	150
9.	Santa Clara	143
10.	Pennsylvania	25
11.	Notre Dame	19
12.	Dartmouth	10
13.	Nebraska	9
14.	Texas A. & M.	8
15.	Washington State	7
16.	Duke	6
17.	Holy Cross	5
18.	Ohio State	4
19.	Tennessee	3
20.	Temple and Duquesne	2

Relatively little shakeup occurred in the top flight this week. The chief casualty was Nebraska, which dropped from sixth place to thirteenth as a result of being soundly beaten by Pittsburgh. Pennsylvania, moving up a notch, made the "first ten" for the first time this season. The Quakers unquestionably have been overlooked by some observers as a consequence of their early season loss to Yale.

The spectacular victory of the Elis over Princeton was not sufficient to rally any support for the Blue, which sequeezed into last place on only one of the lists received in this week's balloting.

Pittsburgh, Louisiana State and Marquette, as a consequence of noteworthy triumphs, each advanced in the top ten. Alabama fell off four notches, from fourth to eighth.

Ten-Goal Polo Rating Given Iglehart

Young Player Shares Top With T. Hitchcock, 15-Year Veteran.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 16.—Stewart B. Iglehart, 26-year-old Yale graduate, reached the polo peak today and took his place alongside Tommy Hitchcock in the 10-goal handicap class.

Because of his brilliant play as the No. 3 on the American team which successfully defended the International Trophy against Great Britain in England last summer, Iglehart was lifted from eight goals to the maximum in the annual handicap revisions announced by the United States Polo Association.

Hitchcock, meanwhile, retained the 10-goal rating he has held in 15 of the last 16 years. Because of business responsibilities, the veteran internationalist could not make the trip abroad for the Westchester Cup matches, but he led the Greentree four which captured the National Open crown and subsequently was beaten by Argentina in the competition for the "Cup of the Americas."

Only Two Others at Tops.

Starting with 1922, Hitchcock has been ranked at the maximum in every year except 1935. Since 1929, only two other Americans, Cecil Smith, of Texas, and Elmer Boeseke, of California, had been ranked at 10 goals until Iglehart's rise to that pinnacle today.

as polo while at Yale, first drew Iglehart, a star at hockey as well

Players Turn Down $25 Bribe, Go Wild To Win Game, 25-0

By the Associated Press.

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 16.—Two Haverhill High football stars rejected an offer of $25 each to "throw" the game with Lawrence High Saturday and then took a major part in defeating Lawrence, 25 to 0, Principal Earle H. McLeod said today.

Asserting he had a "pretty good idea" who was responsible for the attempt to influence the boys, McLeod said no action would be taken until after the season ends Thanksgiving Day.

The boys approached were Fullback Don Mitchell and Halfback Leo Thomas. They reported the matter to school officials.

Auburn Invited To Compete in Cuban Tilt

By the Associated Press.

Auburn, Ala., Nov. 16.—The Auburn Plainsmen, authoritative sources said today, have been invited to play in a post-season football game in Havana next January 1 as a climax to the Cuban capital's midwinter sports festival.

Football Coach Jack Meagher declined to comment.

The invitation, the source disclosed, provided a flat guarantee of $15,000 with an option on receipts for the game, probably against an Eastern or Midwestern opponent.

Teams under consideration as Auburn's opponent, the informant said, include Pennsylvania, Fordham, Duquesne, Marquette, Texas Christian and Arkansas.

Scott Defeats Mascia by Decision

Bout Lacking in Action; Counter Fighter Vies With Clincher.

By Bill McCormick.

Cowboy Howard Scott, District lightweight champion, outfumbled Pete Mascia, of New York, to take an unanimous decision in a 10-round bout that "climaxed" a rather dreary fight card of Turner Arena last night.

Howard, a counter fighter, waited until Mascia decided to fight, which was seldom, before throwing any punches. No sooner did Howard let a wallop loose when Mascia started clinching, thus muking a very bad fight.

Discontented customers started handclapping as early as the fifth round and continued to express their dissatisfaction at the lack of action spasmodically from that point until the finish.

Apparently gun shy, as a result of his two defeats in his last two fights, in one of which he was knocked down and in the other which ended in his being knocked out, Scott reverted to the hit-and-run tactics which seemed most natural to him, instead of boring in aggressively as he did in several pleasing bouts here.

Even with Scott changing his style the fight might have been fairly acceptable had not Mascia insisted on continually clinching.

Joey Straiges, Camden, N. J., lightweight, soundly trounced Jimmy Tramberia, wily Baltimore veteran, in a six-round semifinal. Tramberia had nothing in his repertoire

Walper, D. C., Is Third at Pinehurst

Sarazen, Cruickshank, Cooper, Smith Total 75 for Course.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pinehurst Country Club, Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 16.—A pair of professionals who never before have figured prominently in big time golf tournaments—Fay Coleman, of Culver City, Calif., and Alex Gerlak, of Catskill, N. Y—dominated the play in the first 18-hole qualifying round of the national P. G. A. championship today over Pinehurst's beautiful new No. 2 course.

Coleman, a free-swinging stylist who quit the amateur ranks four years ago, shot a blistering 68, four under par, to tie the course record established last year in the North and South championship by Ray Mangrum, the "human one iron," and Horton Smith, the versatile Joplin ghost.

Playing his round early in the morning, the 31-year-old Coleman executed every shot as if drawn by some invisible string, negotiating each nine in 34, and giving old man par a shellacking he will never forget.

Coleman appeared to be making a runaway of the first half of the 36-hole qualifying test until the 28-year-old German Pole, Garlak, thundered home late in the afternon with his 35—36—71, to reduce the big five-stroke gap that had existed between Coleman and his closest pursuers.

This seemed to be the big day for the outsiders, and the favorites tonight had reason to fear for their laurels.

Walper, only five shots from the fast-flying Coleman, was bracketed with fast company. His 37—36—73, one over par, tied him for third with Tony Manero, the swarthy, lithe-limbed National Open champion; Henry Picard, the Hershey kid, who is one of the big favorites, and Clarence Yockey, 110-pound Kansas City entry, smallest and lightest man in the field, whose performance was most amazing.

Walper Holds Up Well.

The Washingtonian's game held up beautifully despite a dismal start, which saw him take a 6, 2 over par. For the remainder of the voyage Walper was a study in consistency and concentration, as he played those 17 holes in 1 under par, with the aid of birdies on the second, fifth and tenth holes.

Walper turned in 37, and only a trapped tee shot on the short fifteenth, where he took a 4, prevented him from shooting a 36 on that tough back nine.

With the four unheralded performers—Coleman, the pace setter; Gerlak, Walper and Yockey—causing the big talk in the locker rooms, Manero and Picard were the only famous names nearest the outsiders.

Season Opens; One Hunter Killed

By the Associated Press.

Maryland's 1936 upland game season opened yesterday, marred by the accidental death of one hunter and a prediction by the State game department that both game and hunters will be more plentiful than last year.

The single fatality was reported from Washington County, where Igor Popov, 45-year-old airplane worker, was instantly killed by the accidental discharge of his shotgun. The gun trigger caught on a wire as Popov climbed through a fence, the charge striking him in the head.

Near Bel Air, Paul Cosner, 30, dropped his gun as he climbed down from a tree. The weapon went off as it hit the ground and the charge struck Cosner in the hand.

Although the season officially opened November 15 on eight kinds of game—rabbits, quail, wild turkeys, pheasants (males only), ruffed grouse, squirrels and woodcock—hunters were prevented from taking the fields until Monday morning by a State law prohibiting hunting on Sunday. The season closes December 31, except for woodcock, which may not be hunted after December 15.

A high wind was blowing in most sections of the State, making it difficult for hunters to hear the dogs. Flushed birds flew down-wind with such speed only expert marksmen could bring them down.

He said there was every indication, however, that there is a plentiful supply of all species of game and the season's outlook was optimistic.

Harold S. Kolmer, secretary of the game division of the conservation department, said an unusual last-minute rush for State-wide licenses resulted in hurry-calls from eight counties for additional license books. Requests were filled for Calvert, Baltimore, Caroline, Frederick, Howard, Wicomico, Prince Georges, and Charles Counties, Kolmer said.

Warden Lecompte warned hunters to observe bag limits on the various kinds of game. Bag limits per day are as follows:

Woodcock, 4; doves, 20; rabbits, 6; squirrels, 10; quail, 10; pheasants and ruffed grouse, 2 (not over six for the full season); wild turkeys, 1 (not over four per season).

for real enjoyment

You'll find the uncopyable El Producto blend both in slender, streamline shapes and full-bodied perfecto sizes. 10c to 35c.

"HAVANA" May Mean Good—or Bad!

It may mean the choicest tobacco grown. Or it may mean cheap grades, short ends—harsh and bitter. It may even mean a sprig or two of Havana included in a cigar for advertising purposes.

In the case of El Producto it means the best that's in Havana blended with other choice and costly tobaccos to give the mildness American smokers demand.

Modern blending is the forward step in cigar making. In El Producto, it gives taste for real enjoyment; mildness for as many smokes as you want.

Caught Breaks Last But Catches Field to Capture Bowie Purse

7,000 Shiver In Wintry Breeze

Light Chatter, $52.40, Wins Third Race on Disqualification.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 16.—Caught, a speedy son of Sting, proved a catcher of merit here this afternoon when he broke last in a field of nine and then circled his company to take a neck decision. The race was the Eden Handicap, a class C claiming event that featured today's program. Caught, with Jockey Ira Hanford in the saddle, defeated, among others, Shoeless Joe and Master Lad to bring his backers a substantial $11.20 mutuel.

The smallest crowd of the meeting to date, some 7,000, witnessed the interesting feature while they nestled into their heavy coats, trying to dodge the cold, brisk wind that swept across the track. The wind had its effect on the time of the races throughout the afternoon, with Caught hanging up the mediocre time of 1:50 2-5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

Shoeless Joe Falters.

Shoeless Joe appeared to be capable of making a runaway race of the event. He was hustled to the front and was well in hand while racing Deduce into defeat. Approaching the stretch, he assumed definite command, but Caught was coming fast. The gelding, started from outside the stall gates because he was unruly, had worked his way from last place.

Hanford put Caught to pressure in the early stretch and the gelding bounded up to Shoeless Joe. The two battled it out to the end, with Caught packing just a little more punch than his rival. Master Lad closed excellently to be third.

The Vanderbilt colors made one of their infrequent visits to the winner's circle in the first race. Keyword came from far back to take a photographic decision from the favorite, Whichprint, in the day's opening event. Jockey Les Fallon had to ride the winner wide for racing room and then brought her upon the outside with a belated rush that Whichprint could not resist. Blackscd was third in the field of 12. The winner paid an $11.10 mutuel.

Last to First Again.

Turkey Run, a heavily-played favorite, proved worthy of every dollar on his nose, galloping to the wire by five lengths after being last to leave the gate. Gala Dame was second and Roy Boy third in the field of a dozen cheap ones competing at six furlongs. Jockey Carl Hanford gave the winner a good ride and a $4.30 mutuel resulted.

Light Chatter, at a $52.40 mutuel, was awarded the third race on a disqualification. Virnock finished in front but the stewards, after hearing Jockey Carl Hanford's complaint, took down the number because he swerved over on the winner through the stretch. Boulevard was moved into second money with Salavina getting the third position.

The shift in winners brought tears to those who had visions of collecting an $83.70 daily mutuel on Virmock but joy reigned in the hearts of those who coupled the first winner with Light Chatter. They collected $371.50 for each $2 invested on the daily double.

First Pigeon accounted for the chief honors in the fourth race over the mile and a sixteenth course. The filly drew clear on Chrysmute at the finish after the pair had staged a head and head battle most of the way. Naval Cadet came from far back to be third after a sluggish start. The winner paid $5.30.

The colt Speed proved all that his name implied in the sixth race, when he toyed with a field of seven operating over the mile and a sixteenth course. With Jockey Sammy Renick banging on him most of the way, Speed bounded along to win by three and a half lengths from Easiest Way, the favorite. Blind Brook was third. The winner paid an $11.70 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KEYWORD, $11.10, $5.00, $4.50; WHICHPRINT, $3.00, $2.50; BLACKSOD, $8.00.
KEYWORD lacked early speed and dropped far back during the first quarter, swung to the outside for racing room while improving position sharply entering the stretch and responded to pressure and with a belated rush was up in the concluding strides. WHICHPRINT went forwardly throughout and closed gamely. BLACKSOD raced SORCERESS into defeat and fought it out willingly. IDLE MISS came with good courage at the end. SORCERESS tired. CRUSHED ICE had early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:02½. Off at 2:04½. Winner, Brandywine Stable's b. g. (3), by Diapason—Fantastic. Trained by W. Mulholland. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:15.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TURKEY RUN, $4.30, $3.30, $3.40; GALA DAME, $3.50, $4.00; ROY BOY, $10.70.
TURKEY RUN, unprepared for the break, went up on the inside with a bold rush to take command in the opening quarter, drew out steadily and was in hand at the end. GALA DAME worked her way to the leaders and was best of the others. ROY BOY showed a good effort and closed well under punishment on the inside. SHINDIG came willingly at the end. MISS MARED tired in the closing stages. GOLDEN HIND had good early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:33½. Off at 2:38½. Winner, W. Elliott's dk. ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIGHT CHATTER, $52.40, $20.40, $12.60; BOULEVARD, $6.90, $5.10; SALAVINA, $7.80.
VIRNOCK, rated along close to the pacemaker during the early running, came to the inside entering the stretch and swerved over on LIGHT CHATTER repeatedly for which he was disqualified. LIGHT CHATTER assumed command in the run to the first turn and fought it out willingly despite interference. BOULEVARD came from far back on the outside to be going well at the end. SALAVINA gained sharply on the swing for the stretch and closed gamely. STORY TIME rallied mildly in the stretch. HAPPY NYMPH quit. ROLLICKER had a good burst of speed entering the stretch, but hung. OFF AND ON stopped.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $371.50.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:09. Winner, H. J. Bundscho's b. or br. c. (4), by Pigeon Wing II—Goldie Girl. Trained by H. J. Bundscho. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FIRST PIGEON, $5.30, $3.20, $2.60; CHRYSMUTE, $8.40, $4.70; NAVAL CADET, $3.60.
FIRST PIGEON tiptoed to the front in the dash to the first turn, shook off challenges of PEPPERY and SWIFTLET and then was rated along with CHRYSMUTE to the backstretch and drew out gradually. CHRYSMUTE moved to the leaders along the backstretch and fought it out willingly to the end. NAVAL CADET, slow as usual at the beginning, began improving his position leaving the backstretch, but was not good enough. PEPPERY hung on well after being a forward factor during the early running. QUIET PLEASE went evenly. CYNWYD went up approaching the far turn and then dropped out of it.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. The Eden Handicap, Class C. Purse, $1,000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:33½. Off at 3:39. Winner, James Butler's b. g. (4), by Sting—Mollie Darling. Trained by W. Booth. Value to winner, $765; second, $150, third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:50 1-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:50 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAUGHT, $11.20, $6.10, $5.00; SHOELESS JOE, $7.80, $5.90; MASTER LAD, $6.60.
CAUGHT, fractious at the post and started outside the gates, was away slowly, was steadied along the backstretch after improving position, gained sharply on the outside on the swing for the stretch while on the outside, took command and held SHOELESS JOE safe at the end. The latter was steadied along while setting the pace with DEDUCE, drew clear approaching the stretch, but could not resist the winner. MASTER LAD closed gamely. MISS CAREFUL closed with good energy. TREFORD was kept on the inside throughout. DEDUCE stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Foaled in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:06½. Off at 4:07½. Winner, H. W. Jackson's ch. c. (3), by Flight of Time—Rosern. Trained by G. C. Winfrey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50, 1:15 1-5, 1:42 1-5, 1:49 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPEED, $11.70, $5.00, $3.30; EASIEST WAY, $3.30, $2.20; BLIND BROOK, $2.40.
SPEED went to the front at once, was rated along while drawing far out and was well in hand while winning easily. EASIEST WAY, a trailer to the backstretch, came through on the inside to gain contention and finished gamely. BLIND BROOK tired gradually after chasing the pacemaker. UNENCUMBERED went evenly throughout. WINGED FLIGHT dropped out of it once. WISE WILL was not a factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Foaled in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:33½. Off at 4:39½. Winner, J. D. Cohn's rn. f. (3), by Sir Greystee—Flosestine. Trained by S. L. Burch. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:51, 1:16 1-5, 1:43, 1:50 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRON ORE, $6.70, $4.30, $4.10; SEA GULL, $11.70, $8.90; FLYING FALCON, $8.30.
IRON ORE, within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning, moved around leaders entering the stretch and drew out while under a heavy drive. SEA GULL raced with GOLDEN VEIN and continued gamely through the stretch, but was unable to cope with the winner. FLYING FALCON came with good energy for the finish. GOLDEN VEIN was rushed to the front and was weakly ridden. WANDREL gained some ground in the late stages. MISS TIPTOE could not threaten at any stage.

Jesse Owens Leads Morris In Voting for Sullivan Award

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 16.—That man Jesse Owens is out in front again, this time in the race for the 1936 James E. Sullivan Award.

The Ohio State Olympic sprint and broad jump champion was a few votes ahead of Glen Morris, national and Olympic decathlon champion, today in the list of 33 athletes nominated for the award by over 600 sports experts all over the country.

The announcement was made by Dan Ferris, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union. He refused to reveal the margin of Owens' lead.

This list of 33 will be cut to 10 by the Sullivan Award committee of the Amateur Athletic Union. The committee will announce its selections at the A. A. U. convention in Houston, Tex., December 4, and the 600 sports leaders will select the winner from these 10.

Medica Near Top.

Other leaders in the order of balloting were Jack Medica, Seattle, Wash., Olympic 400-meter free style swimming champion; Forrest "Spec" Towns, University of Georgia hurdler; Glenn Hardin, Louisiana State University hurdler; Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati, National amateur golf champion; Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Calif., winner of the all-England tennis singles crown; Helen Stephens, Fulton, Mo., Olympic women's sprint champion; Alice Marble, National women's tennis singles champion, and Jay Berwanger, all-America back from the University of Chicago.

Glenn Cunningham, Lawrence, Kans., miler, was also favored in the voting, though as winner of the 1933 award he is not eligible to receive it again. Other winners of the award are Lawson Little, 1935; Bill Bonthron, 1934; Jim Bausch, 1932; Barney Berlinger, 1931, and Bobby Jones, 1930.

Other Eligible Athletes.

Others on the list from which the "Big Ten" will be chosen:

Outcome May Decide Title In Series

Coach Pearce Will Start Best Players; Ahern to Depend on Backs.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A good Central team with a good record meets a good Western team with a poor record today in Western Stadium in a game which would make the winner the interhigh champion in the event Roosevelt should upset Tech on Friday.

In any case, the result will decide second place in the series which is enough to add considerable fuel to the fire. Considered Central's chief rival next to Tech, the Georgetowners have been pointing for this game for weeks and a victory would make it a successful season for the Thirty-fifth street school despite its four defeats.

Weinstein, Snead Ready.

The Big Red team will loose two of the best backs in the city against the Dark Blue at 3:15 p. m. In Len Weinstein and Morris Snead, the Georgetowners have a touchdown twin combination able to match Central's celebrated pair of Bill Wooten and Billy Vermillion. Central, incidentally, won last year's game, 18-0.

Western's 13-12 defeat by Woodrow Wilson last week, however, lowered its stock sharply, and Central's 24-0 win over Roosevelt failed to help Western hopes at all. Followers of the Georgetowners, however, point out that Western let down for the surprisingly strong Chevy Chasers and predict Central will catch them on a powerful rebound.

As for Western's other three defeats, two were suffered before the interhigh series when the team was in a formulative stage while Tech's 7-0 victory came while Western actually outplayed the Gray by a wide margin. On the basis of that game, Western should be leading the series.

Pearce Names Players.

Coach Hardy Pearce of Central is starting Sam Fox, Hugh Cramer, Charlie Jones and Billy Vermillion, at end, tackle, guard and quarterback, respectively, after ousting them from the starting line-up following the Tech game. The only other change calls for Chacos at right half in place of Bernie Askin.

Sparkling with first-class linesmen, Central's chief worry appears to be overconfidence. Coach Dan Ahern of Western, however, has two strong ends in Manuel Iglesias, the Porto Rican boy, and Jim Farquharson, who appears headed toward all-high recognition.

Western Lightweights Win From Tech, 6 to 0

The winning touchdown came when Roddy Snow, of Western, recovered a fumble by one of his teammates which rolled over the Tech goal line.

Fencing Lecture.

The local Y. M. C. A. fencing team will hold an exhibition and lecture on fencing at the home of Coach Maj. E. L. Dyer, 2959 Newark street northwest Wednesday evening at 8:15. Col. E. W. Emerson, of the 1936 Olympic team, will speak.

Win, Seek Games.

The Anacostia Eagles swamped Mike Scanlon's Northwestern A. C., 25-0, Sunday, and now challenges the Regal Clothiers, No. 5 Precinct Boys Club varsity, and other clubs. Call Johnny Severn, Atlantic 0623 between 6 and 7 p. m.

El Paso Customs Patrol Wins Pistol Shoot Here

Wild Dodgers To Be Tamed, Says Grimes

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 16.—Burleigh Grimes' first official act as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers was to declare war today on the club's reputation for daffiness.

"Baseball's a serious business," he said, "and my ball club is not going to be turned into a burlesque."

And burly Burleigh looked as if he meant it. He was a little more gray and grave than when he finished his successful pitching career with the Dodgers ten years ago, but there was nothing to indjcate any of the old fire is gone.

He was especially enthusiastic about his ace pitcer, Van Lingle Mungo.

Pressed by the reporters for a comparison between Mungo and Dizzy Dean, he said:

"I think Mungo will be in baseball ten years from now. I don't think Dean will be. Nobody seems to know just how old Dean is. My guess is he's around 30. We know Mungo's only 25."

10-Day Clause Removed.

John Gorman, business manager of the club, announced the 10-day clause in Grimes' original one-year contract had been "taken out by mutual consent." Under this cluase, the club would have broken the contract on 10 days' notice.

Grimes was at loss to understand why the reporters were featuring his trouble with umpires. "What if I was kicked out of a lot of games last year?" he asked. "In 18 years as a pitcher in the National League, I was kicked out of only three games."

The Dodgers will have a curfew next year, the new manager said.

"I'll decide on the time later," he added, "but I konw definitely we will check the men in every night."

He would not say where he thought the club will finish.

Terps and Hoyas Work for Struggle

X-ray was made yesterday, but its disclosures will not be known until today or tomorrow. Meanwhile Hagerty is grooming Noonan and Williams for the post. Williams, 150 pounds of dynamite, was no less than brilliant against Manhattan and will be a distinct asset to the Blue and Gray if he starts.

But, while Snyder may be out, Tommy Keating, Bill Duff and Bob Ferrara, who have been on the hospital list, should be available, and all are vital cogs in the Hilltop machine. Keating's field generalship has been missed in particular, for his greater experience gives him a wide edge over Moulin in this department. Ferrara seemed headed for his best year when put out of action with a fractured arm, and he will be a welcome addition to the roster. Duff is a hard-hitting fullback, best on the squad, and a good punter.

District Hockey Trials To Be Held This Week

Tryouts to choose a team to represent Washington in the Southeastern Hockey Tournament will be held Wednesday at the Sixteenth Street Reservoir; Thursday, Mount Vernon Seminary, and Friday, at Cathedral School. The tryouts will be held each day at 4 p. m.

The team will be announced Friday at a banquet at the Parrot Tea Room, at 6:30 p. m. Those desiring to attend will notify Miss Lucy Sanborn at the Madeira School not later than Wednesday.

'37 Cornell Schedule Severest in 50 Years

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Expectations of a greatly improved football team next year today led Cornell to arrange the most difficult schedule for 1937 in the 50 years of its gridiron history. Next year's schedule:

September 25, Penn State.

October 2, Colgate; 9, Princeton at Princeton; 16, Syracuse; 23, Yale at New Haven; 30, Columbia.

National Savings Dines.

The baseball team of the National Savings & Trust Co. will be guests of honor of the bank Friday night at a banquet in the Oak room of the Raleigh Hotel. National Savings won 19 out of 20 games to take the Bankers League title in The Washington Post Sandlot Association.

Kelley Is Revealed As Perpetrator of Yale Injury Hoax

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 16.—Larry Kelley, spectacular Yale captain and end, who was a hero of the Eli victory over Princeton, was revealed today at the football writers' weekly luncheon as the perpetrator of something of a hoax on the Tigers.

It concerns Dave Colwell, Colorado boy and Yale fullback, who got into the game briefly for the first time since being operated on for appendicitis more than three weeks ago and subsequently taken out after apparently being hurt.

"He may have been shaken up," said Dr. Marvin (Mal) Stevens, New York University coach and former Yale mentor, "but the idea of making it appear more serious was Kelley's. The purpose was to permit a substitution without taking an extra time out.

"Kelley rushed over to Colwell after the latter was bowled over and said: 'Make it look good.' Colwell did his part so well that he finally had to whisper to Kelley: 'Is it all right now for me to turn over?'"

Dr. Stevens declared no risk was involved in using Colwell.

"He had no complications and was completely recovered," said the former Eli head coach.

Injured List's Recovery to Aid Navy

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 16.—In fine spirits, but somewhat battered after playing five of the Nation's biggest teams on as many successive Saturdays, Navy players were given a complete rest this afternoon, and the serious work of preparing the team for the Army game, to be played in less than two weeks, will begin tomorrow. Not even the "B" Squad entered Thompson Stadium today.

In spite of the severe test to which Navy players have been subjected, its reserve strength is growing as the season nears its end, both by recovery of the hospital list and transfers from "B" Squad.

Of special satisfaction to Navy people is the return of Tom Edwards, a fine running back, and Bill Bringle, spirited end, both of whom were believed to be out for the season.

U. S. Olympic Fund Planned in Advance

New York, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Money to send the 1940 United States Olympic team to Tokyo will be in the bank when the squad is ready to depart and there will be no last minute drive for funds as there was this year if the forty-eighth annual convention of the Amateur Athletic Union acts favorably upon an amendment contained in the legislative committee report mailed to the 400 delegates today.

The amendment which will have to be acted upon when the convention goes into session December 4 -6 at Houston, Tex. Another important recommendation was for abandoning the system of metric measurements and return yards and miles. The committee also included a proposal of minimum ages for women's competition.

The money for the United States Olympic team would be raised by adding to the stabilized price of all tickets of admission to A. A. U. sanctioned events the sum of 5 cents as an "olympic contribution."

G. U. Alumni Smoker Is Scheduled Friday

Georgetown University men will gather on Friday, the eve of the Georgetown-Maryland game, at a smoker and buffet supper to be held at the Mayflower Hotel. The District of Columbia Alumni Association of Georgetown is joining with the law school alumni in the plans.

The Rev. Father O'Leary, president of Georgetown, will address the gathering, as will Head Coach Jack Hagerty.

Jackson Renominated Is U.S.G.A. President

New York, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—John G. Jackson, of the Deepdale Golf Club, New York, has been renominated for the presidency of the United State Golf Association. The name of Jackson, present incumbent, headed a list of officers submitted by the nominating committee today.

PWA Bowlers Victims of G-Men

Bureau of Investigation, pace-setters in the Federal League loop, continued to run over its opposition last night at the Arcadia drives. The PWA team was the latest to feel the wrath of the G-Men, bowing before the combined efforts of Bill Miller and Astor Clarke, the former contributing a 147 game and 426 set and the latter hitting for 152 and 397.

The Veterans' Administration, in possession of the runner-up position, losttion, lost ground by dropping a game to War. Louis Rouche, who has been exhibiting some tall scores this season, topped all the individual scoring with games of 151, 144 and 133 for a 428 set.

Led by Groth's 144 game and 376 set and a 592 game, Labor humbled I. B. E. W., No. 121, two games and G. P. O. spilled the maples for a 628 set in taking a three-game forfeit from Civil Service.

Shades of a fomer District ranking star were brought to mind in the Graphic Arts League at Lucky Strike when Earl McPhilomy, playing with Stanford Paper, rolled a 154 game and 391 set to aid his team's odd game victory over Commercial Office. Progressive Printing clung to the No. 1 position with two wins over Caslon Simonds.

Central Bureau featured the activities of the Southern Railway League, annexing team honors with a 574 game and 1,547 set. Rudy Jalman boosted the total with top game of 149. Harry Sole Operations) carried away the set honors with 371.

M. Hanagan's 123 game and 317 set enabled St. Gabriel's to take high game and set in the Fidelity Ladies League. . . . Irene Scott (W. M. C.) chalked up a new season record set in the What's in a Name League with 360. . . . Adrian Belk's 149 and 373 was the best individual effort in the Kilowatt League . . . Brock and Garnett teamed up to give the Aztecs a clean sweep over the Modernists in the Procurement League.

Pass Near Finish Win for De Paul

Russellville, Ark., Nov. 16 (AP).—A touchdown pass from Phillips to Apolskis in the closing minutes today gave Depaul University, of Chicago, a 26-to-19 victory over Arkansas Tech.

Tech took an early lead, scoring twice ona fumble recovered over the goal line and a 40-yard drive. A 45-yard scoring run by Phillips and a 1-yard plunge by Mattei after a 26-yeard pass from Phillips to Postaer scored two touchdowns for Depaul in the second period.

Arkansas took a 19-to12 lead in the third on a pass from Hager to Tolliver. The visitors tied it up in the same quarter on Postaeru's run back of a punt for 20 yards.

Joe Louis Faces Pair In Exhibition Bouts

New Orleans, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Joe Louis' 6-ounce fighting gloves will be on his fists again Friday night when he meets two dusky fighters in two scheduled three-round exhibitions here.

Tom Jones, 190, who has fought Max Baer, King Levinsky, Art Lasky and other heavyweights, and Paul Williams, 210, will go against Louis.

Cagers Want Game.

The Ballston 100-pound basketball team would like to schedule games with teams who have a gymnasium. Call Clarendon 314.

Post Scripts . . . .

Noel Laing, one of the best horse trainers and steeplechase riders in the world, belied reports of his dire condition in a local hospital by having one of the horses he trained win an important hurdle race in Middleburg last Saturday . . . the horse, Plain Peggy, belongs to E. E. Peirce, of Warrenton, and was prepared for the meet by Laing . . . who says he will be out of the hospital and ready for action again by the spring racing season . . . The $400,000 guarantee offered Jim Braddock to fight Joe Louis in Atlantic City next February 22, is the largest ever offered any fighter . . . incidentally, the fight, if held, will be held in the Atlantic City Auditorium, the largest indoor site in the world . . . There are now more than 400 bowling leagues in the District . . . Harry Raskin's new Texas fighter, Max Roesch, now has had four professional fights—all under the supervision of Harry himself—and won them all by knockouts . . . It is said in authoritative sources that the Georgetown football squad will not be as badly crippled as is generally expected against Maryland next Saturday afternoon . . . many of the lads injured in last week's Manhattan game will be back in the line-up, albeit slightly stiff and sore.

Coleman's 68 Leads P. G. A. Qualifiers

Johnny Revolta, defending champion, picking up birdies on two of the last four holes, was around in 74, as were Billy Burke, former Open champion; Ray Mangrum, Ed Dudley, Craig Wood and Alvin Krueger.

In the 75 class were Gene Sarazen, the cockey three-time titleholder, who rushed back from Australia to attempt to regain his lost prestige; Harry Cooper, golfdom's hard-luck man; Horton Smith, Bobby Cruickshank, recurrent bombshell of National Opens, and Ky Laffoon.

Tommy Armour scored a 76, and Walter Hagen, five-time champion, had 77, same as Jimmy Thompson, another favorite, and Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., star. Paul Runyan, 1934 titleholder, had to hole a 40-footer for an eagle 3 on the sixteenth in order to break 80. That 3 gave him a 78, same score posted by Denny Shute. That hot golfer, Jimmy Hines, scored 79.

A cold wind swept the course, adding to the golfers' woes, but when the firing ceased late in the afternoon the boys were agreed that these Italian rye greens built by Donald Ross caused the most trouble.

Nothing, however, seemed to worry the curly-haired Mr. Coleman, who didn't know what it was to go over par. He rang up 14 pars and 4 birdies for a masterful exhibition.

Many Fold in Streich.

Many of the stars found the first nine much to their liking, only to collapse on the stretch. Harry Cooper started with two birdies and birdied in the fourth and fifth, both tough par fives. He was four under par for seven holes, and reached the turn in 33. Then the old man started slipping. He hit bad tee and second shots, and was lucky to get a 42.

Laffoon, too, went haywire on the back nine, taking a 41 after going out in 34, and the crown prince of golf, Mr. Hagen, who won the medal last season at Oklahoma City, matched his age of 41 on the back side after a grand 36 for the first nine.

After all, the idea is to qualify. And most of the golfers feel that way about it. Cruickshank remarked after posting his score of 75, "I took it easy today. I've got a week of golf ahead of me." Well, that's confidence. Only 64 can qualify for match play, and it looks as if scores of 157 will make the grade.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

It was the good Marshal de Villars, who, on taking his sad leave of Louie the Fourteenth, was promoted to remark, "Save me from my friends; I will defend myself from my enemies." Out at the University of Maryland, Bill Guckeyson is beginning to feel the same way about it.

POVICH.

Guckeyson, in his three years of varsity football at Maryland, had no complaints. And, likewise, Maryland coaches and undergraduates of the past three years had no complaints about Guckeyson, who has just about established himself as the greatest football product ever spawned at College Park.

But recently, last Saturday, in fact, a sour note entered the altogether delightful proceedings that had revolved about Guckeyson. A special homecoming-day edition of the Diamondback, student paper, flooded the campus, the stadium and surrounding territory with a "Guckeyson for All-America" campaign, and it was almost too much.

Almost too much, that is, for modest, serious young Bill Guckeyson, who had always been willing to let his performances on the field speak for him, who literally blushes at even the smallest headlines his name commands, and who honestly prefers to consider himself as only a part of the Maryland football machine, not its spark or life blood.

On a full page that literally screamed his prowess, Guckeyson read that, in the opinion of Washington and Baltimore sports writers, he is a genuine All-American. Not one but two pictures of himself adorned the page. His feats during three years at Maryland were recounted for all to see, and that he would lead Maryland to a victory over V. M. I. was a foregone conclusion.

Well, Guckeyson's friends, those well-meaning editors of the student paper, virtually made a wreck out of the Maryland star. At breakfast Saturday morning, his fingers trembled with his coffee cup. The lad who could pile into a line, smash off a tackle, stiff-arm 200-pounders and outrun the fastest foe was literally overcome by the tribute.

Out there on the football field a few hours later, Guckeyson was far from the calm, cool triple-threat star whose mere presence in the game had been almost tantamount to a Maryland victory. Visibly upset by the intended honors heaped upon him, he fumbled twice in crucial spots, ran with none of the smashing abandon that marked his previous games, and, though he did star, he was no All-American that afternoon.

What they say about the fellow is true. He is modest despite the acclaim his feats have won him. Out at Maryland he is the darling of the coeds, the idol of the boy students, the one great example to which the coaches point. Success on the football field has not turned the head of this lad who prefers any other topic of conversation when the topic turns to himself.

And Guckeyson is considerable of a topic at Maryland. Besides his football feats he has taken time out to win his letter in baseball, track and basketball, to set a new conference record in the javelin and to qualify generally as the greatest athlete in the history of the university. In fair competition he can defend himself, but overzealous editors can lick him.

In Short—

Three times this season, Guckeyson has been named on the Associated Press honor roll following Saturday performances . . . his gains in rushing the ball have averaged 7 yards, and he has scored 6 of Maryland's 13 touchdowns . . . both Florida and Indiana last season rated Guckeyson on their all-opponents' team in 1935, classifying him as "the best back we have faced all season" . . . and the Indiana team faced such backs as Jay Berwanger, of Chicago, and Oze Simmons, of Iowa . . . against Georgetown last season Guckeyson scored both Maryland touchdowns on old-fashioned end runs in which his sheer speed carried him past the Georgetown secondary defense . . . of all the local backs touted as the successor to G. W.'s Tuffy Leemans as the outstanding star of Washington football, Guckeyson alone has justified his advance notices . . . and by the end of the season he may even be conceded the superior to Leemans . . . Guckeyson, with his passing, running and kicking, boasts all the assets Leemans had, and has a deal more native speed in addition . . . the lone phase of play in which Leemans appears superior is his broken-field running.

Country Boy Baggett, highly touted light-heavyweight prospect from Bornton, Ga., made an auspicious debut in the big city by knocking out Rusty Baker, of Baltimore, in 2 minutes of the second round.

Baker did better than good against his squat opponent in the first round, but Baggett sent him sprawling in the second with a short and apparently harmless right. Rusty just could rise before the count was finished.

Armstrong Takes D. C. Colored Title

Armstrong gridders annexed the colored city high school championship yesterday by defeating Cardozo, at Walker Stadium, 12-0. Dunbar had previously forfeited her games in the series because of ineligibility of members of her squad.

The first Armstrong touchdown was made early in the game, after three minutes of play, by Wallace. Armstrong had booted the ball to the Cardozo 20-yard line, where Cardozo was held for downs. On an attempted punt, a bad pass from the Cardozo center was recovered by Holloway, Armstrong linesman, on the Cardozo 25. Wallace negotiated the touchdown in two plunges off tackle. A third failed for the extra point.

It was "Bulldog" Finley, in the fourth quarter, who scored again for Armstrong, skirting the Cardozo end for 15 yards. Cardozo played a heady game, but was unable to use her trick plays and passes to advantage because of a wind-swept field.

conference match pairs Illinois and Chicago. In the Big Six, leading Nebraska and runner-up Kansas State will fight it out for the title at Lincoln. Games outside the conferences pair Detroit-North Dakota, Iowa State-Drake, Missouri-Washington of St. Louis, Michigan State-Arizona, and Oklahoma-Oklahoma A. and M.

South—In the Southeastern Conference, leading Louisiana State plays outside the conference against Southwest Louisiana, while runner-up Alabama is idle. Three games in that division pair Georgia Tech-Florida, Mississippi State-Mississippi, and Tulane-Sewanee. In the Southern Conference only one game is slated, South Carolina vs. North Carolina. Other Dixie games pair Georgetown-Maryland, Texas A. and M.-Centenary, and Auburn-Loyola of New Orleans.

Pacific Coast—Washington and Washington State rest this week in preparation for their big Thanksgiving game to decide which shall defend in the Rose Bowl and whether Washington shall have sole possession of the conference title or share it with the Cougars. Two conference games bring together Stanford and California in their annual classic, and Oregon and Oregon State. Next Sunday Santa Clara risks its perfect record against Loyola at Los Angeles.

Rocky Mountains—The conference champion, Utah State, is idle. Brigham Young engages Wyoming, Colorado Mines plays Greeley Teachers, and Colorado State meets Colorado College. Outside the conference, San Francisco University invades Montana.

Michigan State Harrier King 4th Time

Continues College Cross-Country Sway Started Back in 1933.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 16.—Michigan State's harriers retained control of the I. C. A. A. A. A. competition today as 23-year old Kenneth Waite from Jackson, Mich., paced the Spartans to their fourth straight varsity championships and Richard Frey, former Buffalo schoolboy, won the freshmen individual title.

With a biting wind sweeping over Van Cortlandt Park's hills and dales, Waite sprinted into an early lead and never relinquished his advantage. At the finish of the 5-mile journey he was more than 100 yards in front of Peter Olezy, of Penn State, and was clocked in the good time of 25 minutes 26 and three-tenths seconds.

Completing a well-balanced team, coached by 31-year-old Lauren Brown, the Spartans placed their remaining four men in sixth, ninth, sixteenth and eighteenth places to retain the team crown with a low aggregate of 46 points. In figuring the team score, several of the runners were dropped out because their schools did not enter complete teams.

For the third time since Michigan State started its string of victories in 1933, Manhattan took runner-up honors with 66 points. The Jaspers gained some solace, however, by winning the freshmen title for the second straight year and the fifth time in the last six years.

Waite, third last year when his teammate, J. Edward Bechtold, showed the way home and Gene Venzke, of Penn, finished second, lost no time asserting his superiority. The 140-pound harrier had not gone more than a mile on the flat before he started out like a dash man.

Half-Bred Horses May Get Licenses

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—The New York State Racing Commission today went on record as approving the licensing of half-bred horses for racing only in this country.

The suggestion, which will be presented to the Jockey Club for action, grew out of the fact that in England this is permitted, while in the United States so fine a mare as Quashed, victor over William Woodward's Omaha in the Ascot Gold Cup, would be barred because her ancestry is not fully acceptable to the stud book.

80-Year-Old Virginia Man Scores Hole-in-One

Winchester, Va., Nov. 16.—George W. Haddox, octogenarian golfer, has entered the hole-in-one club as a full-fledged member. He made the perfect strike on No. 3, a 131-yard hole, at the Winchester Country Club, using a three iron.

Haddox was playing with a fellow member. One of the oldest golfers in Virginia, he began playing here more than 40 years ago when the Rev. Nelson P. Dame, then rector of Christ Episcopal Church, introduced the game to Winchester. Mr. Haddox was a former chapion of the local club and has a long record as an outstanding wrestler and trapshooter.

$355,000,000 Savings Ready For Christmas

Local Banks to Pay Out $6,258,440 to 76,307 Club Members.

By Thomas M. Cahill

Fifty-five hundred banking institutions will disburse early next month $355,000,000 to about 7,500,000 Christmas Club members, according to an estimate given out yesterday by Herbert F. Rawll, president of Christmas Club Corporation of New York after a country-wide survey. The average amount for each member is $46.50, although the actual amounts vary from $12.50 to $1,000.

Nineteen Washington banks operating Christmas clubs will pay out this year $6,258,440 to 76,307 members, an average of $82.10. This is said to be the highest average per capita of any city in the country, and represents a membership of about one in every eight of the District's residents and a gain of 10,153 members and almost $1,000,000 more than in 1935 and almost 50 per cent more than in 1934.

Past experience indicates that half the total disbursed goes into Christmas purchases, and 25 per cent into permanent savings accounts and investments. Taxes, insurance premiums and debt reductions account for the remainder.

Cost Accountants' Meeting.

Accounting and sales problems created for retailers and manufacturers by the Robinson-Patman act will be discussed at the November meeting tomorrow night of the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants. The meeting, which will be held in the Gold Room of the Hamilton Hotel, will be addressed by Dr. W. H. S. Stevens, formerly with the Federal Trade Commission.

DR. STEVENS.

The provisions of the act in which the interest of retailers, jobbers and manufacturers center, are those which amend the Clayton act so that it shall be unlawful to discriminate in price between different purchasers of goods of like grade, except as such variations are justified by differences in cost of manufacture or sale resulting from the different methods or quantities in which commodities are sold. The act is interpreted to mean that quantity discounts to large outlets such as chain stores, department stores or mail houses are permitted but only where the cost of sales to such large distributors is shown to be less by approved accounting methods.

Following Dr. Stevens' address there will be a forum discussion under the direction of Arthur B. Gunnarson, of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Mr. Gunnarson, who was formerly connected with the Harvard Bureau of Business Research, is now in charge of the national chamber's activities in the field of domestic distribution. He is well known for his studies and speeches on current business problems as they are affected by Congressional legislation.

All accountants and business executives interested in the effect of the Robinson-Patman act are cordially invited to attend the meeting, which will begin at 8 p. m.

F. D. I. C. Report.

A recent report of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was made on the amount of assets and liabilities of insured banks as of June 30, 1936, which includes all 22 of Washington's insured banks in the list. At that time, these 22 banks carried total cash balances with other banks and items in process of collection amounting to $112,204,000. They had total direct obligations of the United States Government in the sum of $74,222,000 and total obligations fully guaranteed by the United States Government of $23,212,000.

These banks had other securities amounting to $27,961,000, while loan, discounts and overdrafts amounted to $59,824,000. Miscellaneous assets amounted to $22,124,000 and the 22 banks of Washington had total assets of $350,627,000. The report showed further that the banks had total time and demand deposits on June 30 of $306,413,000. They had a total capital account of $42,591,000 and total liabilities, including the capital account, of $350,627,000.

Banking Notes.

S. H. Smith, cashier, Shenandoah County Bank & Trust Co., Woodstock, Va., was elected chairman of Group 3, Virginia Bankers Association, at its recent meeting in Alexandria. T. E. Cebrell, of the Clarendon Trust Co., will serve the group as vice chairman for the new administrative year.

Stocks Recover in Less Active Trading Led by Stores and Metals; Bonds Firm.

New York, Nov. 16.—Led by mercantile issues anticipating active retail trade in the holiday season and helped along by special dividends from several industrial companies, stocks rallied today in less active trading. The second grade bond section showed gains of 1 to 2 points. Sterling and francs were firm. Commodities were strong, December wheat closing more than a point higher and cotton futures selling steady to slightly higher.

Stock turnover of around 2,250,000 shares was the smallest in two weeks. Steel, other metal, food, merchandising, amusement and mail order shares were the most favored groups. Textiles also were bought. Largest gains were in copper and silver and steel issues. Amusements and a handful of low priced speculative stocks accounted for a large part of the day's business. Paramount preferred added a half-dozen points to last week's advance of more than 10 points. Warner, RKO and Radio advanced moderately, but Columbia broke nearly 3 points.

United States Steel and Bethlehem rose more than a point. Du Pont opened more than two points higher at the best price of the day, in advance of announcement of the special dividend of $2, which will distribute more than $22,000,000 to stockholders.

Food Shares Strong.

Food shares, particularly bakeries, enjoyed their best session in some time. Rails were irregular, Santa Fe and Southern Pacific standing out on the top and C. & O., New York Central and Union Pacific wavering. Motors were less active in a fractional advance. Aviation shares, except for the break of nearly two points in T. W. A. on announcement of the stock offering, picked up in volume and price.

Further thinking on the extraordinary remarks of President Roosevelt last Friday with respect to foreign funds sent to this country and invested in our security market failed to uncover any logical and sound economic reason for the expressed intention of the Administration to curb the international movement of funds. However, second thoughts brought some recovery of equanimity in the market, at home and abroad, over the possible early effects of anything the Government might do, only the more pessimistic observers supposed that our Government is announcing first steps to be taken designed to put us into the economic doldrums now enjoyed by Germany and Italy, which have almost airtight restrictions on the exportation of capital, be it home owned or foreign owned.

Foreign Selling.

Actually to do anything by means of new legislation, such as to tax profits by foreigners, would merely be biting off our nose to spite our face. The fear of an upset to our market from foreign selling, which Roosevelt professes to see, is without substance. Before foreign investors could get the wind up and begin to sell, the home talent would already have been selling actively. The Administration never will be able to force money into or out of markets at will, and no one need worry about protection for the home investor against the trading whims of the foreigner. Help is needed rather on the other side.

Another side of the matter is of foreign exchange. Here again the President appears to be worrying about nothing within his power to change. If he fears for the stability of the dollar when foreign money suddenly decides to return home, it is hard to understand why, for such a movement would be temporary and the dollar quickly would snap back; unless, indeed, the flight was prompted by realization that American fiscal policies and the economic position were growing worse. In that case no power could maintain the dollar, and the remedy would lie in a reform of those policies which caused the damage.

Short-Term Funds.

There is a field of useful endeavor, no doubt, the management of short-term funds and the gold shipments that go from one country to another in response to shifting political and economic scenery. That doubtless is a matter for experts to work out, in the sterilization of gold imports. Meanwhile, if the President is merely crying wolf in the hope that French funds may be frightened back to Paris, and thereby strengthen the tone of the franc, make easier the Government's refunding schemes, and stimulate a revival in French trade, he probably is wasting his breath.

Those ends are admirable, but their attainment rests with French policy. If the French have been disappointed in the failure of French money to return to France after devaluation, the reason has been continued fear of what a Socialist government might do, the possibility of war, and the lack of attractive investment opportunities on the home front.

Finally, if the President merely had in mind putting a damper on stock market enthusiasm here by hinting that he might cut off an important source of buying, he has used doubtful tactics. Some day he might wish to drum things up a little for our sagging markets. Sound fiscal policy will take care of the American dollar, and relieved of unwise interference, economic progress in the United States will guarantee the safety of investment in the markets.

Industrial news of the week indicated a slight gain in steel operations from 74 to 74.1 per cent of capacity. First reports on freight car loadings were moderately higher than in election week.

Brokerage View.

As Ralph E. Samuel, member of the Stock Exchange firm of Weingarten & Co., sees the foreign investment business: "It is not particularly a sign of economic maturity for us to welcome the world's participation in our markets and then express deep concern as to what will happen when the participation turns into liquidation. We might just as well be concerned about the advent of recovery, because some day recovery will end and depression set in."

Erie.

A stock market observer has this to say about Erie: "Erie Railroad is about to retire the last of its Erie-Pennsylvania Coal Co. collateral 4½s from the 15 cents a ton paid by Erie Railroad to the sinking fund on every ton of coal mined by the Pennsylvania Coal Co. This will leave the Erie Railroad owner of the $5,000,000 Pennsylvania Coal Co. stock, which last year paid Erie Railroad $400,000 dividends, out of $625,000 surplus profits earned. Dividends this year will be larger because of larger output and the need to escape the new taxes. With the payment of the last of the Erie-Pennsylvania Coal bonds the 15 cents a ton charge will end. This should relieve Erie Railroad of around $1,000,000 a year. The coal stock should earn at least $750,000 a year. It is said the Erie estimates about 65,000,000 tons of coal are still in sight in the coal property."

Bicycle Tires Back Into Big Business

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—For the first year since the passing of the bustle and the fulsome hats of the nineties output of bicycle tires has shot above the million mark, U. S. Rubber Products, Inc., announced today. With more than a million tires built in the first eight months of 1936, the company's all-time production now stands at 65,000,000 tires. The company started output in 1892.

Lead at 5.20 Cents, Highest in 6 Years

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—The price of lead reached a new high since October, 1930, today when two leading producers quoted the metal for New York delivery at 5.20-25 cents a pound, and 5.05 cents a pound at East St. Louis.

It was the fifth successive price rise in a little more than a month, the New York quotations jumping in that period from 4.60-65 cents. Today's price represents an advance of .10 of a cent. Heavy demand for the metal has been continuous for more than 18 weeks.

Wheat Futures Surge Upward To 7-Year Peak

Rye Advances 3¾ Cents and Soy Beans Jump 4 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—In a general buying movement that developed late today, wheat swept upward to a new high price record since 1929, reaching $1.18¾ Chicago December delivery.

All futures of rye, the companion of wheat as a bread stuff, overtipped this season's previous peak quotations, and shot skyward in some cases 3¾ cents, while soy beans soared 4 cents, the immediate allowable limit, registering a total gain of more than 11 cents within the past month. Corn values advanced to almost equal to the year's apex.

Wheat closed strong, 1⅛@2 cents above Saturday's finish; December, 118⅛@118¼; May, 115½@115⅝; December, 102¾@102⅞; corn, ⅞@1⅛ up; December, 103⅝@103¾; May, new, 97@98⅛; July, new, 93¼; oats, ⅛@½ advance; December, 44⅛, and rye showing 2⅜@2¾ bulge; December, 92¾. The outcome in provisions varied from 2 cents decline to 12 cents gain.

Du Pont Votes $2 on Common For Year-End

Compares With $1.60 Per Share in 2 Preceding Quarters.

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 16.—Directors of E. I. du Pont De Nemours & Co. today declared a year-end dividend of $2 a share on the common stock. In the preceding two quarters payments of 90 cents quarterly and 70 cents extra were made. The payment will give $22,131,524 to more than 50,000 stockholders.

For the first quarter of this year only the 90-cent quarterly dividend was paid.

The year-end payment was seen as reflecting recent increased disbursements by General Motors Corporation, of which du Pont owns 10,000,000 shares, or about 9-10th of a share for each share of its own stock outstanding. On November 9 General Motors declared a dividend of $1.50 a short while in the preceding two quarters only 75 cents a share had been paid. The du Pont dividend is payable December 15 to stock of record November 25.

Beech-Nut Extra and Special.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Beech-Nut Packing Co., with principal plant at Canajoharie, N. Y., announced a special dividend of $1, an extra dividend of 25 cents and a quarterly dividend of $1 on the common stock. The dividends call for the distribution of approximately $984,000 among the holders of the 47,524 outstanding shares.

The special disbursement is payable December 15 to stock of record November 12. On October 1 the company paid an extra of 50 cents and a quarterly of 75 cents.

Skelly Oil Pays Arrears.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Directors of Skelly Oil Co. today declared a dividend of $25.50 a share on the 6 per cent preferred stock in full payment of all accumulated arrears. Payment will be made December 21 to stockholders of record December 1. The directors also declared a regular dividend on the preferred of $1.50 a share for the quarter ended January 31, 1937, payable February 1 to holders of record January 5.

Blow-Knox Increase.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 16 (AP).—Directors of the Blaw-Knox Co. declared a dividend of 35 cents per share today payable December 18 to stockholders of record November 27. Of three previous dividends declare this year, two were for 10 cents and one for 15 cents.

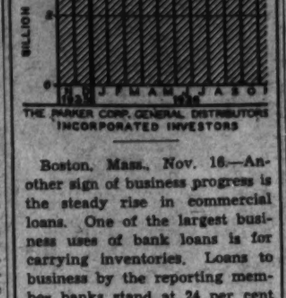
Business Loans Rise 24% Over Year Ago



Boston, Mass., Nov. 16.—Another sign of business progress is the steady rise in commercial loans. One of the largest business uses of bank loans is for carrying inventories. Loans to business by the reporting member banks stand at 24 per cent over a year ago.

More Wage Raises By Textile Mills

Portland, Me., Nov. 16 (AP).—Seven Maine cotton textile mills, including the Pepperell Manufacturing Co. in Biddeford, announced today wage increases affecting nearly 10,000 workers would become effective November 30. In most cases a 10 per cent boost was announced. The increase would raise employes' purchasing power approximately $900,000 during the next year if continued in effect.

Previously 11 other Maine mills, ten of them woolen textile manufacturing concerns, had announced a similar wage lift benefiting about 3,500 workers.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 16 (AP).—Officials of the Pequot Mills announced today a wage increase of 10 per cent for all employes effective November 23. Approximately 2,200 are employed at the mill here and the bleachery in Peabody.

Pay Increases by I. B. M.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—International Business Machines Corporation has increased the wages of hourly employes of the company 5 cents an hour, effective today. Thomas J. Watson, president, said that 3,000 employes in the Endicott, N. Y.; Rochester, N. Y., and Washington, D. C., factories would be benefited, adding $300,000 a year to pay rolls.

Rail Rate Cuts Boost Revenue Of B. & O. 18%

President Willard Reports $2,000,000 Net Income Likely for 1936.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 16.—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, told stockholders of the company today that lowered passenger fares had increased passenger revenues of the road by 18 per cent.

He predicted in his report at the annual stockholders meeting, that the railroad would show a net income of abot $2,000,000 for 1936. The dividend declared last week by the Western Maryland Railroad, whose stock is partially owned by the B. & O., may increase this income, he said. For 1935, he added, the company had a net deficit of $3,180,000.

The reduction in fares, he went on, raised passenger revenues by 18 per cent. The number of passengers increased by 61 per cent and the mileage traveled by trains, he said, the revenue per passenger per number of miles was up about 10.5 per cent.

Willard said that the company had ordered two 3,600-horsepower Diesel locomotives which would be used in the regular passenger service between Washington and Chicago.

"If these engines meet the service guarantee of the builders it may make possible substantial reductions in our passenger schedules between these two cities, and at the same time without exceeding our present speed limits. The saving in time which I have referred to will result from the fact that the Diesel locomotive will run through the entire distance without being detached from the train and without the necessity of stopping for fuel or water. It will also accelerate more rapidly than the steam engine and will be able to maintain a more uniform rate of speed."

The new Federal railroad retirement plan, Willard said, raises several questions in connection with the company's long-standing private pension plan. He said that 3,000 persons are now being cared for under the private plan and that the Federal scheme, calling for equal contributions from employer and employe, makes no provision for continuing the care of those now on pensions. He added that he hoped Congress could amend the Federal law to provide at least part of the care for those now receiving pensions.

Which is to say his cigarette bill is over $40 a year. He is so intensely discriminating that he never dreams of ordering "a package of cigarettes." He orders only by brand.
Yet he will go into a shop and say, "I want a pair of shoes."
Surely shoes are as vital in his life as cigarettes. He could get fine shoe value, long wear and smartness by asking for "Johnston & Murphy shoes." And if he did, and he was a man of average means, his yearly shoe bill would be far less than he pays for cigarettes.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Following liberal offerings of the dollar in the London market, the pound sterling, the French franc and the Netherlands guilder advanced against the American unit in foreign exchange dealings yesterday.

In New York the pound advanced 1-16 to $4.89⅞, and the franc was up .00¼ of a cent to 4.65½ cents. Guilders were quoted at 54.05 cents, a gain of .02 of a cent.

Swiss francs and the Belgian belga failed to share in the advance and both were lower, the former down .02 of a cent at 23.00 cents and the latter .01½ of a cent off at 18.91 cents. The Canadian dollar was unchanged at 100.12½ cents.

Sales of the dollar in London forced that unit ¼ lower to close at 4.89 to the pound, which was unchanged from Saturday's New York closing rate. In Paris the dollar finished at the equivalent of 4.681 cents to the franc, compared with the New York Saturday rate of 4.649 cents.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Nov. 16 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—The Boston Wool Market was slow on Ohio and similar fleeces, but quotations were very firm and mostly above the maximum prices realized last week.

Several houses had sold ahead on Ohio fleeces and were offering no further quantities until they had caught up on grading. Average Missouri fleeces in country packed lots containing ¾ and ⅞ blood grades with combing and clothing length staple together were sold at 43 cents in the grease delivered East.

Natural Light Is Great Asset For Basements

Proper Ventilation Adds to Liability of Room for Work or Play.

Basements, particularly in crowded cities, must be used for many activities which in the country or suburbs could be carried on above the ground. Usually the basement receives very little natural light—the windows are small and improperly located. Since this space must be used, it should be provided with as much light as possible and, in addition, proper cross ventilation.

The housekeeper usually spends many hours in the laundry, which in most urban residences is located in the basement. She must use electric light, and the room is not a pleasant workshop. A game room may be used by adults more often at night than in the daytime, but it should have good ventilation. If this room is used by children as a playroom, every attempt should be made to provide light and ventilation. Even storage spaces should have some natural light and air, for, if the basement has any dampness, leather goods, clothing, etc., will mildew.

It is usually a difficult problem to locate basement windows so that they will not interfere with the external design of the house. When the addition or enlargement of a basement window above the surface of the ground is not desirable, an area may be excavated and the window located below the level of the surrounding ground. Concrete walls are required to hold the earth from sliding into the excavated space, and a concrete floor, properly drained. Planting may be placed along the outer edge to hide some of the space, but care must be taken not to use planting with heavy foliage, which will cut off the light and air.

Morgan Returns Today.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—John Pierpont Morgan will arrive here early tomorrow on the storm-battered liner Queen Mary in what his close associates describe as the best health he has enjoyed in several months. Members of the family have been informed that he has fully recovered from the attack of neuritis and partial paralysis which he suffered June 30.

Rhodes Elected Head Of Motor Vehicle Unit

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—John Q. Rhodes, jr., difector of Virginia's division of motor vehicles, was elected president of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, Saturday, at a meeting of the organization in Hot Springs, Ark.

Friends of the Virginian, whose home is at Louisa, said they believed his elevation from the vice presidency to the presidency was a tribute to the safety work which he has done in this State.

Church Reverses Stand; Pastor to Accept Call

Winchester, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—The Rev. E. B. McGukin has obtained from his Presbyterian congregation here its permission to accept a call to the First Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, Tenn.

The church voted yesterday to concur with the minister tomorrow in a request for a special meeting of the Winchester Presbytery to dissolve his pastoral relations at Winchester. The call was the second given McGukin by the Knoxville Presbyterians. At the request of his church here the Winchester Presbytery refused to release him. The pastor recently declined a call to Charleston, W. Va.

Francis E. Scott, Attorney, Dies Of Heart Attack

HOLC Lawyer, Apparently in Good Health, Stricken as He Goes to Work.

Apparently stricken with a heart attack as he reported for work at the HOLC Building, First and Indiana avenue northwest yesterday, Francis Edward Scott, an attorney, collapsed in the arms of fellow workers and was pronounced dead on arrival at Providence Hospital.

Scott, according to relatives, appeared in good helath when he left home, 2016 Connecticut avenue northwest, shortly after 8 a. m.

He was a native of Emory, Va., and had lived here for more than 15 years. He was at one time an attorney in the Shipping Board and specialized in shipping claims.

For a number of years, Scott conducted a private law practice with offices in the Munsey Building. He had been with the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for two years.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. C. A. Scott, and three brothers and one sister, all of Emory.

Under tentative plans, funeral services and burial will be in Emory. Scott was not married and lived with friends.
